WHY NO AUDIT?

No Way to Run County, Says Grand Jury

By GEORGE LAINE
Staff Writer

The county is unable to find an auditor willing to sign his name to a comprehensive evaluation of departmental finances, the retiring chairman of the Grand Jury has acknowleged.

Joseph F. Bishop, former president of Walker's Department Store and a longtime Long Beach civic leader, said he had been stunned to learn that no comprehensive audit of county finances has ever been rendered.

"I say — and the Grand Jury report reflected this — that if you wouldn't run a business without an audited balance sheet, you shouldn't run government without it either."

Bishop made it clear he was not accusing the county of wrongdoing. In fact, spot audits of 15 of the county's more than 50 departments turned up only a few facets that prompted criticism.

Even then, Bishop said, the Grand Jury found department heads and their employes eager to remedy situations which the jurors deemed in need of reform.

Bishop said most heads of county departments are "pretty capable people, pretty responsible people."

"You can think one thing and you can hope one thing, but if you can get some verification — an outside auditor who will say the county's figures are correct according to standard auditing practices — then I think that's a whole lot more acceptable.

"Unless you get that from the outside auditor, you're only thinking or hoping everything is all right," Bishop said.

Bishop pointed out that reasons given by the county for not conducting comprehensive auditing in the past are not valid.

"The reason most often given has been that the county's own internal audit department isn't big enough to audit all departments, and that the county is just too big to have a complete audit," Bishop said.

"How would General Motors' stockholders feel if that corporation said it was too big for an audit?" he asked.

"Well, the county's taxpayers are really stockholders in the county's business. And this is a nearly $2 billion per year business."

Bishop said Chief Administrative Officer Lindon

Israeli Blast Kills 18

Ammunition Truck Blows Up on Dock; Arabs Claim Credit

United Press International

An Israeli Army truck loaded with ammunition exploded Saturday in the port city of Elath, killing 18 persons and injuring 42 others.

Two Palestinian guerrilla organizations later claimed credit for sabotaging the truck, each giving a different version of how it was done.

An Israeli military spokesman said the explosion appeared to have been an accident.

THE TRUCK exploded while on the docks at Elath, Israel's key military port on the Gulf of Aqaba.

"There were bodies strewn over 100 square yards," said Yitzhak Noam, a resident who rushed to the dock when he heard the blast.

"It was the most horrifying thing I have ever seen."

In Amman, both the Palestine Armed Struggle Command and the Popular Democratic Front claimed credit in separate announcements for sabotage of the truck.

THE COMMAND said its guerrillas had placed a bomb on the edge of the dock holding the truck. The Front said its followers had placed an explosive charge in the truck itself.

In the air war, Egyptian planes struck at Israeli positions along the Suez Canal Saturday, after bombing the occupied town of El Arish, on the Mediterranean, in their closest raid to Israel in 22 years.

EGYPT SAID its bombers, supported by jet fighters, bombarded Israeli positions in three raids at opposite ends of the Sinai Peninsula.

An Egyptian spokesman said the targets were El Arish, El Shatt, on the northern outskirts of Suez city, and Kabrit, 25 miles south of Ismailia.

Watchem Grow

Q. I have noticed that many newspapers around the country now carry columns similar to ACTION LINE. Can you tell me who started the ACTION LINE columns? E.B., Long Beach.

A. The first ACTION LINE-type column was Watchem, started in the Houston (Texas) Chronicle in 1961 by William Stevens, the paper's editor at the time. "The column just came out of a feeling I had whenever I walked down the streets of Houston that every other person in the city hadn't been there 10 years before," said Stevens, now vice president of the Chicago Daily News. "If someone wanted to get his sewer fixed, he just didn't know where to go. And I felt the newspaper should be useful to its readers."

Hard Travelin' Blues

Q. I recently bought a Buick station wagon from a car dealer in Lakewood. The odometer showed about 24,000 miles on the car. I finally located the original owner and he said he had sold the vehicle to a dealer in Oxnard with an odometer reading of 63,000 miles and he signed an affidavit to that effect. After finding this out, I asked the Lakewood dealer to take the car back, but he refused. What can I do now? F.H., Lakewood.

A. Turning back an odometer was made a criminal offense during last year's state legislative session, according to Herbert Elkins of the consumer fraud division, California attorney general's office in Los Angeles. Elkins said his office was very interested in your problem, and asked that ACTION LINE send him the particulars of the case, as well as the affidavit from the original owner. He said his office will investigate the matter, and could possibly bring criminal charges against the guilty party. Elkins also pointed out that under California civil code, either of the two parties involved may void a contract when there has been a

END OF 7-HOUR ORDEAL FOR LITTLE JOHN

Rescuers Dig Out Tot Entombed in Mudhole

MIAMI (UPI) — Rescue workers tunneled frantically through the slime of a tomato field Saturday night to rescue a two-year-old boy trapped in a narrow irrigation shaft.

The child, sobbing hysterically and covered with mud, had hung suspended over deep water in the shaft for nearly seven hours.

The boy, John Reynolds III, had wandered away from his parents while they were picking tomatoes in the field.

"We suddenly noticed him gone," said his father, a Miami stockbroker. "Then my wife heard a moaning sound and saw he was stuck down the hole. We ran to get help."

MORE THAN 50 volunteers frantically began tunneling a parallel passage through the soft muck into the shaft.

At 9 p.m., Sheriff's Deputy Bill Team and Fred Knecht, a construction worker, broke through into the shaft, planted supports between the child and the water, and lifted him to freedom.

"THANK GOD," sobbed Mrs. Reynolds. "Oh, thank God."

The child was rushed to a hospital, where a nurse said later he was in "satisfactory" condition.

"He's in much better shape than we thought he'd be," she said. "He'll be held overnight for observation. We're checking the possibility he may have some fractures."

A DOCTOR who had been called to the scene shortly after the rescue operation began, and who accompanied the boy to the hospital, said John seemed to be suffering from exposure.

Praising the volunteers, the boy's father said: "All these people are great, really super."

Reynolds said he, his

40 PER CENT CUT?

Quick Peek at Reagan's Tax Proposal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan gave a quick peek show of his new tax plan Saturday, promising that it would cut property taxes by 40 per cent for those living in "low-cost housing."

Families owning houses, would see their taxes trimmed by at least 20 to 25 per cent, he said.

The governor revealed the plan at a 1970 campaign kickoff rally for Republican precinct workers. Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., also spoke.

Reagan did not elaborate on how the cuts would be financed, but did say it would deal with a "tax shift," rather than tax reform.

Reagan in recent months has said it has become feasible to use state sales and personal income taxes to help finance programs now almost mainly supported by property tax revenue.

The governor devoted the rest of his speech to the coming campaign.

HE SAID he felt this would be the year the Republicans regained control of the State Assembly.

"For the first time, we really have our chance," he said.

He said his campaign for reelection will probably deal heavily with "straightening the record" of his administration as his opponents see it.

"But I hate to think that's all there's going to be," Reagan added.

He said Democratic challengers may claim that he hasn't fulfilled a 1966 "campaign promise" to solve the California crime problem.

"I don't recall making any promise like that," Reagan said. "But we did promise to do our best to reverse the permissive attitude in our society and to give law enforcement the tools it needs."

State Republican leaders, Reagan said, can take credit for "the most comprehensive anticrime legislation "in history passed last year. He didn't identify the bills.

Assembly Democratic Leader Jesse Unruh of Inglewood has said he will run against Reagan. Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty said he might run.

Families Flee From Flooding

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Dozens of families left their homes Saturday near the flooding Sacramento River as a new Pacific storm capped 16 days of heavy winds and rain in Northern California.

Sections of major highways were closed, small bridges washed out and trees toppled.

Flood control officials said the serious problems appeared to be over as the storm abated. Flood levels reached the highest points since 1940, they said.

IN BUTTE County, north of Sacramento and northeast of San Francisco, people clambered onto house roofs after a levee gave way in five places, allowing the Sacramento River to inundate farmland.

The latest storm struck the San Francisco Bay area Friday night and spread inland with wind gusts up to 125 miles an hour.

At one inland point officials measured nearly five inches of rain in 24 hours. Mudslides closed part of U.S. 101, a major inland highway. In Auburn, northeast of Sacramento, rain and wind collapsed an old, two-story wooden building.

TYPHOID

First Details About Plague Aboard Ship

By Robert C. McConachie

VANCOUVER (UPI) — When the British luxury liner slipped out of London Dec. 16 with its pleasure-bound passengers, it also carried a potential killer — typhoid.

From London to California to Vancouver, the Oronsay left a trail of victims in its wake. The disease has now trapped the liner, 900 passengers and 600 crewmen in Vancouver Harbor.

Capt. John Wacher was unaware he was in trouble until the Oronsay slid past the Oregon coast, only 24 hours from Vancouver.

Then the radio message came from the U.S. Public Health Service.

The six crewmen he left behind at hospitals in Los Angeles and San Francisco didn't have the flu as he thought.

They had typhoid fever.

A scourge in less scientific times, typhoid has been mostly tamed by modern medicine and better hygiene. But it is still highly infectious, a serious disease; and linked with one of nature's crueler jokes on man — the typhoid carrier.

Usually ignorant of what they are, unaffected by the disease themselves, the carriers harbor it within themselves and pass it on to others.

And as the number of infections among the ship's passengers and crew rose inexorably, medical detectives closed in on the Oronsay.

There was, they were sure, a carrier aboard.

Today marks 11 days since the Oronsay sailed into Vancouver, and was shoved back out to anchor in the harbor the next day, flying the yellow flag of

3 Killed as Leaking Gas Line Explodes

HOUMA, La. (UPI) — A leaking gas line exploded "like an earthquake" in a downtown manhole Saturday, killing three persons and demolishing half a city block.

An area with the radius of 12 blocks was evacuated in the downtown section of the city of 30,000. Fifty National Guardsmen were called out to help with the evacuation.

Police cordoned off most of the downtown area shortly after the 4:30 p.m. explosion, because there was still a gas leak near the area of the explosion.

"OUR BIG problem is keeping people away from there," a policeman said. "There is a leak and we want to keep all of them out."

The area would be closed off at least until Sunday and possibly longer, police said.

Casualties and injuries were kept down because during the late afternoon on Saturday many of the shops and offices were closed.

A spokesman at Terrebonne General Hospital said at least 18 persons were treated for injuries but none of them was in critical condition.

"I HEARD something rumbling and the building started shaking like an earthquake," said Mrs. B. B. Veridge, owner of a shoe store on the same block as the explosion.

"I got up to try to go downstairs, and at that time the thing started blowing up and everything started falling around me."

She managed to get out of the building and was not hurt.

The blast occurred in a manhole in front of a jewelry store. A city employe working on the leak was killed.

THE VICTIMS were Howard Arceneaux, 61, the city employe; Loren Bourg Sr., a fireman, and an unidentified man.

Police and fire units from nearby Thibodaux, Raceland and other communities rushed to the city. Houma is located about 42 miles southwest of New Orleans.

The evacuation included all the guests and personnel of a hotel located across the courthouse square from the blast site.

A women's clothing shop, a loan office, another jewelry store and the offices of state. Rep. Gerald Lofaso were destroyed.

Telephone and electric lines were knocked out for a four-block area.

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — A mother and her three young sons burned to death Saturday when a fire swept through their house trailer. The victims were identified as Mrs. Bernice Chaney, 23, and sons Wayne 3, Sherman 1, and Eugene, 4 weeks. The father was at work.

STUNTMAN, ANGELS TANGLE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two Hell's Angels were treated for head cuts after a brawl at the Cow Palace that erupted after motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel leaped his bike over 11 cars parked side by side.

An announcer inadvertently triggered the incident when he told the crowd Friday night that if Knievel succeeded, "this will set the Hell's Angels back 20 years."

As Knievel made his run, police Sgt. Ralph Warren said, someone threw something at him, but he made the jump.

Then he turned around, leaped from his stillmoving bike, and tangled with one of the Angels. Other Angels attacked him, and some of the 6,000 spectators ran from the stands to mix it with the Angels.

Wooden marker stakes were yanked from the ground and used as clubs, said Warren.

The brawl lasted 15 minutes. No arrests were made, but two Angels from San Jose — Joseph Sanchex, 28, and Richard Smith, 25 — were treated at Mary's Help Hospital and released.

Nixon Honors Conductor Ormandy

Combined News Services

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (UPI) — President Nixon attended a command performance of the Philadelphia Orchestra Saturday night to present its conductor, Eugene Ormandy, with the Medal of Freedom award.

The trip from Washington to Philadelphia also gave the President a chance to view first-hand the results of federal assistance making possible the high-speed Washington to New York Penn Central Metroliner which took him on his first train ride since becoming President.

The visit was marred only briefly, by peace pickets chanting, "peace now, peace now," as the presidential party rode in a motorcade one block from the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel to the Academy of Music. The smiling President ignored the pickets.

President and Mrs. Nixon listened to the concert marking the 113th anniversary of the Academy of Music in a box overlooking the orchestra in the U-shaped, ancient music hall.

Earlier Saturday, Nixon postponed his scheduled Monday news conference until later in the week. This will give him an opportunity to discuss his anticipated veto of the controversial health and education appropriations bill. Press secretary Ronald Zeigler said the news conference will be rescheduled Thursday or Friday.

CAKE'S ON

A bit of icing was spread Saturday on the mystery of whether and when when heart transplant pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard will marry 19-year-old Johannesburg socialite Barbara Zoellner.

A Johannesburg newspaper report quoted local society baker Albert Kuster as saying the prospective bride's mother had ordered a wedding cake from him worth several hundred dollars. He said it would have a heart motif. Kuster also said he would finish the cake about Feb. 10.

DESPAIR

A superior court clerk, despairing of the world "the way it is today," shot three of his children Saturday, killing one, before his wife wrestled the gun from him, San Francisco police said.

Michael Condon, 56, was held for investigation of murder and attempted murder in the slaying of Melinda Condon, 18, and wounding of Michael Jr., 17, and Lawrence, 13.

The two boys were in serious conditon.

Condon, widely known among city officials both at City Hall and the Hall of Justice, was taken to City Prison. Police quoted him as saying:

"I'm afraid I messed it up."

BIG BUYER

Folk-singing millionaire Michael J. Brody Jr. flew home abruptly Saturday after a wild weekend in Hawaii, declaring he would arrange a Vietnam cease-fire by buying off the North Vietnamese with $10 billion in aid.

The long-haired, 21-year-old oleomargarine heir left unfilled a second singing appearance scheduled Saturday night.

Friday, he had thrown his $300 concert fee from the stage to the startled audience, assured a group of servicemen he was "bringing you home," and estimated he had given away "about 5 mil," most of it other people's money.

Brody and his wife Renee flew on Pan American Airways flight 820 to Los Angeles after asking Bud Kaye, a reporter with the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, to drive them to the airport.

Brody said they would change to American Airlines — flying "student standby" — and go on to his New York home.

Brody's scheduled appearances in Honolulu were in connection with scheduled concerts by the Grateful Dead singing group.

EXILE

Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu has taken his wife and children and begun a silent exile in the jungle flower and crocodile country of the Ivory Coast's interior, reliable sources believe.

These sources said Saturday the Biafran leader probably is in Yamoshkuo, a city about 250 miles north of Abidjan, near the city of Bouake.

The town is the home of President Felix Houphouet-Boigny and has a Benedictine monastery. It is well policed and has good communications.

But the sources said Ojukwu pledged he would make no statements and would refrain from any political activity in exchange for political asylum. Houphouet underscored this Friday when he announced that Ojukwu was in the Ivory Coast.

BITTER

Four Californians whose husbands were shot down during the air war against North Vietnam arrived in Saigon Saturday with bitter words for Communist officials who have refused to say whether the men are alive or dead.

The pilots are listed by the Pentagon as missing in action, leaving open the possibility they may have been captured and imprisoned by the North Vietnamese.

The women who arrived Saturday are Mrs. Roosevelt Hestle, 37, of Los Angeles, Mrs. Stephen Hanson, 30, of El Toro, Mrs. Arthur Mearns, 37, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. John Hardy, 27, of Los Angeles.

They have traveled halfway around the world in quest of information. They have been rebuffed at every turn — in Paris, Moscow, Cairo, Bangkok, and Vientiane, the capital of Laos, only 60 minutes flying time from Hanoi.

FOUND

Schoolgirl Mary Annette Washington, found in a Honolulu Army warehouse suffering from malnutrition, lay in a hospital Saturday, too ill to tell the story of her 53-day disappearance.

The 13-year-old daughter of an Army warrant officer vanished without a trace after leaving her Schofield Barracks home for school Dec. 2. She was found Friday after two soldiers heard a noise in an unused portion of a base warehouse.

She was rushed to Tripler Army Medical Center, where a spokesman said she was "very seriously ill" from severe malnutrition and dehydration.

The girl's parents both left the islands after an extensive search for their daughter failed.

Her father, W. O. Alexander Washington, stationed in Vietnam, was expected to arrive in Hawaii today. Mrs. Washington, who returned to Florida to be with her family, was expected to arrive in Honolulu Monday.

NOMINEE

The Alfalfa Club gave its mock 1970 presidential nomination Saturday night to former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

This was the 57th annual Washington, D.C., banquet of the Alfalfa Club, a dining and social organization whose members include government officials, businessmen and members of the armed forces. It nominates yearly what it acknowledges is a dubious presidential candidate.

UNSIGHTED

Two of the Soviet Union's top leaders, Leonid I. Brezhnev and Nikolai V. Podgorny have been away from Moscow on vacation for more than one month, East European sources said Saturday.

The Moscow sources said Brezhnev, the party general secretary, and Podgorny, the president of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) left in mid-December for a vacation retreat. Neither man has been seen in public since Dec. 16.

FOR SALE

The 23-room San Francisco residence of Episcopal Bishop C. Kilmer Myers has been for sale for months because the bishop thinks it's too big and expensive, says Canon Howard Freeman of San Francisco' Grace Cathedral.

"Bishop Myers has spent more than a year urging the Diocesan Corporation to get rid of the place and let him move into something more convenient for his family," said Freeman.

AS MOM DOZES

Gorilla Infant Taken

CINCINNATI (AP) — A 2-day-old gorilla was taken without incident from its mother Saturday at the Cincinnati Zoo and then was placed in an incubator.

"All went well," a zoo official said after the mother, Mahari, was tranquilized with a dart and zoo Director Ed Maruska grabbed the baby, a male.

"Earlier, we were worried about what would happen when Mahari would get drowsy."

THE MOTHER jerked and then slowly became drowsy. She did not drop the baby which she had been cradling since birth Friday morning. The mother was in good condition and "the baby was screaming its head off," the official said.

Zoo personnel decided to take the baby since the mother had not nursed it. It was immediately placed in an incubator and then was taken to Good Samaritan Hospital's intensive care animal laboratory where it was transferred to another incubator. Maruska said that it will be fed with a "simple formula like any kid."

All-Night Gas Stations Go on 'War Footing' to Beat Armed Raiders

By MIKE KRUGLAK
Staff Writer

Some carry guns, others surround themselves with elaborate electronic security devices, and still others turn to concrete "fortressess" for protection.

They are not policemen nor GIs on patrol in enemy territory, but the men who work what has been dubbed the "Vietnam" shift, the late shift in the Southland's all-night gas stations.

THE INCREASING NUMBER of service station stickups has led many operators of 24-hour stations to close at night. Others arm themselves, or set up silent warning devices, or refuse to handle cash after a certain hour.

Nationally, there were 9,651 armed robberies of gas stations in 1968, a 28.7 per cent increase over 1967. The trend since 1960 has been ever upward.

In Long Beach, a check of a dozen stations that have been robbed in the past year revealed that several now close before 10 p.m.

"WE ENCOURAGE OUR OPERATORS to close certain stations during the hazard hours of 10 to 6, "said a spokesman for Union Oil Co.

Those Union stations that remain open at night keep two men on duty. In Whittier, Union is experimenting with a station that accepts only credit cards at night.

Unlike some operators who have had the most trouble in low-income neighborhoods, Union finds that most of its robberies take place at stations near freeways.

INCREASINGLY POPULAR among all-night stations are electronic warning devices.

Gulf Oil, for example, has turned to a pocket device the size of a pack of cigarettes.

It triggers a silent alarm to notify police of a robbery. The company also uses closed-circuit television in several Southland stations with histories of repeated robberies.

Another pocket device now in use sets off a tape that alerts an answering service, which in turn notifies police.

ALL OF THE MAJOR OIL companies discourage the carrying of guns by their employes.

"No employe may carry a gun; there's too much danger of physical harm," says Gulf.

"We don't want them to carry guns; it's very easy for retaliation where they'd get hurt," said a Chevron spokesman.

"Anything can happen when you have two amateurs with guns facing each other," said a Phillips spokesman.

Individual station owners and attendants often follow a different policy.

"ALL MY MEN ARE ARMED," said the manager of a Compton station. "I tell them to shoot and ask questions later."

Don Harrison, a Los Angeles operator, said: "We had a robbery about eight months ago in which my attendant was beaten over the head.

"Now our man carries a gun on his hip. I told him that if anyone tried to touch the cashbox, lay him out. We haven't had any robberies since the man started wearing a gun."

"We keep an automatic pistol near the cash register," said attendant Mark Zahn of the twice-robbed Thirfty Gas on 7th Street in Long Beach.

We were unable to unearth any guard dogs at local stations, but they tried one in Washington, D.C.

"We had a guy held up three times and so he got a dog, Washington operator Charles Binsted said. "The fourth time they stole the dog."

WHAT KIND OF PEOPLE robs service stations?

"At 2 p.m. all the weirdos come out of the bar," said Zahn.

"They're on dope, half of them," said Dusty Rhoades, an attendant at one of the 13 local Parks Texaco stations.

"They don't know what they're doing. They can't even walk, some of them. You should see their eyes."

Added Rhoades: "When you got a gun, you're looking for trouble. When you've got a gun, you've got hotheads."

The 13 Parks stations have been robbed about 25 times in the last year.

ONE WAY TO FOIL ROBBERIES is to keep little or no cash on hand.

Standard Oil of California has put exact-change systems into effect in San Diego County, and money is dropped into one-way slots in tamperproof safes imbedded in concrete in the floor of the office.

The program is so successful it may be expanded to the Long Beach-Los Angeles area, a company spokesman said.

Many local stations keep a minimum account of cash on hand and use the drop safe for the excess.

A TEXACO SPOKESMAN had another solution to the problem: "It may sound corny, but it's the old bit about cultivating the cop on the beat."

Thrifty's Zahn agrees; "We called the police one night and we had six cars here in two or three minutes."

AT SAN CLEMENTE

Couple See Slide Peril, Quit Home

A San Clemente couple moved out of their hillside home Saturday after a landslide threatened the backyard of their home 2½ miles north of the Summer White House.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Seets of 717 Avenida Colombo, said they feared the slide would endanger their $38,000 residence.

The slide dropped about 12,000 cubic yards of dirt into a small canyon back of the Seets' home, police said.

Although engineers said the Seets residence was not itself in danger, Mrs. Seets was uneasy for the safety of her two small children, and she insisted on leaving.

None of the other 14 houses on the short cul-de-sac street appeared to be threatened.

City engineers said the terrain behind the Seets' home "is virtually perpendicular," and that there appeared to be no way to shore up the crumbling hillside.

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Rev. Ralph Abernathy, Negro civil rights leader and head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, arrived in Sweden with his wife Saturday to give a series of speeches and meet with Swedish government officials.

FLASHER ALSO OUT

Planners Veto Rotating Signs

Three advertising signs have been turned down by the Long Beach Planning Commission — two because they rotated and one because it had flashing lights.

Two of the signs, however, will be granted approval if they eliminate the objections.

Commissioners voted 5-to-1 Thursday to deny the application of General Neon Sign Co. for a 33.5-foot-tall rotating sign for a new restaurant under construction at 301 W. Broadway.

PLANNING Director Ernest Mayer Jr. recommended denial of the request, pointing out the restaurant is adjacent to the future Civic Center site, and is surrounded by "institutional" buildings, such as a church, the Veterans Memorial Building and the Red Cross headquarters.

Mayer said the sign is twice as high as the restaurant itself, has no competing signs for a block in all directions and is out of keeping with the "showcase" theme of the future Civic Center.

Commissioner Donald W. Phillips, who voted against denial, said the 33.5-foot sign is less than the 45-foot maximum permitted by city ordinance.

COMMISSIONER William A. Lockett said, however, he felt it was "way out of proportion" to the restaurant, and Commissioner Arnold B. Berg said he objected both to the height and the rotation.

The other proposed rotating sign was sought by the House of Pies, 4105 Atlantic Ave. Mayer recommended denial on the basis of the rotating sign, but said it was satisfactory otherwise.

Commissioners voted to approve the application, if the rotation is eliminated.

The final application, by Joseph A. Papa, covered an already erected flashing sign at a small residence-cafe at 4316½ E. Fourth St. Mayer said adjacent development is primarily residential, and he recommended approval of the sign, but the flashing lights eliminated.

Commissioners concurred in his recommendation.

HOSPITAL PLANS $2.5 MILLION WING

From Our L.A. Bureau

San Pedro Community Hospital is preparing to start construction soon of a $2.5 million, four-story wing designed to increase capacity from 104 beds to 243.

The county engineer issued the required building permit Monday.

The project also involves some changes in the building now in use.

San Pedro Community Hospital is privately owned. The address is 1300 W. Sixth St.

3 Safety Projects Scheduled for Area

Three Long Beach area highway safety projects were announced by the California Highway Commission Saturday.

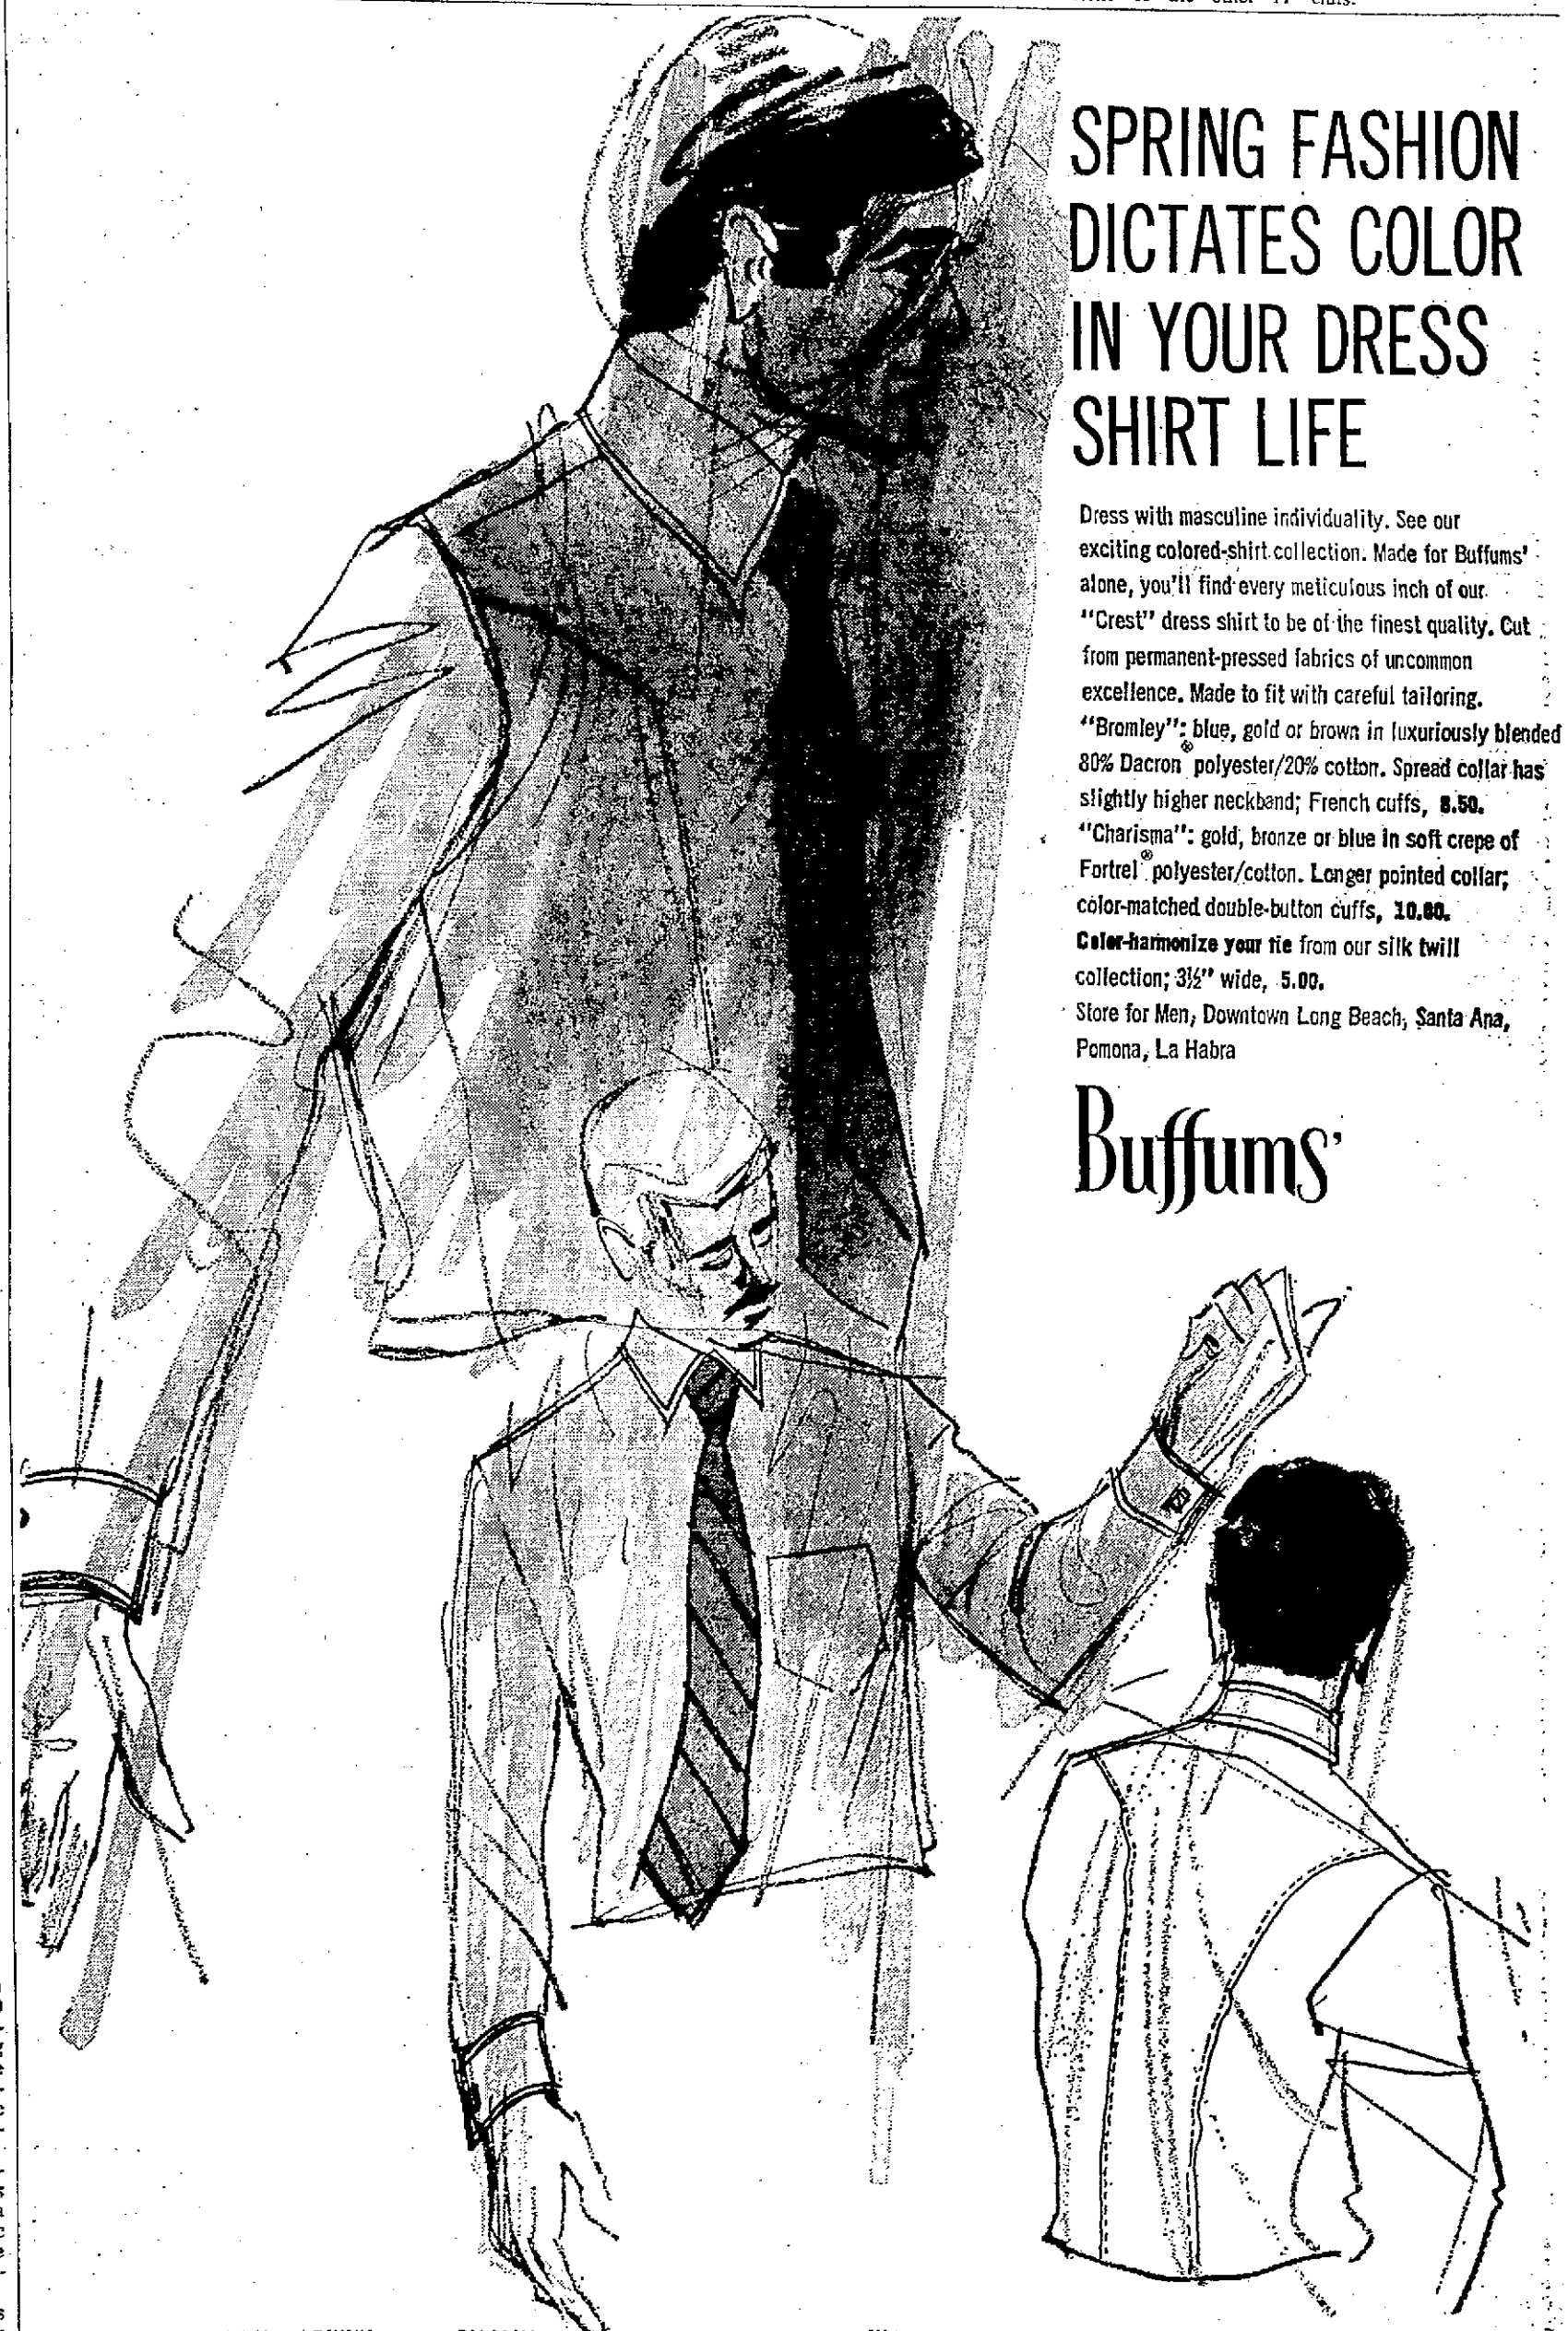

Bidding will begin soon on an estimated $26,000 project to install automatic gates and warning lights across the Santa Fe Railroad tracks at Goodrich Avenue and Pacific Coast Highway, Wilmington.

A similar project, estimated to cost $32,000, is scheduled for the area near the Southern Pacific tracks at Euclid Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Garden Grove.

The third project calls for drainage work on the Long Beach Freeway near Del Amo Boulevard.

Raid Snares 113

HOUSTON (UPI) — Police conducted one of the largest narcotics raids in Texas in history early Saturday, arresting 113 persons and confiscating drugs. A crew of 75 policemen made the arrests in pool halls, bars, private residences and houses of prostitution.

WHY NO AUDIT?

No Way to Run County, Says Grand Jury

By GEORGE LAINE
Staff Writer

The county is unable to find an auditor willing to sign his name to a comprehensive evaluation of departmental finances, the retiring chairman of the Grand Jury has acknowledged.

Joseph F. Bishop, former president of Walker's Department Store and a longtime Long Beach civic leader, said he had been stunned to learn that no comprehensive audit of county finances has ever been rendered.

"I say — and the Grand Jury report reflected this — that if you wouldn't run a business without an audited balance sheet, you shouldn't run government without it either."

Bishop made it clear he was not accusing the county of wrongdoing. In fact, spot audits of 15 of the county's more than 50 departments turned up only a few facets that prompted criticism.

Even then, Bishop said, the Grand Jury found department heads and their employes eager to remedy situations which the jurors deemed in need of reform.

Bishop said most heads of county departments are "pretty capable people, pretty responsible people."

"You can think one thing and you can hope one thing, but if you can get some verification — an outside auditor who will say the county's figures are correct according to standard auditing practices — then I think that's a whole lot more acceptable.

"Unless you get that from the outside auditor, you're only thinking or hoping everything is all right," Bishop said.

Bishop pointed out that reasons given by the county for not conducting comprehensive auditing in the past are not valid.

"The reason most often given has been that the county's own internal audit department isn't big enough to audit all departments, and that the county is just too big to have a complete audit," Bishop said.

"How would General Motors' stockholders feel if that corporation said it was too big for an audit?" he asked.

"Well, the county's taxpayers are really stockholders in the county's business. And this is a nearly $2 billion per year business."

Bishop said Chief Administrative Officer Lindon

Israeli Blast Kills 18

Ammunition Truck Blows Up on Dock; Arabs Claim Credit

United Press International

An Israeli Army truck loaded with ammunition exploded Saturday in the port city of Elath, killing 18 persons and injuring 42 others.

Two Palestinian guerrilla organizations later claimed credit for sabotaging the truck, each giving a different version of how it was done.

An Israeli military spokesman said the explosion appeared to have been an accident.

THE TRUCK exploded while on the docks at Elath, Israel's key military port on the Gulf of Aqaba.

"There were bodies strewn over 100 square yards," said Yitzhak Noam, a resident who rushed to the dock when he heard the blast.

"It was the most horrifying thing I have ever seen."

In Amman, both the Palestine Armed Struggle Command and the Popular Democratic Front claimed credit in separate announcements for sabotage of the truck.

THE COMMAND said its guerrillas had placed a bomb on the edge of the dock holding the truck. The Front said its followers had placed an explosive charge in the truck itself.

In the air war, Egyptian planes struck at Israeli positions along the Suez Canal Saturday, after bombing the occupied town of El Arish, on the Mediterranean, in their closest raid to Israel in 22 years.

EGYPT SAID its bombers, supported by jet fighters, bombarded Israeli positions in three raids at opposite ends of the Sinai Peninsula.

An Egyptian spokesman said the targets were El Arish, El Shatt, on the northern outskirts of Suez city, and Kabrit, 25 miles south of Ismailia.

Watchem Grow

Q. I have noticed that many newspapers around the country now carry columns similar to ACTION LINE. Can you tell me who started the ACTION LINE columns? E.B., Long Beach.

A. The first ACTION LINE-type column was Watchem, started in the Houston (Texas) Chronicle in 1961 by William Stevens, the paper's editor at the time. "The column just came out of a feeling I had whenever I walked down the streets of Houston that every other person in the city hadn't been there 10 years before," said Stevens, now vice president of the Chicago Daily News. "If someone wanted to get his sewer fixed, he just didn't know where to go. And I felt the newspaper should be useful to its readers."

Hard Travelin' Blues

Q. I recently bought a Buick station wagon from a car dealer in Lakewood. The odometer showed about 24,000 miles on the car. I finally located the original owner and he said he had sold the vehicle to a dealer in Oxnard with an odometer reading of 63,000 miles and he signed an affidavit to that effect. After finding this out, I asked the Lakewood dealer to take the car back, but he refused. What can I do now? F.H., Lakewood.

A. Turning back an odometer was made a criminal offense during last year's state legislative session, according to Herbert Elkins of the consumer fraud division, California attorney general's office in Los Angeles. Elkins said his office was very interested in your problem, and asked that ACTION LINE send him the particulars of the case, as well as the affidavit from the original owner. He said his office will investigate the matter, and could possibly bring criminal charges against the guilty party. Elkins also pointed out that under California civil code, either of the two parties involved may void a contract when there has been a

Rescuers Dig Out Tot Entombed in Mudhole

MIAMI (UPI) — Rescue workers tunneled frantically through the slime of a tomato field Saturday night to rescue a two-year-old boy trapped in a narrow irrigation shaft.

The child, sobbing hysterically and covered with mud, had hung suspended over deep water in the shaft for nearly seven hours.

The boy, John Reynolds III, had wandered away from his parents while they were picking tomatoes in the field.

"We suddenly noticed him gone," said his father, a Miami stockbroker. "Then my wife heard a moaning sound and saw he was stuck down the hole. We ran to get help."

MORE THAN 50 volunteers frantically began tunneling a parallel passage through the soft muck into the shaft.

At 9 p.m., Sheriff's Deputy Bill Team and Fred Knecht, a construction worker, broke through into the shaft, planted supports between the child and the water, and lifted him to freedom.

"THANK GOD," sobbed Mrs. Reynolds. "Oh, thank God."

The child was rushed to a hospital, where a nurse said later he was in "satisfactory" condition.

"He's in much better shape than we thought he'd be," she said. "He'll be held overnight for observation. We're checking the possibility he may have some fractures."

A DOCTOR who had been called to the scene shortly after the rescue operation began, and who accompanied the boy to the hospital, said John seemed to be suffering from exposure.

Praising the volunteers, the boy's father said: "All these people are great, really super."

Reynolds said he, his

40 PER CENT CUT?

Quick Peek at Reagan's Tax Proposal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan gave a quick peek show of his new tax plan Saturday, promising that it would cut property taxes by 40 per cent for those living in "low-cost housing."

Families owning houses, would see their taxes trimmed by at least 20 to 25 per cent, he said.

The governor revealed the plan at a 1970 campaign kickoff rally for Republican precinct workers. Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., also spoke.

Reagan did not elaborate on how the cuts would be financed, but did say it would deal with a "tax shift," rather than tax reform.

Reagan in recent months has said it has become feasible to use state sales and personal income taxes to help finance programs now almost mainly supported by property tax revenue.

The governor devoted the rest of his speech to the coming campaign.

HE SAID he felt this would be the year the Republicans regained control of the State Assembly.

"For the first time, we really have our chance," he said.

He said his campaign for reelection will probably deal heavily with "straightening the record" of his administration as his opponents see it.

"But I hate to think that's all there's going to be," Reagan added.

He said Democratic challengers may claim that he hasn't fulfilled a 1966 "campaign promise" to solve the California crime problem.

"I don't recall making any promise like that," Reagan said. "But we did promise to do our best to reverse the permissive attitude in our society and to give law enforcement the tools it needs."

State Republican leaders. Reagan said, can take credit for "the most comprehensive anticrime legislation "in history passed last year. He didn't identify the bills.

Assembly Democratic Leader Jesse Unruh of Inglewood has said he will run against Reagan. Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty said he might run.

Families Flee From Flooding

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Dozens of families left their homes Saturday near the flooding Sacramento River as a new Pacific storm capped 16 days of heavy winds and rain in Northern California.

Sections of major highways were closed, small bridges washed out and trees toppled.

Flood control officials said the serious problems appeared to be over as the storm abated. Flood levels reached the highest points since 1940, they said.

IN BUTTE County, north of Sacramento and northeast of San Francisco, people clambered onto house roofs after a levee gave way in five places, allowing the Sacramento River to inundate farmland.

The latest storm struck the San Francisco Bay area Friday night and spread inland with wind gusts up to 125 miles an hour.

At one inland point officials measured nearly five inches of rain in 24 hours. Mudslides closed part of U.S. 101, a major inland highway. In Auburn, northeast of Sacramento, rain and wind collapsed an old, two-story wooden building.

TYPHOID

First Details About Plague Aboard Ship

By Robert C. McConachie

VANCOUVER (UPI) — When the British luxury liner slipped out of London Dec. 16 with its pleasure-bound passengers, it also carried a potential killer — typhoid.

From London to California to Vancouver, the Oronsay left a trail of victims in its wake. The disease has now trapped the liner, 900 passengers and 600 crewmen in Vancouver Harbor.

Capt. John Wacher was unaware he was in trouble until the Oronsay slid past the Oregon coast, only 24 hours from Vancouver.

Then the radio message came from the U.S. Public Health Service.

The six crewmen he left behind at hospitals in Los Angeles and San Francisco didn't have the flu as he thought.

They had typhoid fever.

A scourge in less scientific times, typhoid has been mostly tamed by modern medicine and better hygiene. But it is still highly infectious, a serious disease, and linked with one of nature's crueler jokes on man — the typhoid carrier.

Usually ignorant of what they are, unaffected by the disease themselves, the carriers harbor it within themselves and pass it on to others.

And as the number of infections among the ship's passengers and crew rose inexorably, medical detectives closed in on the Oronsay.

There was, they were sure, a carrier aboard.

Today marks 11 days since the Oronsay sailed into Vancouver, and was shoved back out to anchor in the harbor the next day, flying the yellow flag of

Marijuana Bill Stalls, But Senate OK is Expected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite an unusual Saturday session, the Senate failed to complete debate on a bill sharply reducing penalties for using or selling drugs from marijuana to heroin.

But the bill, which has bipartisan support, appeared headed for passage. More debate was set for Monday, followed by a vote Monday or Tuesday. If passed, the bill then would face House consideration.

THE MEASURE, backed by the Nixon Administration, also is designed to crack down on syndicated drug trafficking. Stiff sentences are provided for pushers found to be "professional criminals."

They would face at least five years in prison for the first offense and 10 years for the second, with no probation, suspension or parole. Penalties also would be stiffened for adults convicted of selling drugs to children.

THE BILL would eliminate mandatory jail sentences for most other drug offenses, including sale of heroin and other hard narcotics. It would make possession of marijuana, heroin or other drugs — the charge imposed on users — a misdemeanor rather than a felony.

"Every day, some of the cream of American youth have their futures and their careers ruined because of an arrest for possession of marijuana, a drug that carries with it a penalty equal to the deadly heroin," Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., the bill's sponsor, told the Senate.

MORE THAN 90 per cent of marijuana and narcotics cases, and nearly all cases for drug use, are handled in state courts, not federal.

But Dodd and the Justice Department have predicted the bill will promote a similar reduction in penalties by state legislatures, most of which followed the federal example when stiff sentences for drug use were written into law during the late 1930s.

Besides marijuana and heroin, Dodd said, nine billion pep pills, sleeping pills, tranquilizers and other drugs are diverted from medical use.

"SCHOOL children across the country are popping them into their mouths like so many raisins," Dodd added.

The bill would empower the Justice Department to limit production and import of these drugs to amounts needed for medical use.

Under Dodd's measure, a person convicted the first time of possessing marijuana, heroin or any other outlawed drug could be jailed no more than one year.

Subsequent offenses would carry a maximum penalty of two years and a fine up to $10,000. But in both, the judge could suspend the sentence or grant probation.

PRESENT federal law imposes a 2-to-10-year sentence for the first offense, with suspension or probation permitted.

But a second conviction, even for smoking a marijuana cigarette, carries a mandatory 5-to-20-year prison sentence and a $20,000 fine.

Housewife Enters High School Drug Scene

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A young mother who was an undercover narcotics agent at a high school says her most frightening moment came when a young man told her he had slipped an LSD cube in her soft drink.

"The first thing that came to my mind was 'where is the nearest hospital and how fact can I get there'," recalled Carolyn Carrlson in an interview Saturday.

"But luckily he hadn't dropped the acid in the Coke," said the petite 22-year-old college senior. "He was just trying to see what my reaction would be."

CAROLYN CARRLSON
Acid in Coke

Carolyn Carrlson, an undercover alias, spent four months posing a sa kookie senior at Tascosa High School here by day and as a member of the drug scene at night.

The climax came last week when authorities, armed with grand jury indictments, arrested a large number of alleged drug offenders.

It was four months of pot parties and deception and lonely hours of ferreting out drug contacts, she said in the interview granted on condition she not discuss certain points.

"IT COULD not only jeopardize her life but a number of the cases," said detective Don Smith.

Carolyn actually volunteered for the job, walking into police headquarters one day and asking to be an undercover agent. She explained she did this for personal reasons and because of an aversion to drugs and drug users.

She told her youthful companions she lived with an older brother, actually her husband, 26, an employe of an Amarillo sound recording firm.

She said she brushed aside offers of dates, usually by claiming she was too busy or explaining that "I have a big brother who keeps a tight rein on me."

She said officers taught her how to smoke marijuana without inhaling and that on occasions when she could not avoid them she would "participate" in pot parties.

Carolyn said she attended classes at Tascosa about a month before making her first contact but she could not elaborate on the circumstances. "It snowballed," she said.

Which Came First, Hemp or Hangup? It's a Big 5,000-Year-Old Question

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Which came first, the chicken or the egg?

This venerable conversational gambit, modified, appears frequently in the current forensics about marijuana, otherwise known as maryjane, tea, weed, pot, grass, hay, bhang, charas, ganja or, in a stronger form, hashish.

Marijuana, depending on how it is prepared, may be smoked (as in reefers, joints, sticks or a pipe), sniffed, eaten, or drunk.

Whatever else you call it, marijuana is hemp, or cannabis, a plant that grows almost everywhere except in really cold climes. Human beings have been trying it on for one reason or another for about 5,000 years.

A chicken-egg question of the sort often heard nowadays is:

Does marijuana turn users into psychotics, or does psychosis turn people into marijuana users?

THE QUESTION is too simple. But it illustrates the extremes of viewpoint with which serious worriers about marijuana must contend.

The law generally says marijuana is evil — as evil as the "hard narcotics" such as heroin — and that those who possess, sell, use or even live in a place where it is possessed, sold, or used must be severely punished by fine or imprisonment.

Congress next year may approve legislation reducing the punishments for possession of marijuana. There are those, among them anthropologist Margaret Mead, who would legalize the drug.

What makes the issue especially urgent is that increasing numbers of American young people, on campus, in well-to-do suburbs or in the ghetto, are turning to marijuana as an escape from a reality they find unbearable or as an act of defiance to the "establishment."

Margaret Mead feels that the law's attempt to curb use of "this youth choice" has resulted in worse social consequences than the attempt of the 1920s to prohibit drinking.

ACCORDING to the National Violence Study Commission, harsh penalties for possession and use of marijuana have become "a principal source of frustration and alienation among the young."

Marijuana, according to the American Medical News, "poses the most perplexing and pressing problem both to Congress and the administration."

The news is published by the American Medical Association which considers marijuana a dangerous drug and a public health concern. The AMA opposes legalization of possession and sale of marijuana.

In a recent policy statement, as reported by the Medical News, "the AMA pointed out that marijuana is a psychoactive substance which can have a marked deleterious effect on individual performance and social productivity. A significant number of exposed persons become chronic users with concomitant medical and interpersonal problems."

Dr. Dana L. Farnsworth, chairman of the AMA Council on Mental Health which prepared the AMA's policy statement, says sale and possession of marijuana should not be treated more harshly than offenses involving amphetamines and barbiturates. He also said, however, that separate and more lenient treatment is not desirable.

OFFICIALLS of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare have called for more emphasis on rehabilitation of marijuana users and less on criminal punishment.

Dr. Lester Grinspoon, associate clinical professor of psychiatry at the Harvard University Medical School, undertook in the December issue of Scientific American to sort out and answer some questions that have been raised about marijuana.

According to Grinspoon, marijuana is a relatively mild intoxicant that tends to calm the user and is neither organically destructive nor addictive.

To deal with its increasing use, he said, "we obviously need to reduce the emotionalism surrounding the subject and replace myths with facts as far as they can be determined."

Does marijuana, as some say, lead its users to the use of narcotics?

"There is no evidence," according to Grinspoon, "that marijuana is more likely than alcohol or tobacco to lead to the use of narcotics."

Does marijuana incite people to aggression and violent criminal behavior?

"NO CASES of murder or of sexual crime due to marijuana have been established."

Indeed, Grinspoon said, marijuana "intoxication induces a lethargy that is not conductive to any physical activity, let alone the committing of crimes."

Does marijuana induce sexual debauchery?

This notion may owe its origin partly to the fact that in times past users in the Middle East "laced the drug with aphrodisiacs."

But "there is no evidence that marijuana stimulates sexual desire or power." There are those, in fact, who say it "weakens sexual desire."

Does marijuana lead to physical and mental degeneracy?

"It is possible that chronic use of the drug may have debilitating effects, as prolonged heavy drinking does."

On this subject Grinspoon went on to say:

"MANY OF those who take it up are hungry, sick, hopeless or defeated — seeking through this inexpensive substance to soften the impact of an otherwise unbearable reality.

"Life insurance statistics show that social drinkers have considerably higher than average mortality rates from all leading causes of death, including automobile accidents, than non-drinkers.

"In contrast, there have been no evidence so far that marijuana contributes to the development of organic disease. And in the only investigation to date of the effect on driving, a controlled study conducted recently by the state of Washington, it was found that marijuana causes significantly less impairment of driving ability than alcohol does."

Why do users turn to marijuana?

"FOR MANY, the drug is evidently an escape from feelings of inadequacy, personal frustrations, anxiety and (or) depression. The anxiety and sense of helplessness generated by the dangers of our time may be focused in some degree on marijuana."

As for the chicken-egg question: "In most situations," Grinspoon said, "one cannot be certain which came first: 'the drug on the one hand or the depression or personality disorder on the other.' "

He also said that "very little attention has been given to the possibility that marijuana might protect some people from psychosis."

"Among the youth of this country," Grinspoon said, "marijuana has a powerful attraction for those who have a tendency to introspection and meditation or an urge to retire from involvement in society."

The "violence and martial spirit of our times" drive some persons to protective immersion in the drug and arouse others to a crusade against it.

Neither, Grinspoon concluded, "contributes toward the development of a more secure world."

Icy Waters Drown Scouts

NOBLE, Okla. (AP) — Three members of a Boy Scout troop drowned Saturday when they fell through the ice on a small lake at the Lexington Wildlife Refuge near here.

A fourth boy was pulled from the icy waters by a troop leader and the manager of the game preserve.

The victims were identified as Chad Richardson, a seventh grade student; Steve Crane, a ninth grader; and Randy Burkett, a high school sophomore. All were from nearby Norman.

BUT WIFE MAY RUN

Leary's Governor's Race Goes to Pot

Dr. Timothy Leary's conviction in Laredo, Tex., of marijuana smuggling might knock him out of the running for governor of California — but his wife Rosemary might seek election.

The self-styled "high priest of LSD" said in Santa Ana Saturday that his troubles with the law are interfering with his political ambitions.

"I FEEL that my conviction may knock me out of the campaign," Dr. Leary said. "If so, we'll put Rosemary's name on the ballot."

This was a surprise to Mrs. Leary, who seemed taken aback by his disclosure.

Dr. Leary noticed it, and then hastened the explanation that "Of course, if she doesn't want to, we'll try to get someone's name on the ballot that we like."

The 49-year-old onetime Harvard University professor and his svelte 34-year-old second wife were in town to arrange a continuance to Feb. 2 of their marijuana possession trial, growing out of their arrest in Laguna Beach on Dec. 26, 1968.

HIS SON, John, 20, is due to appear Monday before Presiding Superior Court Judge William C. Speirs, to arrange for psychiatric examination.

The young man's attorney, Marvin Cooper of Santa Ana, told the court that John is so ill that he cannot aid in his own defense; he also was arrested in Laguna Beach on "pot" charges and may be tried along with his father and stepmother.

CELEBRITIES SEE GHETTO

FAYETTE, Miss. (UPI) — Mrs. Anne Rockefeller Pierson, daughter of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, and actress Shirley MacLaine were among the trustees of the newly-formed Medgar Evers Fund, Inc., who Saturday toured Jefferson County, the fourth poorest in the United States.

The tour was led by Mayor Charles Evers, brother of the civil rights leader assassinated seven years ago and for whom the fund is named. Evers was elected last May as the first Negro mayor of a biracial town in Mississippi since reconstruction days.

3 Killed as Leaking Gas Line Explodes

HOUMA, La. (UPI) — A leaking gas line exploded "like an earthquake" in a downtown manhole Saturday, killing three persons and demolishing half a city block.

An area with the radius of 12 blocks was evacuated in the downtown section of the city of 30,000. Fifty National Guardsmen were called out to help with the evacuation.

Police cordoned off most of the downtown area shortly after the 4:30 p.m. explosion, because there was still a gas leak near the area of the explosion.

"OUR BIG problem is keeping people away from there," a policeman said. "There is a leak and we want to keep all of them out."

The area would be closed off at least until Sunday and possibly longer, police said.

Casualties and injuries were kept down because during the late afternoon on Saturday many of the shops and offices were closed.

A spokesman at Terrebonne General Hospital said at least 18 persons were treated for injuries but none of them was in critical condition.

"I HEARD something rumbling and the building started shaking like an earthquake," said Mrs. B. B. Veridge, owner of a shoe store on the same block as the explosion.

"I got up to try to go downstairs, and at that time the thing started blowing up and everything started falling around me."

She managed to get out of the building and was not hurt.

The blast occurred in a manhole in front of a jewelry store. A city employe working on the leak was killed.

THE VICTIMS were Howard Arceneaux, 61, the city employe; Loren Bourg Sr., a fireman, and an unidentified man.

Police and fire units from nearby Thibodaux, Raceland and other communities rushed to the city. Houma is located about 42 miles southwest of New Orleans.

The evacuation included all the guests and personnel of a hotel located across the courthouse square from the blast site.

A women's clothing shop, a loan office, another jewelry store and the offices of state. Rep. Gerald Lofaso were destroyed.

Telephone and electric lines were knocked out for a four-block area.

Four Die in Blaze

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — A mother and her three young sons burned to death Saturday when a fire swept through their house trailer. The victims were identified as Mrs. Bernice Chaney, 23, and sons Wayne 3, Sherman 1, and Eugene, 4 weeks. The father was at work.

STUNTMAN, ANGELS TANGLE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two Hell's Angels were treated for head cuts after a brawl at the Cow Palace that erupted after motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel leaped his bike over 11 cars parked side by side.

An announcer inadvertently triggered the incident when he told the crowd Friday night that if Knievel succeeded, "this will set the Hell's Angels back 20 years."

As Knievel made his run, police Sgt. Ralph Warren said, someone threw something at him, but he made the jump.

Then he turned around, leaped from his stillmoving bike, and tangled with one of the Angels. Other Angels attacked him, and some of the 6,000 spectators ran from the stands to mix it with the Angels.

Wooden marker stakes were yanked from the ground and used as clubs, said Warren.

The brawl lasted 15 minutes. No arrests were made, but two Angels from San Jose — Joseph Sanchex, 28, and Richard Smith, 25 — were treated at Mary's Help Hospital and released.

AS MOM DOZES

Gorilla Infant Taken

CINCINNATI (AP) — A 2-day-old gorilla was taken without incident from its mother Saturday at the Cincinnati Zoo and then was placed in an incubator.

"All went well," a zoo official said after the mother, Mahari, was tranquilized with a dart and zoo Director Ed Maruska grabbed the baby, a male.

"Earlier, we were worried about what would happen when Mahari would get drowsy."

THE MOTHER jerked and then slowly became drowsy. She did not drop the baby which she had been cradling since birth Friday morning. The mother was in good condition and "the baby was screaming its head off," the official said.

Zoo personnel decided to take the baby since the mother had not nursed it. It was immediately placed in an incubator and then was taken to Good Samaritan Hospital's intensive care animal laboratory where it was transferred to another incubator. Maruska said that it will be fed with a "simple formula like any kid."

Nixon Honors Conductor Ormandy

Combined News Services

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (UPI) — President Nixon attended a command performance of the Philadelphia Orchestra Saturday night to present its conductor, Eugene Ormandy, with the Medal of Freedom award.

The trip from Washington to Philadelphia also gave the President a chance to view first-hand the results of federal assistance making possible the high-speed Washington to New York Penn Central Metroliner which took him on his first train ride since becoming President.

The visit was marred only briefly, by peace pickets chanting, "peace now, peace now," as the presidential party rode in a motorcade one block from the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel to the Academy of Music. The smiling President ignored the pickets.

President and Mrs. Nixon listened to the concert marking the 113th anniversary of the Academy of Music in a box overlooking the orchestra in the U-shaped, ancient music hall.

Earlier Saturday, Nixon postponed his scheduled Monday news conference until later in the week. This will give him an opportunity to discuss his anticipated veto of the controversial health and education appropriations bill. Press secretary Ronald Zeigler said the news conference will be rescheduled Thursday or Friday.

CAKE'S ON

A bit of icing was spread Saturday on the mystery of whether and when when heart transplant pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard will marry 19-year-old Johannesburg socialite Barbara Zoellner.

A Johannesburg newspaper report quoted local society baker Albert Kuster as saying the prospective bride's mother had ordered a wedding cake from him worth several hundred dollars. He said it would have a heart motif. Kuster also said he would finish the cake about Feb. 10.

DESPAIR

A superior court clerk, despairing of the world "the way it is today," shot three of his children Saturday, killing one, before his wife wrestled the gun from him, San Francisco police said.

Michael Condon, 56, was held for investigation of murder and attempted murder in the slaying of Melinda Condon, 18, and wounding of Michael Jr., 17, and Lawrence, 13.

The two boys were in serious conditon.

Condon, widely known among city officials both at City Hall and the Hall of Justice, was taken to City Prison. Police quoted him as saying:

"I'm afraid I messed it up."

BIG BUYER

Folk-singing millionaire Michael J. Brody Jr. flew home abruptly Saturday after a wild weekend in Hawaii, declaring he would arrange a Vietnam cease-fire by buying off the North Vietnamese with $10 billion in aid.

The long-haired, 21-year-old oleomargarine heir left unfilled a second singing appearance scheduled Saturday night.

Friday, he had thrown his $300 concert fee from the stage to the startled audience, assured a group of servicemen he was "bringing you home," and estimated he had given away "about 5 mil," most of it other people's money.

Brody and his wife Renee flew on Pan American Airways flight 820 to Los Angeles after asking Bud Kaye, a reporter with the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, to drive them to the airport.

Brody said they would change to American Airlines — flying "student standby" — and go on to his New York home.

Brody's scheduled appearances in Honolulu were in connection with scheduled concerts by the Grateful Dead singing group.

EXILE

Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu has taken his wife and children and begun a silent exile in the jungle flower and crocodile country of the Ivory Coast's interior, reliable sources believe.

These sources said Saturday the Biafran leader probably is in Yamoshkuo, a city about 250 miles north of Abidjan, near the city of Bouake.

The town is the home of President Felix Houphouet-Boigny and has a Benedictine monastery. It is well policed and has good communications.

But the sources said Ojukwu pledged he would make no statements and would refrain from any political activity in exchange for political asylum. Houphouet underscored this Friday when he announced that Ojukwu was in the Ivory Coast.

BITTER

Four Californians whose husbands were shot down during the air war against North Vietnam arrived in Saigon Saturday with bitter words for Communist officials who have refused to say whether the men are alive or dead.

The pilots are listed by the Pentagon as missing in action, leaving open the possibility they may have been captured and imprisoned by the North Vietnamese.

The women who arrived Saturday are Mrs. Roosevelt Hestle, 37, of Los Angeles, Mrs. Stephen Hanson, 30, of El Toro, Mrs. Arthur Mearns, 37, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. John Hardy, 27, of Los Angeles.

They have traveled halfway around the world in quest of information. They have been rebuffed at every turn — in Paris, Moscow, Cairo, Bangkok, and Vientiane, the capital of Laos, only 60 minutes flying time from Hanoi.

FOUND

Schoolgirl Mary Annette Washington, found in a Honolulu Army warehouse suffering from malnutrition, lay in a hospital Saturday, too ill to tell the story of her 53-day disappearance.

The 13-year-old daughter of an Army warrant officer vanished without a trace after leaving her Schofield Barracks home for school Dec. 2. She was found Friday after two soldiers heard a noise in an unused portion of a base warehouse.

She was rushed to Tripler Army Medical Center, where a spokesman said she was "very seriously ill" from severe malnutrition and dehydration.

The girl's parents both left the islands after an extensive search for their daughter failed.

Her father, W. O. Alexander Washington, stationed in Vietnam, was expected to arrive in Hawaii today. Mrs. Washington, who returned to Florida to be with her family, was expected to arrive in Honolulu Monday.

NOMINEE

The Alfalfa Club gave its mock 1970 presidential nomination Saturday night to former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

This was the 57th annual Washington, D.C., banquet of the Alfalfa Club, a dining and social organization whose members include government officials, businessmen and members of the armed forces. It nominates yearly what it acknowledges is a dubious presidential candidate.

UNSIGHTED

Two of the Soviet Union's top leaders, Leonid I. Brezhnev and Nikolai V. Podgorny, have been away from Moscow on vacation for more than one month, East European sources said Saturday.

The Moscow sources said Brezhnev, the party general secretary, and Podgorny, the president of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) left in mid-December for a vacation retreat. Neither man has been seen in public since Dec. 16.

FOR SALE

The 23-room San Francisco residence of Episcopal Bishop C. Kilmer Myers has been for sale for months because the bishop thinks it's too big and expensive, says Canon Howard Freeman of San Francisco' Grace Cathedral.

"Bishop Myers has spent more than a year urging the Diocesan Corporation to get rid of the place and let him move into something more convenient for his family," said Freeman.

GIRL DIES IN PIZZA MIXER

Drawn Into Vat After Trapping Hand in Machine

A 15-year-old Buena Park girl was killed Saturday in a large mixer at a pizza restaurant.

Margie West, of 5571 Kingman Ave., was pronounced dead at the Pizza Palace, 7922 Valley View Ave., by an Orange County coroner's deputy shortly after 2 p.m.

According to Buena Park Police Lt. Gary Rooney, the girl, a frequent visitor to the restaurant, had stepped into a backroom to talk to an employe who was mixing pizza dough.

John F. Hemphill, of 610 S. Canoga St., Anaheim, told police he left the room to get a food timer and returned to find the upper half of Miss West's body submerged in the vat.

The vat was disconnected and transported with the body to Troutman Family Mortuary in Buena Park after fire and rescue units were unable to free the body.

Rooney said the girl apparently placed her hand in the mixer and was caught and drawn in by the mechanism.

A coroner's spokesman said an autopsy will be conducted at the mortuary.

Reds Hit Da Nang Air Base

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces launched rocket and mortar attacks early Sunday against the U.S. Air Force base at Da Nang and three Allied outposts just south of the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam.

The U.S. command said the attack at Da Nang caused neither damage nor casualties, the rocket and mortar rounds falling into fields surrounding the base. There were no immediate details of the attacks against the positions along the DMZ, but initial reports indicated there were no casualties.

THE AREA around the coastal city of Da Nang, 380 miles northeast of Saigon, is considered a prime target in a Communist offensive the Allies are anticipating. The attack against the base at Da Nang began shortly after midnight Saturday, and the first shells were fired at the DMZ outposts about eight hours later, military spokesmen said.

B-52 bombers flew four missions early Sunday, two of the strikes in the northern sector near Hue and two hit targets in mountainous areas 121 miles southwest of Saigon. Hue, the old imperial capital, is another area expected to be a major target in any new Communist offensive.

Raid on Bars Nets 29 Guns

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Simultaneous raids on two bars resulted in confiscation of 29 guns, including a machine gun, Saturday night.

Federal gun violation charges were laid against the proprietors, Frank D. "Sonny" Sandidge, 36, and George M. Allen, 39, who were released on $500 bond.

Blind Aid Found

EDMONTON, Alta. (AP) — Engineering students at the University of Manitoba have developed an award-winning "ultrasonic mobility aid," a miniature device attached to a blind person's white cane for detection of obstacles and transmission of danger signals through a hearing aid.

All-Night Gas Stations Go on 'War Footing' to Beat Armed Raiders

By MIKE KRUGLAK
Staff Writer

Some carry guns, others surround themselves with elaborate electronic security devices, and still others turn to concrete "fortressess" for protection.

They are not policemen nor GIs on patrol in enemy territory, but the men who work what has been dubbed the "Vietnam" shift, the late shift in the Southland's all-night gas stations.

THE INCREASING NUMBER of service station stickups has led many operators of 24-hour stations to close at night. Others arm themselves, or set up silent warning devices, or refuse to handle cash after a certain hour.

Nationally, there were 9,651 armed robberies of gas stations in 1968, a 28.7 per cent increase over 1967. The trend since 1960 has been ever upward.

In Long Beach, a check of a dozen stations that have been robbed in the past year revealed that several now close before 10 p.m.

"WE ENCOURAGE OUR OPERATORS to close certain stations during the hazard hours of 10 to 6, "said a spokesman for Union Oil Co.

Those Union stations that remain open at night keep two men on duty. In Whittier, Union is experimenting with a station that accepts only credit cards at night.

Unlike some operators who have had the most trouble in low-income neighborhoods, Union finds that most of its robberies take place at stations near freeways.

INCREASINGLY POPULAR among all-night stations are electronic warning devices.

Gulf Oil, for example, has turned to a pocket device the size of a pack of cigarettes.

It triggers a silent alarm to notify police of a robbery. The company also uses closed-circuit television in several Southland stations with histories of repeated robberies.

Another pocket device now in use sets off a tape that alerts an answering service, which in turn notifies police.

ALL OF THE MAJOR OIL companies discourage the carrying of guns by their employes.

"No employe may carry a gun; there's too much danger of physical harm," says Gulf.

"We don't want them to carry guns; it's very easy for retaliation where they'd get hurt," said a Chevron spokesman.

"Anything can happen when you have two amateurs with guns facing each other," said a Phillips spokesman.

Individual station owners and attendants often follow a different policy.

"ALL MY MEN ARE ARMED," said the manager of a Compton station. "I tell them to shoot and ask questions later."

Don Harrison, a Los Angeles operator, said: "We had a robbery about eight months ago in which my attendant was beaten over the head.

"Now our man carries a gun on his hip. I told him that if anyone tried to touch the cashbox, lay him out. We haven't had any robberies since the man started wearing a gun."

"We keep an automatic pistol near the cash register," said attendant Mark Zahn of the twice-robbed Thrifty Gas on 7th Street in Long Beach.

We were unable to unearth any guard dogs at local stations, but they tried one in Washington, D.C.

"We had a guy held up three times and so he got a dog, Washington operator Charles Binsted said. "The fourth time they stole the dog."

WHAT KIND OF PEOPLE robs service stations?

"At 2 p.m. all the weirdos come out of the bar," said Zahn.

"They're on dope, half of them," said Dusty Rhoades, an attendant at one of the 13 local Parks Texaco stations.

"They don't know what they're doing. They can't even walk, some of them. You should see their eyes."

Added Rhoades: "When you got a gun, you're looking for trouble. When you've got a gun, you've got hotheads."

The 13 Parks stations have been robbed about 25 times in the last year.

ONE WAY TO FOIL ROBBERIES is to keep little or no cash on hand.

Standard Oil of California has put exact-change systems into effect in San Diego County, and money is dropped into one-way slots in tamperproof safes imbedded in concrete in the floor of the office.

The program is so successful it may be expanded to the Long Beach-Los Angeles area, a company spokesman said.

Many local stations keep a minimum account of cash on hand and use the drop safe for the excess.

A TEXACO SPOKESMAN had another solution to the problem: "It may sound corny, but it's the old bit about cultivating the cop on the beat."

Thrifty's Zahn agrees: "We called the police one night and we had six cars here in two or three minutes."

AT SAN CLEMENTE

Couple See Slide Peril; Quit Home

A San Clemente couple moved out of their hillside home Saturday after a landslide threatened the backyard of their home 2½ miles north of the Summer White House.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Seets of 717 Avenida Colombo, said they feared the slide would endanger their $38,000 residence.

The slide dropped about 12,000 cubic yards of dirt into a small canyon back of the Seets' home, police said.

Although engineers said the Seets residence was not itself in danger, Mrs. Seets was uneasy for the safety of her two small children, and she insisted on leaving.

None of the other 14 houses on the short cul-de-sac street appeared to be threatened.

City engineers said the terrain behind the Seets' home "is virtually perpendicular," and that there appeared to be no way to shore up the crumbling hillside.

Abernathy in Sweden

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Rev. Ralph Abernathy, Negro civil rights leader and head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, arrived in Sweden with his wife Saturday to give a series of speeches and meet with Swedish government officials.

FLASHER ALSO OUT

Planners Veto Rotating Signs

Three advertising signs have been turned down by the Long Beach Planning Commission — two because they rotated and one because it had flashing lights.

Two of the signs, however, will be granted approval if they eliminate the objections.

Commissioners voted 5-to-1 Thursday to deny the application of General Neon Sign Co. for a 33.5-foot-tall rotating sign for a new restaurant under construction at 301 W. Broadway.

PLANNING Director Ernest Mayer Jr. recommended denial of the request, pointing out the restaurant is adjacent to the future Civic Center site, and is surrounded by "institutional" buildings, such as a church, the Veterans Memorial Building and the Red Cross headquarters.

Mayer said the sign is twice as high as the restaurant itself, has no competing signs for a block in all directions and is out of keeping with the "showcase" theme of the future Civic Center.

Commissioner Donald W. Phillips, who voted against denial, said the 33.5-foot sign is less than the 45-foot maximum permitted by city ordinance.

COMMISSIONER William A. Lockett said, however, he felt it was "way out of proportion" to the restaurant, and Commissioner Arnold B. Berg said he objected both to the height and the rotation.

The other proposed rotating sign was sought by the House of Pies, 4105 Atlantic Ave. Mayer recommended denial on the basis of the rotating sign, but said it was satisfactory otherwise.

Commissioners voted to approve the application, if the rotation is eliminated.

The final application, by Joseph A. Papa, covered an already erected flashing sign at a small residence-cafe at 4316½ E. Fourth St. Mayer said adjacent development is primarily residential, and he recommended approval of the sign, but the flashing lights eliminated.

Commissioners concurred in his recommendation.

HOSPITAL PLANS $2.5 MILLION WING

From Our L.A. Bureau

San Pedro Community Hospital is preparing to start construction soon of a $2.5 million, four-story wing designed to increase capacity from 104 beds to 243.

The county engineer issued the required building permit Monday.

The project also involves some changes in the building now in use.

San Pedro Community Hospital is privately owned. The address is 1300 W. Sixth St.

3 Safety Projects Scheduled for Area

Three Long Beach area highway safety projects were announced by the California Highway Commission Saturday.

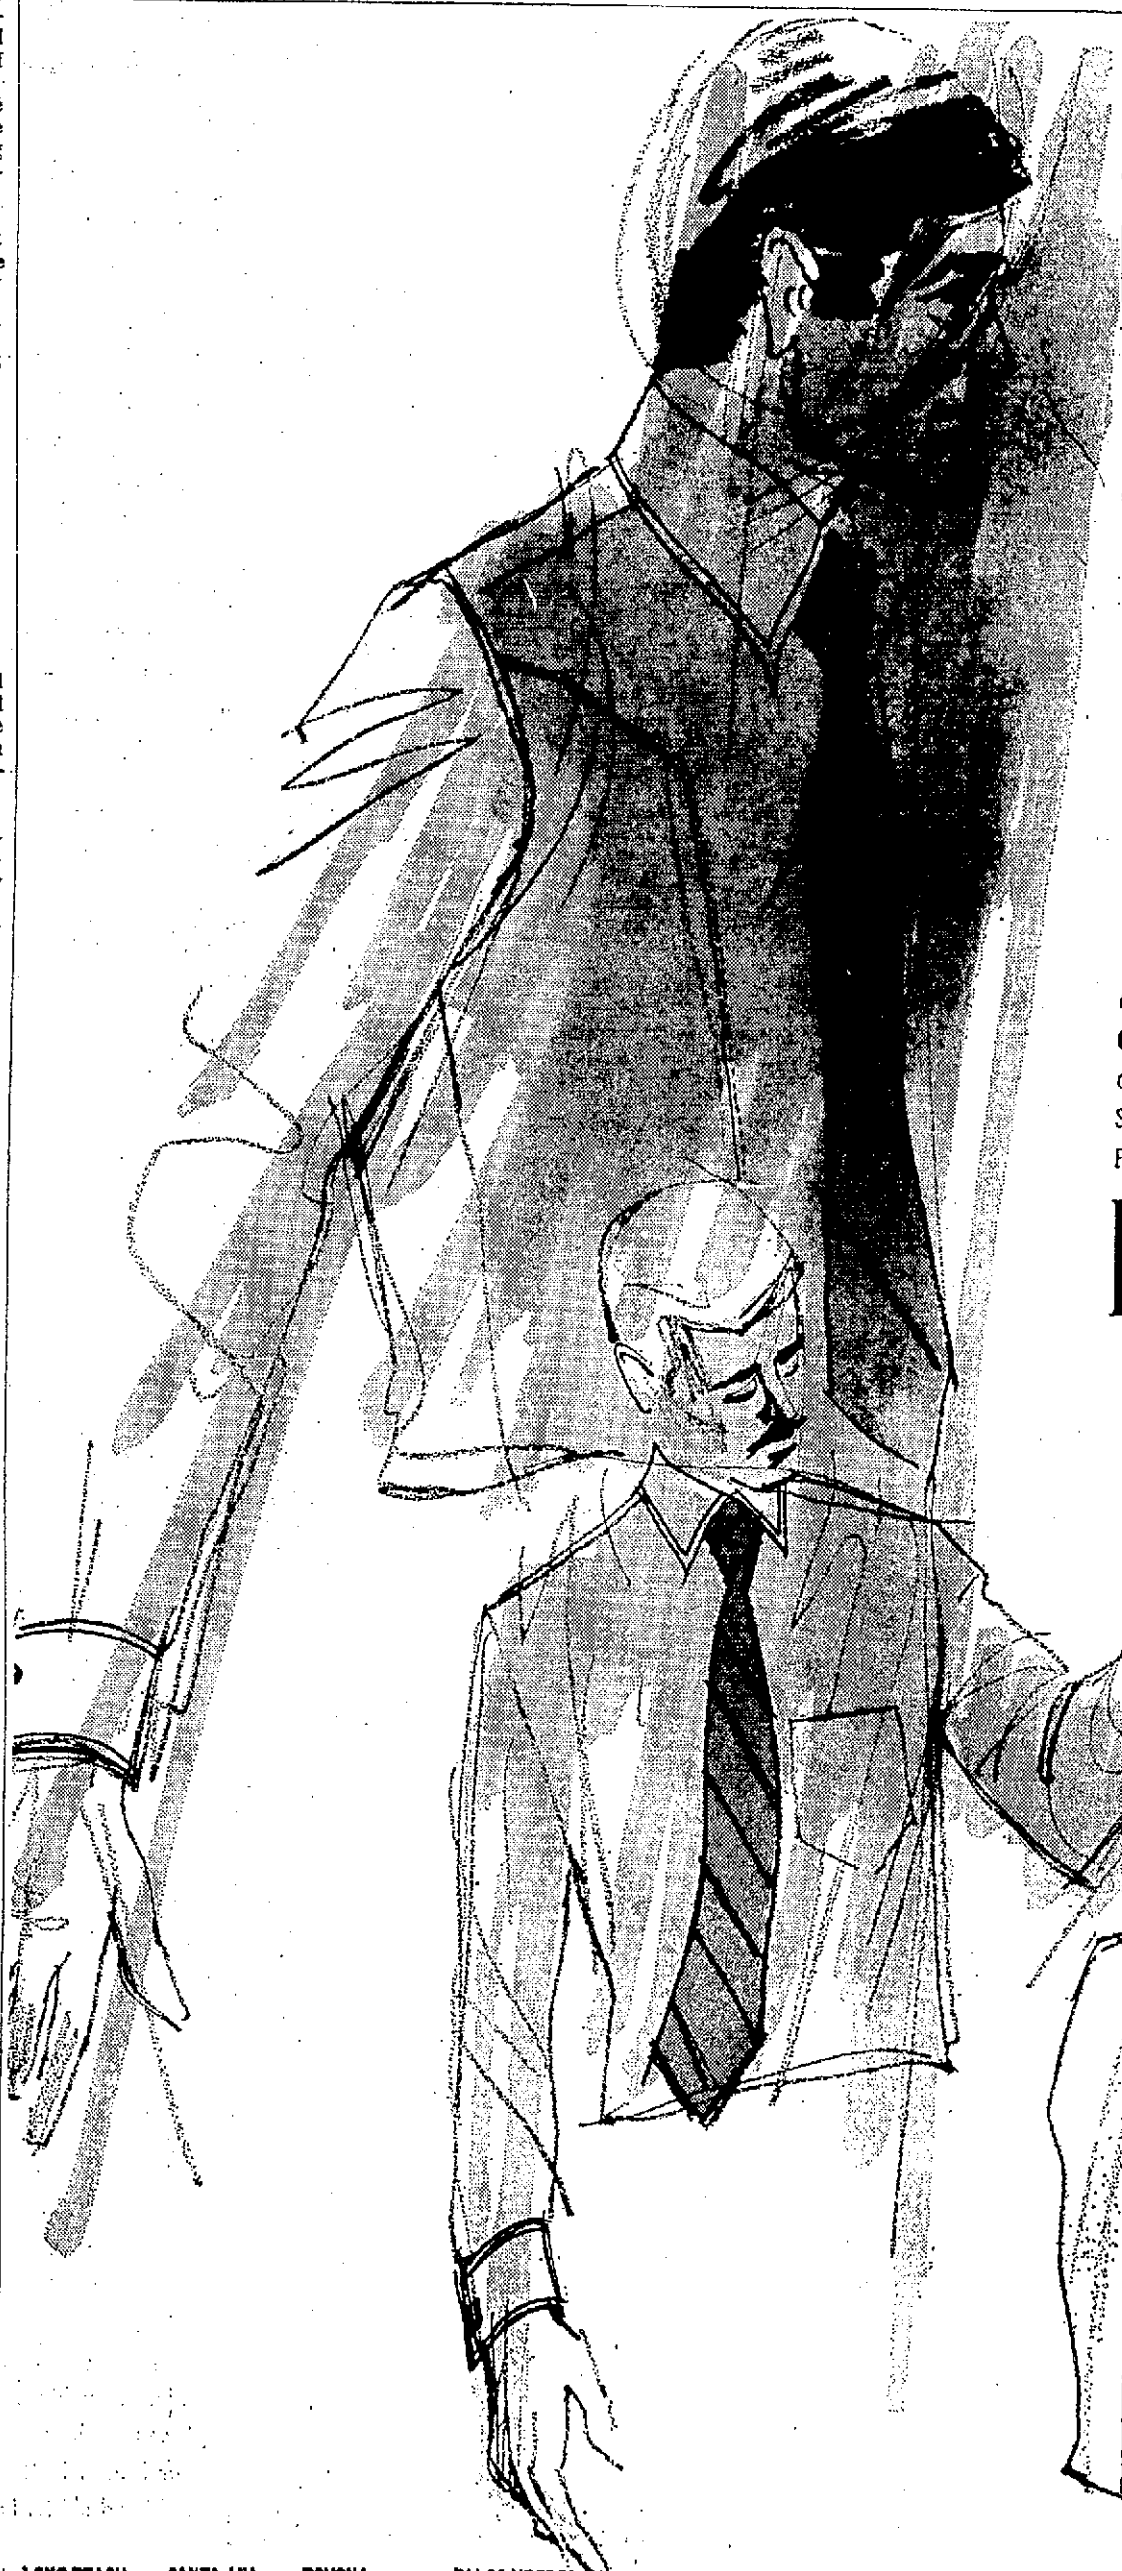

Bidding will begin soon on an estimated $26,000 project to install automatic gates and warning lights across the Santa Fe Railroad tracks at Goodrich Avenue and Pacific Coast Highway, Wilmington.

A similar project, estimated to cost $32,000, is scheduled for the area near the Southern Pacific tracks at Euclid Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Garden Grove.

The third project calls for drainage work on the Long Beach Freeway near Del Amo Boulevard.

Raid Snares 113

HOUSTON (UPI) — Police conducted one of the largest narcotics raids in Texas in history early Saturday, arresting 113 persons and confiscating drugs. A crew of 75 policemen made the arrests in pool halls, bars, private residences and houses of prostitution.

Demos Set Up Consumer Complaint Centers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democratic Party, viewing the consumer affairs problem as a matter to be dealt with on the local level, is setting up centers to hear and act on consumer complaints.

The party admits there are some consumer offices set up as a part of a government department, usually in the state's attorney general's office, but says citizens are generally unaware of their existence.

The party plan also is not just to hear the consumer complaints about the products they buy but to carry them through to the point of prosecuting violators.

Mrs. Geri Joseph, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said the plan was devised because "most consumer problems are local matters" and "the consumer shouldn't have to write to the White House when a toaster breaks down or a new roof starts to leak."

She said the primary objective of the consumer action plan is to mobilize support at the local level for effective consumer offices "as a necessary part of local government."

"To be effective," Mrs. Joseph said, "these offices must be able to handle complaints quickly, investigate them promptly and take appropriate action."

She said the local offices, set up and run by Democratic organizations, would be responsible for receiving complaints, investigating them, prosecuting violators, studying consumer products and educating consumers to protect themselves.

To help the local party groups get started, Mrs. Joseph said, her office has prepared a consumer action kit outlining a plan of action.

Fire Fighters Sue

CHALMETTE, La. (UPI) — The St. Bernard Parish Firefighters Association is fed up with low pay, so it has sued the local Administration for higher wages. The suit contends beginning firemen earn only $300 a month compared with the $400 minimum provided by state law.

Report Alioto Loses Washington Job

SEATTLE (UPI) — San Francisco Mayor and antitrust lawyer Joseph Alioto is being dismissed from his position as lawyer for the State of Washington in plumbing antitrust suits, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported in its Saturday morning editions.

In Olympia, state Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton refused to comment on the report Friday night.

Already the target of a suit seeking to recover the $2.3 million fee paid to him for work in electrical antitrust suits in Washington because of alleged fee-sharing, Alioto has been listed as counsel for the state in the plumbing antitrust case.

However, the newspaper quoted "sources in the attorney general's office" as indicating Alioto has done little or no work on the case since 1967. Most of the actual legal work has been done by Nick O'Connell, a Bellevue attorney working as counsel under Alioto, the PI said. The Bellevue attorney is no relation to former state Atty. Gen. John J. O'Connell, also named in the state suit against Alioto.

Alioto's fee in the plumbing suit is 20 per cent of the recovered damages, but it is not known how much money is due him, if any, the article said.

2 Men Hijack Airliner

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — A Netherlands Antilles Airlines plane with 32 persons aboard was hijacked to Cuba Saturday during a regularly scheduled flight from the Dominican Republic to Curacao.

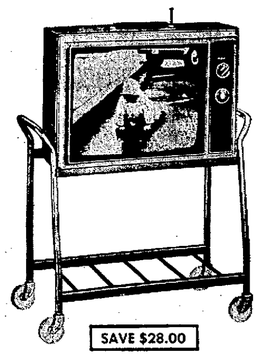

The plane's pilot, David Traver, reported to the control tower here that two young men, one of them armed with a pistol, entered the cockpit shortly after the plane had left the Dominican capital for the flight south to Curacao, principal island in the Netherlands Antilles.

HELSINKI (UPI) — Finland's President Urho Kekkonen plans a private trip to the West Indies soon.

Marijuana Bill Stalls, But Senate OK is Expected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite an unusual Saturday session, the Senate failed to complete debate on a bill sharply reducing penalties for using or selling drugs from marijuana to heroin.

But the bill, which has bipartisan support, appeared headed for passage. More debate was set for Monday, followed by a vote Monday or Tuesday. If passed, the bill then would face House consideration.

THE MEASURE, backed by the Nixon Administration, also is designed to crack down on syndicated drug trafficking. Stiff sentences are provided for pushers found to be "professional criminals."

They would face at least five years in prison for the first offense and 10 years for the second, with no probation, suspension or parole. Penalties also would be stiffened for adults convicted of selling drugs to children.

THE BILL would eliminate mandatory jail sentences for most other drug offenses, including sale of heroin and other hard narcotics. It would make possession of marijuana, heroin or other drugs — the charge imposed on users — a misdemeanor rather than a felony.

"Every day, some of the cream of American youth have their futures and their careers ruined because of an arrest for possession of marijuana, a drug that carries with it a penalty equal to the deadly heroin," Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., the bill's sponsor, told the Senate.

MORE THAN 90 per cent of marijuana and narcotics cases, and nearly all cases for drug use, are handled in state courts, not federal.

But Dodd and the Justice Department have predicted the bill will promote a similar reduction in penalties by state legislatures, most of which followed the federal example when stiff sentences for drug use were written into law during the late 1930s.

Besides marijuana and heroin, Dodd said, nine billion pep pills, sleeping pills, tranquilizers and other drugs are diverted from medical use.

"SCHOOL children across the country are popping them into their mouths like so many raisins," Dodd added.

The bill would empower the Justice Department to limit production and import of these drugs to amounts needed for medical use.

Under Dodd's measure, a person convicted the first time of possessing marijuana, heroin or any other outlawed drug could be jailed no more than one year.

Subsequent offenses would carry a maximum penalty of two years and a fine up to $10,000. But in both, the judge could suspend the sentence or grant probation.

PRESENT federal law imposes a 2-to-10-year sentence for the first offense, with suspension or probation permitted.

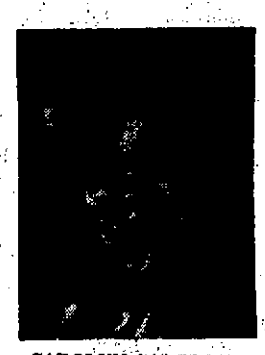

But a second conviction, even for smoking a marijuana cigarette, carries a mandatory 5-to-20-year prison sentence and a $20,000 fine.

Housewife Enters High School Drug Scene

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A young mother who was an undercover narcotics agent at a high school says her most frightening moment came when a young man told her he had slipped an LSD cube in her soft drink.

"The first thing that came to my mind was 'where is the nearest hospital and how fact can I get there'," recalled Carolyn Carrlson in an interview Saturday.

"But luckily he hadn't dropped the acid in the Coke," said the petite 22-year-old college senior. "He was just trying to see what my reaction would be."

CAROLYN CARRLSON
Acid in Coke

Carolyn Carrlson, an undercover alias, spent four months posing as a kookie senior at Tascosa High School here by day and as a member of the drug scene at night.

The climax came last week when authorities, armed with grand jury indictments, arrested a large number of alleged drug offenders.

It was four months of pot parties and deception and lonely hours of ferreting out drug contacts, she said in the interview granted on condition she not discuss certain points.

"IT COULD not only jeopardize her life but a number of the cases," said detective Don Smith.

Carolyn actually volunteered for the job, walking into police headquarters one day and asking to be an undercover agent. She explained she did this for personal reasons and because of an aversion to drugs and drug users.

She told her youthful companions she lived with an older brother, actually her husband, 26, an employe of an Amarillo sound recording firm.

She said she brushed aside offers of dates, usually by claiming she was too busy or explaining that "I have a big brother who keeps a tight rein on me."

She said officers taught her how to smoke marijuana without inhaling and that on occasions when she could not avoid them she would "participate" in pot parties.

Carolyn said she attended classes at Tascosa about a month before making her first contact but she could not elaborate on the circumstances. "It snowballed," she said.

Which Came First, Hemp or Hangup? It's a Big 5,000-Year-Old Question

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Which came first, the chicken or the egg?

This venerable conversational gambit, modified, appears frequently in the current forensics about marijuana, otherwise known as maryjane, tea, weed, pot, grass, hay, bhang, charas, ganja or, in a stronger form, hashish.

Marijuana, depending on how it is prepared, may be smoked (as in reefers, joints, sticks or a pipe), sniffed, eaten, or drunk.

Whatever else you call it, marijuana is hemp, or cannabis, a plant that grows almost everywhere except in really cold climes. Human beings have been trying it on for one reason or another for about 5,000 years.

A chicken-egg question of the sort often heard nowadays is:

Does marijuana turn users into psychotics, or does psychosis turn people into marijuana users?

THE QUESTION is too simple. But it illustrates the extremes of viewpoint with which serious worriers about marijuana must contend.

The law generally says marijuana is evil — as evil as the "hard narcotics" such as heroin — and that those who possess, sell, use or even live in a place where it is possessed, sold, or used must be severely punished by fine or imprisonment.

Congress next year may approve legislation reducing the punishments for possession of marijuana. There are those, among them anthropologist Margaret Mead, who would legalize the drug.

What makes the issue especially urgent is that increasing numbers of American young people, on campus, in well-to-do suburbs or in the ghetto, are turning to marijuana as an escape from a reality they find unbearable or as an act of defiance to the "establishment."

Margaret Mead feels that the law's attempt to curb use of "this youth choice" has resulted in worse social consequences than the attempt of the 1920s to prohibit drinking.

ACCORDING to the National Violence Study Commission, harsh penalties for possession and use of marijuana have become "a principal source of frustration and alienation among the young."

Marijuana, according to the American Medical News, "poses the most perplexing and pressing problem both to Congress and the administration."

The news is published by the American Medical Association which considers marijuana a dangerous drug and a public health concern. The AMA opposes legalization of possession and sale of marijuana.

In a recent policy statement, as reported by the Medical News, "the AMA pointed out that marijuana is a psychoactive substance which can have a marked deleterious effect on individual performance and social productivity. A significant number of exposed persons become chronic users with concomitant medical and interpersonal problems."

Dr. Dana L. Farnsworth, chairman of the AMA Council on Mental Health which prepared the AMA's policy statement, says sale and possession of marijuana should not be treated more harshly than offenses involving amphetamines and barbiturates. He also said, however, that separate and more lenient treatment is not desirable.

OFFICIALLS of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare have called for more emphasis on rehabilitation of marijuana users and less on criminal punishment.

Dr. Lester Grinspoon, associate clinical professor of psychiatry at the Harvard University Medical School, undertook in the December issue of Scientific American to sort out and answer some questions that have been raised about marijuana.

According to Grinspoon, marijuana is a relatively mild intoxicant that tends to calm the user and is neither organically destructive nor addictive.

To deal with its increasing use, he said, "we obviously need to reduce the emotionalism surrounding the subject and replace myths with facts as far as they can be determined."

Does marijuana, as some say, lead its users to the use of narcotics?

"There is no evidence," according to Grinspoon, "that marijuana is more likely than alcohol or tobacco to lead to the use of narcotics."

Does marijuana incite people to aggression and violent criminal behavior?

"NO CASES of murder or of sexual crime due to marijuana have been established."

Indeed, Grinspoon said, marijuana "intoxication induces a lethargy that is not conductive to any physical activity, let alone the committing of crimes."

Does marijuana induce sexual debauchery?

This notion may owe its origin partly to the fact that in times past users in the Middle East "laced the drug with aphrodisiacs."

But "there is no evidence that marijuana stimulates sexual desire or power." There are those, in fact, who say it "weakens sexual desire."

Does marijuana lead to physical and mental degeneracy?

"It is possible that chronic use of the drug may have debilitating effects, as prolonged heavy drinking does."

On this subject Grinspoon went on to say:

"MANY OF those who take it up are hungry, sick, hopeless or defeated — seeking through this inexpensive substance to soften the impact of an otherwise unbearable reality.

"Life insurance statistics show that social drinkers have considerably higher than average mortality rates from all leading causes of death, including automobile accidents, than non-drinkers.

"In contrast, there have been no evidence so far that marijuana contributes to the development of organic disease. And in the only investigation to date of the effect on driving, a controlled study conducted recently by the state of Washington, it was found that marijuana causes significantly less impairment of driving ability than alcohol does."

Why do users turn to marijuana?

"FOR MANY, the drug is evidently an escape from feelings of inadequacy, personal frustrations, anxiety and (or) depression. The anxiety and sense of helplessness generated by the dangers of our time may be focused in some degree on marijuana."

As for the chicken-egg question: "In most situations," Grinspoon said, "one cannot be certain which came first: 'the drug on the one hand or the depression or personality disorder on the other.' "

He also said that "very little attention has been given to the possibility that marijuana might protect some people from psychosis."

"Among the youth of this country," Grinspoon said, "marijuana has a powerful attraction for those who have a tendency to introspection and meditation or an urge to retire from involvement in society."

The "violence and martial spirit of our times" drive some persons to protective immersion in the drug and arouse others to a crusade against it.

Neither, Grinspoon concluded, "contributes toward the development of a more secure world."

Icy Waters Drown Scouts

NOBLE, Okla. (AP) — Three members of a Boy Scout troop drowned Saturday when they fell through the ice on a small lake at the Lexington Wildlife Refuge near here.

A fourth boy was pulled from the icy waters by a troop leader and the manager of the game preserve.

The victims were identified as Chad Richardson, a seventh grade student; Steve Crane, a ninth grader; and Randy Burkett, a high school sophomore. All were from nearby Norman.

BUT WIFE MAY RUN

Leary's Governor's Race Goes to Pot

Dr. Timothy Leary's conviction in Laredo, Tex., of marijuana smuggling might knock him out of the running for governor of California — but his wife Rosemary might seek election.

The self-styled "high priest of LSD" said in Santa Ana Saturday that his troubles with the law are interfering with his political ambitions.

"I FEEL that my conviction may knock me out of the campaign," Dr. Leary said. "If so, we'll put Rosemary's name on the ballot."

This was a surprise to Mrs. Leary, who seemed taken aback by his disclosure.

Dr. Leary noticed it, and then hastened the explanation that "Of course, if she doesn't want to, we'll try to get someone's name on the ballot that we like."

The 49-year-old onetime Harvard University professor and his svelte 34-year-old second wife were in town to arrange a continuance to Feb. 2 of their marijuana possession trial, growing out of their arrest in Laguna Beach on Dec. 26, 1968.

HIS SON, John, 20, is due to appear Monday before Presiding Superior Court Judge William C. Speirs, to arrange for psychiatric examination.

The young man's attorney, Marvin Cooper of Santa Ana, told the court that John is so ill that he cannot aid in his own defense; he also was arrested in Laguna Beach on "pot" charges and may be tried along with his father and stepmother.

CELEBRITIES SEE GHETTO

FAYETTE, Miss. (UPI) — Mrs. Anne Rockefeller Pierson, daughter of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, and actress Shirley MacLaine were among the trustees of the newly-formed Medgar Evers Fund, Inc., who Saturday toured Jefferson County, the fourth poorest in the United States.

The tour was led by Mayor Charles Evers, brother of the civil rights leader assassinated seven years ago and for whom the fund is named. Evers was elected last May as the first Negro mayor of a biracial town in Mississippi since reconstruction days.

CAUSE OF DISEASE STILL MYSTERY

quarantine, the first seen in Vancouver since before World War II.

Since then, at least 70 persons, from London to California to Vancouver, have been hospitalized by the outbreak. A force of more than 100 doctors and laboratory technicians has been mobilized, working 18-hour days to track down the carrier on the ship.

Five suspected carriers have been turned up, federal sources revealed Friday. Tests showed all five have been infected, but they show no sign of being ill themselves — the tell-tale mark of the carrier.

"The incubation period is from 10 to 14 days," the official said. "All five may develop typhoid," the source said, but any who don't get sick — "they'll be positive carriers."

AND DAY after day, the Oronsay, built for those who like to travel in leisure and style, sways at anchor in the harbor. The 900 passengers and 600 crewmen set off on a cruise in the sun. Now, they are trapped aboard until the three-nation research team determines which one of them carries the typhoid seed.

It may take up to another three weeks, health officials say.

The passengers amuse themselves as best they can. Extra movies were put aboard "Calamity Jane" was the feature one night. They fish in the harbor from the deck, catching dogfish and young salmon, and took at least one "mini-cruise" up the Strait of Georgia and back.

"It was just to give the passengers a change of pace," said a spokesman for the Peninsular and Oriental Line, the ship's owner.

"They're a remarkably cheery group," said the president of the line's North American branch, George Turner of San Francisco.

"They have the usual cruise program, and fun and games."

PASSENGERS do indeed seem to be living it up.

"I wouldn't say that everyone is overly worried about the outbreak," said Bruce Cooke 23, of Melbourne, who boarded the vessel at Southampton, England.

"The young people are taking it alright, as long as the money holds out there's more danger of getting cirrhosis of the liver than typhoid," he joked.

"We had a party last night that didn't end until seven o'clock this morning. The morale is rather high, but I've about had it though."

The passengers first heard about the outbreak shortly after Capt. Wacher received the warning from the U.S. Public Health Service. Wacher told them over the public address system.

"We all received little notes in our cabins telling us we had to report on the veranda deck in the bow by 7 a.m.," said Mrs. F. B. Chauvin of Montreal, who boarded the liner in Florida.

SHE SAID inoculations were started immediately but "everybody was unconcerned, life went on as usual."

Under international law, typhoid is not a quarantable disease but even before the ship's arrival, British Columbia Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's department had issued a directive that none of those on board should be permitted to disembark.

A medical team headed by Dr. G. A. Mott, Vancouver deputy medical health officer, boarded the Oronsay and 18 persons, including three passengers, were immediately dispatched to local hospitals as suspected typhoid cases.

Although they could prevent any passengers from getting off, Vancouver and Canadian officials were powerless to keep the Oronsay from sailing on to Honolulu.

The P & O Line cooperated, slapping its own quarantine on the ship and has agreed to keep it in Vancouver for at least another week.

"Our principle concern is to find the carrier to stop the disease from spreading. If the Oronsay is allowed out of port it will be like a floating bomb," Dr. Mott was quoted as saying.

ONCE A common disease in North America, because of poor sanitation, typhoid is now so rare few doctors specialize in the field. But the microscope detectives began to gather.

Dr. Ken Cox, Vancouver director of federal medical services for the Department of National Health and Welfare, took over the investigation. He was joined by the department's regional director, Dr. R. David Thompson, and the chief of laboratory services for the Provincial Health Department, Dr. Ernest J. Bowmer.

P&O Lines sent its medical superintendent, Dr. J. H. Newnham, from London, and he took up residence in the ship.

Dr. John Davis, the Canadian government's top epidemiologist, arrived from Ottawa. Dr. Andrew Mallory of the U.S. Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, was sent as an observer, because the Oronsay's next port of call is Honolulu.

They turned up two clues:

First, the liner's drinking water system was "contaminated with human waste," revealed Thompson.

Second, the typhoid strain was identified as the "K-1 Phage" from the Indian subcontinent.

The ship has about 40 crewmen from Goa, India. Health officials say they are not special suspects, that anyone aboard who has travelled in India could also have picked up the germs.

Thompson indicated the disease probably spread from the wastes of the carrier into the drinking water system, and the water spread the infection.

"I wouldn't be satisfied there isn't a carrier on that ship until we have stool examinations on every person and then maybe repeat some," he said.

ENGINEERS were sent aboard, plans of the ship's plumbing were being flown in from England, and dyes were poured into toilets, all in hopes of tracing the leak. Authorities said that in the maze of ship's plumbing, "it's like looking for a needle in a haystack."

Meanwhile, the number of suspected and confirmed cases mounted daily. After a week, there were 63 in Vancouver hospitals, the six in California, and one crewman who left the ship earlier was hospitalized in London.

Health authorities, warning "it's going to get worse," told hospitals to be prepared for new cases daily.

They made an exception of the quarantine rule when the Oronsay docked for 160 passengers, including 23 from the U.S., who had planned to get off there. They were let go with strict warnings to report to their local health officials, their names were wired ahead as insurance, and seek immediate treatment if they felt sick.

One of the women returned four days later, and was hospitalized as a suspected case, giving rise to fears other infected passengers could have been dropped off at the 11 earlier ports of call.

In California, State Health Director Dr. Louis F. Saylor warned passengers who got off in Los Angeles and San Francisco to check in with their doctors.

In Fort Everglades, Fla., health officials were searching for the 150 passengers who left the Oronsay there.

"THESE people have to be found and watched," said Dr. Paul Hughes, county health director. "They could be in the middle of an incubation period."

And when the hunt finds the carrier? What can be done with him?

He will have to have his gall bladder, which stores the typhoid germs, removed, said Dr. Cox.

The operation can't be forced on him, but if the carrier doesn't submit voluntarily, he will have to be prevented somehow from touching food that others will eat, or contaminating water supplies.

Summed up Dr. Thompson:

"This is going to be one of the classical . . . historical . . . reports on typhoid, no doubt about it."

3 Arrested in Death of Bartender

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An all-points bulletin issued by police Saturday resulted in the arrests of three men wanted for questioning about the killing of an off-duty bartender who refused to surrender his coin collection.

Wendell Jackson, 27, North Hollywood, was taken into custody in a Burbank donut shop. Duane Johnston, 34, Burbank, and Richard Evans, 39, Van Nuys, were booked later in Burbank on suspicion of murder.

The bartender, Michael Maroney, was shot four times in the backyard of his Van Nuys home Friday night while his wife was locked in the garage.

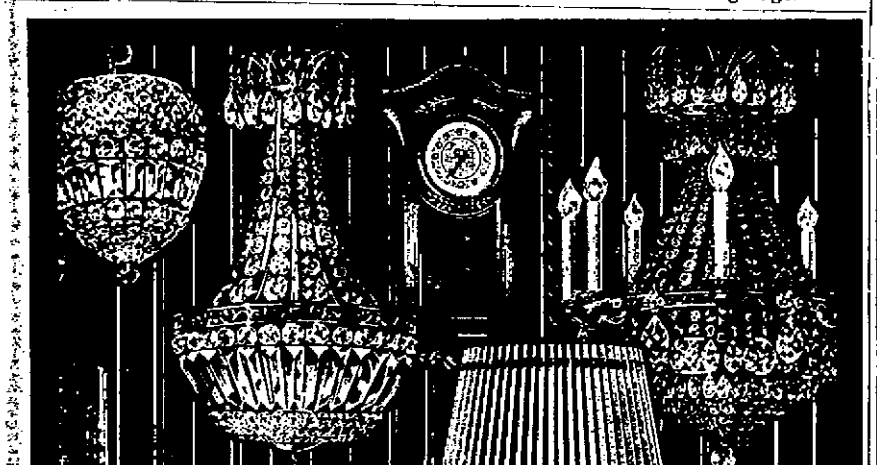

China Radios Urge Fight Against Mao

HONG KONG (AP) — Three radio stations inside Communist China are urging people in daily broadcasts to overthrow the government of Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and to join anti-Maoist guerrilla organizations, Chinese travelers from Canton reported Sunday.

The underground stations are located in the South China provinces of Kwangsi and Kwangtung and can be clearly heard only in nearby areas, the informants said. The two provinces were strongholds of anti-Maoists during the cultural revolution.

Thief Gets Guns

FREMONT (UPI) — More than 60 rifles, shotguns and pistols were stolen Friday along with several thousand rounds of ammunition from a gun shop operated by William J. Wallace.

GIRL DIES IN PIZZA MIXER

Drawn Into Vat After Trapping Hand in Machine

A 15-year-old Buena Park girl was killed Saturday in a large mixer at a pizza restaurant.

Margie West, of 5571 Kingman Ave., was pronounced dead at the Pizza Palace, 7922 Valley View Ave., by an Orange County coroner's deputy shortly after 2 p.m.

According to Buena Park Police Lt. Gary Rooney, the girl, a frequent visitor to the restaurant, had stepped into a backroom to talk to an employe who was mixing pizza dough.

John F. Hemphill, of 810 S. Canoga St., Anaheim, told police he left the room to get a food timer and returned to find the upper half of Miss West's body submerged in the vat.

The vat was disconnected and transported with the body to Troutman Family Mortuary in Buena Park after fire and rescue units were unable to free the body.

Rooney said the girl apparently placed her hand in the mixer and was caught and drawn in by the mechanism.

A coroner's spokesman said an autopsy will be conducted at the mortuary.

Reds Hit Da Nang Air Base

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces launched rocket and mortar attacks early Sunday against the U.S. Air Force base at Da Nang and three Allied outposts just south of the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam.

The U.S. command said the attack at Da Nang caused neither damage nor casualties, the rocket and mortar rounds falling into fields surrounding the base. There were no immediate details of the attacks against the positions along the DMZ, but initial reports indicated there were no casualties.

THE AREA around the coastal city of Da Nang, 380 miles northeast of Saigon, is considered a prime target in a Communist offensive the Allies are anticipating. The attack against the base at Da Nang began shortly after midnight Saturday, and the first shells were fired at the DMZ outposts about eight hours later, military spokesmen said.

B-52 bombers flew four missions early Sunday, two of the strikes in the northern sector near Hue and two hit targets in mountainous areas 121 miles southwest of Saigon. Hue, the old imperial capital, is another area expected to be a major target in any new Communist offensive.

Raid on Bars Nets 29 Guns

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Simultaneous raids on two bars resulted in confiscation of 29 guns, including a machine gun, Saturday night.

Federal gun violation charges were laid against the proprietors, Frank D. "Sonny" Sandidge, 36, and George M. Allen, 39, who were released on $500 bond.

Blind Aid Found

EDMONTON, Alta. (AP) — Engineering students at the University of Manitoba have developed an award-winning "ultrasonic mobility aid," a miniature device attached to a blind person's white cane for detection of obstacles and transmission of danger signals through a hearing aid.

Demos Set Up Consumer Complaint Centers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democratic Party, viewing the consumer affairs problem as a matter to be dealt with on the local level, is setting up centers to hear and act on consumer complaints.

The party admits there are some consumer offices set up as a part of a government department, usually in the state's attorney general's office, but says citizens are generally unaware of their existence.

The party plan also is not just to hear the consumer complaints about the products they buy but to carry them through to the point of prosecuting violators.

Mrs. Geri Joseph, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said the plan was devised because "most consumer problems are local matters" and "the consumer shouldn't have to write to the White House when a toaster breaks down or a new roof starts to leak."

She said the primary objective of the consumer action plan is to mobilize support at the local level for effective consumer offices "as a necessary part of local government."

"To be effective," Mrs. Joseph said, "these offices must be able to handle complaints quickly, investigate them promptly and take appropriate action."

She said the local offices, set up and run by Democratic organizations, would be responsible for receiving complaints, investigating them, prosecuting violators, studying consumer products and educating consumers to protect themselves.

To help the local party groups get started, Mrs. Joseph said, her office has prepared a consumer action kit outlining a plan of action.

Fire Fighters Sue

CHALMETTE, La. (UPI) — The St. Bernard Parish Firefighters Association is fed up with low pay, so it has sued the local Administration for higher wages. The suit contends beginning firemen earn only $300 a month compared with the $400 minimum provided by state law.

Report Alioto Loses Washington Job

SEATTLE (UPI) — San Francisco Mayor and anti-trust lawyer Joseph Alioto is being dismissed from his position as lawyer for the State of Washington in plumbing antitrust suits, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported in its Saturday morning editions.

In Olympia, state Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton refused to comment on the report Friday night.

Already the target of a suit seeking to recover the $2.3 million fee paid to him for work in electrical antitrust suits in Washington because of alleged fee-sharing, Alioto has been listed as counsel for the state in the plumbing antitrust case.

However, the newspaper quoted "sources in the attorney general's office" as indicating Alioto has done little or no work on the case since 1967. Most of the actual legal work has been done by Nick O'Connell, a Bellevue attorney working as counsel under Alioto, the PI said. The Bellevue attorney is no relation to former state Atty. Gen. John J. O'Connell, also named in the state suit against Alioto.

Alioto's fee in the plumbing suit is 20 per cent of the recovered damages, but it is not known how much money is due him, if any, the article said.

2 Men Hijack Airliner

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — A Netherlands Antilles Airlines plane with 32 persons aboard was hijacked to Cuba Saturday during a regularly scheduled flight from the Dominican Republic to Curacao.

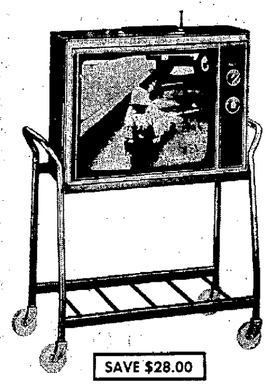

The plane's pilot, David Taver, reported to the control tower here that two young men, one of them armed with a pistol, entered the cockpit shortly after the plane had left the Dominican capital for the flight south to Curacao, principal island in the Netherlands Antilles.

President Travels

HELSINKI (UPI) — Finland's President Urho Kekkonen plans a private trip to the West Indies soon.

U.S. Relief to Nigeria War Zone Expedited

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Nigeria Saturday withdrew its hints of hostility toward a visit by Secretary of State William P. Rogers and moved its best-disciplined troops into former Biafra areas to replace men accused of terrorizing hungry refugees.

U.S. relief efforts were expedited. Fifty American jeeps that arrived Friday aboard two U.S. C-7 transport planes were being painted white and registered. The big planes made test landings at airports in the former war zone but carried no food or medical supplies.

Government sources said it was unlikely the jeeps would start moving before Monday on their 400-mile journey to Enugu, the capital of eastern Nigeria, to relieve acute transportation problems of relief workers.

"mistake of fact." He suggested that you consult an attorney about enforcing the civil aspects of the case.

Convivial Cards

Q. I am an elderly widow and just recently moved to California. Is there any place in North Long Beach where I can go to play pinochle and bridge? F.L., Long Beach.

A. Houghton Park, 6301 Myrtle Ave., is the center of activity for the Golden Club, a senior citizens group which meets on Thursday evenings for potluck dinners, dancing, cards, checkers and chess. You also might like to contact the Long Beach Recreation Department's Senior Citizen Office, 350 E. Ocean Blvd., 436-7422, for information on other senior citizens' activities. ACTION LINE receives frequent similar requests, chiefly from retired persons new in the area. Most communities in this area have municipal recreation departments which stage activities for retirees and also often have additional information on local clubs offering recreational opportunities.

Field Report

Q. Recently, I received a letter from a New York company called World Field Research which claims that I will receive money for sampling and giving up my opinion on various products if I sent them a $10 registration fee. The letter said that I had requested information on the company, but I didn't. Is this firm legitimate? N.R.W., Long Beach, and others.

A. "In light of all circumstances, the National Better Business Bureau does not regard World Field Research's advertising and promotion as in the public interest and does not transmit consumer complaints to the firm for adjustment," an NBBB spokesman told ACTION LINE. The spokesman added that the National and local Better Business Bureaus have received hundreds of inquiries and numerous complaints about the company. "Complaints have emphasized the failure on the part of World Field Research to send any of sufficient items for review, delay in payment and the small fees awarded," he said. Complaints also have reported that they are occasionally sent mail-order solicitations to purchase products, although the firm has stated that it is otherwise disassociated from product sales and does not make its mailing list available. The bureau report on the firm states that in 1967, Jack Fried, president of the company, signed an assurance of discontinuance with the New York State attorney general, consumer frauds and protection bureau. Fried agreed that his company would not represent that it was engaged in market research for sponsor clients and would not specify that particular amounts would be paid for opinions. "Current advertising has omitted such references but the mailings . . . suggest that a regular flow of merchandise to evaluate will be provided. This has not been demonstrated. In consequence, no significant part-time earnings are available," the report states.

Good Deed

Q. While visiting in Long Beach during the Christmas holidays, I noticed the ACTION LINE column and thought you might be able to help me get the ownership papers for six burial plots I bought from the Harbor Rest Memorial Park in Costa Mesa. The plots were paid for in 1961, but I have never received the deed. I wrote to them, but I haven't heard anything. W. L., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. If you will write to James Konkler, manager of Harbor Rest Memorial Park, 1625 Gisler Ave., Costa Mesa, Calif. 92626, he will send you the deeds. Konkler needs your current address and contract number. He said that the deed was sent to you at a Long Beach address on Aug. 6, 1962. The letter was forwarded to general delivery in Las Vegas. When the letter was not claimed, it was returned to Costa Mesa where it has been ever since. Konkler said he could not find any record of your correspondence.

wife, 4-year-old daughter and John went to the field early in the afternoon. The field is one where, for a reasonable price, anyone may pick a bushel of tomatoes.

"WHEN JOHN fell in," Reynolds said, "I looked down the hole and could see his face. He kept crying 'I want out, Daddy. I want out.'

"I felt helpless. The first two hours were hell. Then it dragged on to three, four and five hours."

At first, there was little that could be done. The boy was trapped in the 22-foot-long shaft, pinned against the slimy walls.

HE SCREAMED and it was feared his attempts to free himself would send him plummeting into the water below — to almost certain death.

Rescuers began digging a trench beside the well shaft, planning to dig through beneath the boy, block the well, then lift him to safety.

Knecht, a construction worker, left his job to help, bringing earth-moving equipment with him.

USING A HYDRAULIC scoop, workers began digging some three feet from the shaft, hoping the dirt and mud would not crumble about the child.

Oxygen was pumped into the well. Team and Knecht clawed through the soil from the trench, then placed several iron pipes beneath John to keep him from falling into the water.

"WHEN WE reached him, we saw his fingers moving and we knew we had it made," Team said. "I got one bar under his stomach and another under his fanny. Then he couldn't go anywhere.

"We widened the tunnel a little bit. Then we sort of twisted him around and got his head through and pulled him out."

Team said he was selected for the operation because "I'm the littlest guy in the Sheriff's Department." Team is 5-feet-3 and weighs about 150 pounds.

Portable generators had been moved into the field as darkness fell. Several hundred persons clustered about to watch the rescue operation.

There are several similar wells located on the field, but they are seldom covered — apparently because it was thought no one was small enough to fall in.

Battle's 'Battle' Jails Him

Mike Battle, New York Jets rookie safety, was free on $230 bail today after spending Friday night in jail on suspicion of disturbing the peace and being drunk and disorderly.

The former Long Beach City College and USC football star was arrested by sheriff's deputies when a brawl in which he allegedly was involved spilled into the street from a party at 4001 Crest Drive, El Porta, in the Lennox area.

Bail on the original counts was set at $125. Then, according to police, it was learned Battle had two unanswered traffic warrants in the area and another $105 was tacked to the bail.

Lennox station deputies said Battle, who lives at 5218 Flagstone St., refused to make his one phone call and elected to stay in jail.

He was freed on bail at 11:35 Saturday morning.

Mother Charged in Bank Heist

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Bail was set at $1,000 Saturday for a welfare mother of four who told police she held up a bank because she needed the money to buy food and clothing for her children.

Mrs. Gloria Ann Lee, 30, was arrested at her home. Police said she was identified from pictures taken by a hidden camera last Saturday during a holdup at the First Wisconsin National Bank. About $1,600 was taken.

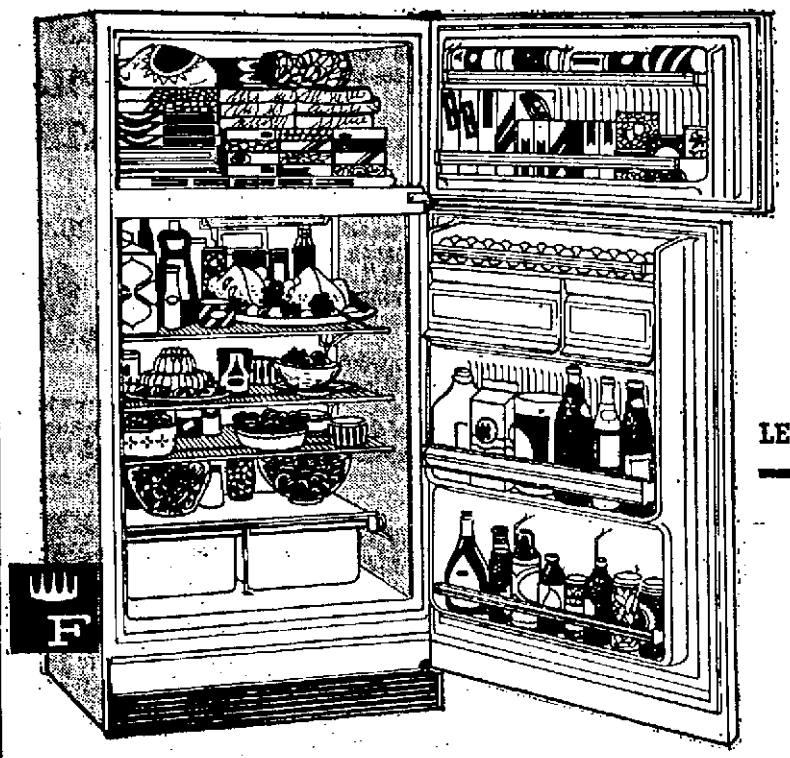

None of the money was recovered, but police said large quantities of groceries were found in her home.

Russ Tour Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Eleven Russian journalists Saturday wound up a three day tour of the Chicago area with stops at an Operation Breadbasket meeting and a tour of the Negro newspaper, the Daily Defender. Then they left for San Francisco.

Why No Audit? Asks Bishop

S. Hollinger had been "most receptive" to the Grand Jury suggestions regarding installation of the machinery to produce comprehensive audits for the county.

"He realizes," Bishop said, "as do most thoughtful businessmen, that the audit is a benefit, not an imposition. It is the best protection you can have for heading off problems before they materialize and hurt you."

Bishop pointed out that the County of San Diego has engaged an outside auditor to sign a comprehensive audit of its finances for years.

"I'M OF THE opinion that if San Diego County can do it, we can do it," Bishop said.

The mode would be different, Bishop added, but the effect would be the same.

The Grand Jury recommended that the county's internal audit department be strengthened to allow systematic auditing of a third of the county's departments each year.

By the end of the third year, the audits of all departments would be available and an outside auditing firm — perhaps spot-checking certain departments to establish information — would then be able to endorse the county's finances as accurate.

"AFTER THAT first three-year cycle," Bishop said, "it would be easier in ensuing years for the audits to be performed. The internal auditors would have a basis for new evaluations, and the outside auditor would have two bases for his decisions.

"Everything may be all right with the county," Bishop said. "But the only way you know it's all right for sure is if you audit.

"Right now, we don't have an audit by either the internal audit department or the outside auditor that tells anyone anything about the condition of county finances."

BISHOP SAID the members of the 1969 Grand Jury were in general agreement that the audit need should be a high priority item for action.

There were other matters on which their concern also ran high.

"One was the situation with contract cities, where some cities are using county services at below cost. The law, as interpreted by the county counsel, says the county can't do that. The Grand Jury says it has to stop the practice.

"ANOTHER thing was county land uses and rentals. There has to be some uniform plan there that will prevent irregularities in rentals and leases from cropping up."

Bishop, whose work in making Walker's one of the Long Beach area's most successful department stores, said he was personally appalled by the rise in the cost of county government.

Just 30 years ago, the county budget was $95 million. In 1969, the figure had skyrocketed to $1.77 billion.

County manpower also leaped commensurately over the 30-year span, from 16,394 to 66,428.

"IT'S REALLY a question of how much service the county should — or can — provide. If it continues to mount the way it has been, it could mark the end of the golden era we've known in this area.

"Services have to be paid for, and it is taxes that pay for them. Some businesses are going to take a look at the high taxes here and locate elsewhere, and if business stays out, the tax base for home and property owners would rise to a terrible size."

BISHOP assumed the job of Grand Jury chairman in January, 1969, with the theory that criticisms of the jury process were invalid, that the jury was actually the most representative body our system of governmental checks and balances had yet devised.

His year of service has reinforced that view.

"The Grand Jury," he said, "is one part of the Establishment that definitely ought to be retained."

IT IS composed of citizens — last year's jury included a Mexican-American, a Filipino, a Chinese and two Negroes — who have enough authority through the subpoena power to summon anyone before it.

"Without the Grand Jury," Bishop questioned, "who would be able to hold the supervisors and their nearly $2 billion budget to account?"

HE PRAISED the "spirit of cooperation" which marked the 1969 jury.

"I'm convinced," he said, "that you should continue to get 23 fresh jurors annually to look at government through their own eyes, using their own backgrounds and objectively viewing this government.

"I think the real key to the success of the jury is the selection by Superior Court judges. I can't think of any place in our society where you'd get such a high caliber of person to make the selection than these judges.

"When you've got 160 or so judges, each selecting two people, you're bound to get a good cross-section for the jury."

Rising Drugs Use 'Scares' Jury Chief

Rising narcotics use — particularly by young people — is "one of the most frightening things that I learned during my year on the Grand Jury," outgoing chairman Joseph F. Bishop believes.

"The growing incidence of usage by young children — of both drugs and marijuana — was staggering," Bishop said.

Bishop cited a presentation by a UCLA professor on drug and narcotics use before the jurors. "After he finished, I went up and told him that what he said had actually frightened me. He said 'Good. We need a lot more people to be frightened by this situation.'"

BISHOP SAID HE personally blamed the rise in drug usage on the corresponding decline in family life.

"All around you," he said, "you can see families breaking up. They have this new divorce law — about all you have to do to get a divorce is clap your hands three times — and kids are running all over the streets. The illegitimacy rate is up and still growing.

"I feel that the strongest thing in the world is the family unit. To see it break down, and to see the result it has on children, is very depressing."

HE SAID THE UNCERTAINTY which dogs today's youth also faces their parents.

"Small businesses have all but disappeared — the corner grocer, I mean. I've talked to some fathers who asked me what jobs would provide the best future for their sons, and in the course of the conversation I found out they weren't really sure of their own jobs."

That there is something drastically wrong with the quality of American life today is inescapeable, Bishop feels.

"I say I'm frightened about the use of narcotics and drugs, and I am," he said. "But these things are effects, not causes.

"If we're going to solve the problem of drug abuse, we're going to have to look for the reasons young people take them in the first place."

BLAST SHATTERS APARTMENT WALL

An explosion shattered an unoccupied Carson apartment building Saturday afternoon, blowing out one wall and heavily damaging five rooms.

The explosion in the three-unit, one-story building at 23306½ Ravenna Drive also touched off a small fire, according to County Fire Capt. Gary Henry.

Damage was estimated at about $20,000 to the structure and $3,000 to its contents, he said.

Six county fire units, under Battalion Chief Tom Rehm, were summoned to the scene about 5 p.m. and extinguished the fire.

According to Rehm, the blast was apparently touched off by a leaking gas line behind a refrigerator in one of the apartments.

Murder, Suicide; 5 Killed

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (UPI) — Five members of a family were shot to death in their Blackfoot home Saturday in what police describe as an apparent murder-suicide.

Police Lt. Larry Hultz identified the victims as Gary Powell, 35, his wife, Verla, 33, and three children — Lisa 5, Christina, 3, and Stephen, 1.

Hultz said a sixth member of the family, 13-year-old Kevin Garidikas, fled the house "when the first shot was fired" and alerted neighbors, who called police. The youth was identified as a son of Mrs. Powell by a previous marriage.

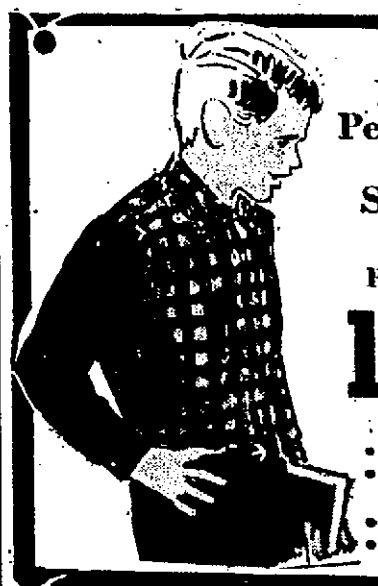

Officers said Powell apparently shot his wife and children with a high powered rifle, then turned the gun on himself.

No Woman Envoy for Vatican

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican has rejected the nomination of a German female diplomat who would have been the first woman ever in the Vatican diplomatic corps, an informed source in the corps said Saturday.

The source identified her as Elizabeth Mueller, 44, currently with West Germany's commercial delegation in Prague.

The rejection was confirmed by Msgr. Fausto Vaillainc, Vatican press spokesman, who said it was because of "an old instruction in Vatican protocol."

CAUSE OF DISEASE STILL MYSTERY

quarantine, the first seen in Vancouver since before World War II.

Since then, at least 70 persons, from London to California to Vancouver, have been hospitalized by the outbreak. A force of more than 100 doctors and laboratory technicians has been mobilized, working 16-hour days to track down the carrier on the ship.

Five suspected carriers have been turned up, federal sources revealed Friday. Tests showed all five have been infected, but they show no sign of being ill themselves — the telltale mark of the carrier.

"The incubation period is from 10 to 14 days," the official said. "All five may develop typhoid," the source said, but any who don't get sick — "they'll be positive carriers."

AND DAY after day, the Oronsay, built for those who like to travel in leisure and style, sways at anchor in the harbor. The 900 passengers and 600 crewmen set off on a cruise in the sun. Now, they are trapped aboard until the three-nation research team determines which one of them carries the typhoid seed.

It may take up to another three weeks, health officials say.

The passengers amuse themselves as best they can. Extra movies were put aboard "Calamity Jane" was the feature one night. They fish in the harbor from the deck, catching dogfish and young salmon, and took at least one "mini-cruise" up the Strait of Georgia and back.

"It was just to give the passengers a change of pace," said a spokesman for the Peninsular and Oriental Line, the ship's owner.

"They're a remarkably cheery group," said the president of the line's North American branch, George Turner of San Francisco.

"They have the usual cruise program, and fun and games."

PASSENGERS do indeed seem to be living it up.

"I wouldn't say that everyone is overly worried about the outbreak," said Bruce Cooke, 23, of Melbourne, who boarded the vessel at Southampton, England.

"The young people are taking it alright, as long as the money holds out there's more danger of getting cirrhosis of the liver than typhoid," he joked.

"We had a party last night that didn't end until seven o'clock this morning. The morale is rather high, but I've about had it though."

The passengers first heard about the outbreak shortly after Capt. Wacher received the warning from the U.S. Public Health Service. Wacher told them over the public address system.

"We all received little notes in our cabins telling us we had to report on the veranda deck in the bow by 7 a.m.," said Mrs. F. B. Chauvin of Montreal, who boarded the liner in Florida.

SHE SAID inoculations were started immediately but "everybody was unconcerned, life went on as usual."

Under international law, typhoid is not a quarantable disease but even before the ship's arrival, British Columbia Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's department had issued a directive that none of those on board should be permitted to disembark.

A medical team headed by Dr. G. A. Mott, Vancouver deputy medical health officer, boarded the Oronsay and 18 persons, including three passengers, were immediately dispatched to local hospitals as suspected typhoid cases.

Although they could prevent any passengers from getting off, Vancouver and Canadian officials were powerless to keep the Oronsay from sailing on to Honolulu.

The P & O Line cooperated, slapping its own quarantine on the ship and has agreed to keep it in Vancouver for at least another week.

"Our principle concern is to find the carrier to stop the disease from spreading. If the Oronsay is allowed out of port it will be like a floating bomb," Dr. Mott was quoted as saying.

ONCE A common disease in North America, because of poor sanitation, typhoid is now so rare few doctors specialize in the field. But the microscope detectives began to gather.

Dr. Ken Cox, Vancouver director of federal medical services for the Department of National Health and Welfare, took over the investigation. He was joined by the department's regional director, Dr. R. David Thompson, and the chief of laboratory services for the Provincial Health Department, Dr. Ernest J. Bowmer.

P&O Lines sent its medical superintendent, Dr. J. H. Newnham, from London, and he took up residence in the ship.

Dr. John Davis, the Canadian government's top epidemiologist, arrived from Ottawa. Dr. Andrew Mallory of the U.S. Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, was sent as an observer, because the Oronsay's next port of call is Honolulu.

They turned up two clues:

First, the liner's drinking water system was "contaminated with human waste," revealed Thompson.

Second, the typhoid strain was identified as the "K-1 Phage" from the Indian subcontinent.

The ship has about 40 crewmen from Goa, India. Health officials say they are not special suspects, that anyone aboard who has travelled in India could also have picked up the germs.

Thompson indicated the disease probably spread from the wastes of the carrier into the drinking water system, and the water spread the infection.

"I wouldn't be satisfied there isn't a carrier on that ship until we have stool examinations on every person and then maybe repeat some," he said.

ENGINEERS were sent aboard, plans of the ship's plumbing were being flown in from England, and dyes were poured into toilets, all in hopes of tracing the leak. Authorities said that in the maze of ship's plumbing, "it's like looking for a needle in a haystack."

Meanwhile, the number of suspected and confirmed cases mounted daily. After a week, there were 63 in Vancouver hospitals, the six in California, and one crewman who left the ship earlier was hospitalized in London.

Health authorities, warning "it's going to get worse," told hospitals to be prepared for new cases daily.

They made an exception of the quarantine rule when the Oronsay docked for 160 passengers, including 23 from the U.S., who had planned to get off there. They were let go with strict warnings to report to their local health officials, their names were wired ahead as insurance, and seek immediate treatment if they felt sick.

One of the women returned four days later, and was hospitalized as a suspected case, giving rise to fears other infected passengers could have been dropped off at the 11 earlier ports of call.

In California, State Health Director Dr. Louis F. Saylor warned passengers who got off in Los Angeles and San Francisco to check in with their doctors.

In Fort Everglades, Fla., health officials were searching for the 150 passengers who left the Oronsay there.

"THESE people have to be found and watched," said Dr. Paul Hughes, county health director. "They could be in the middle of an incubation period."

And when the hunt finds the carrier? What can be done with him?

He will have to have his gall bladder, which stores the typhoid germs, removed, said Dr. Cox.

The operation can't be forced on him, but if the carrier doesn't submit voluntarily, he will have to be prevented somehow from touching food that others will eat, or contaminating water supplies.

Summed up Dr. Thompson:

"This is going to be one of the classical . . . historical . . . reports on typhoid, no doubt about it."

3 Arrested in Death of Bartender

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An all-points bulletin issued by police Saturday resulted in the arrests of three men wanted for questioning about the killing of an off-duty bartender who refused to surrender his coin collection.

Wendell Jackson, 27, North Hollywood, was taken into custody in a Burbank donut shop. Duane Johnston, 34, Burbank, and Richard Evans, 39, Van Nuys, were booked later in Burbank on suspicion of murder.

The bartender, Michael Maroney, was shot four times in the backyard of his Van Nuys home Friday night while his wife was locked in the garage.

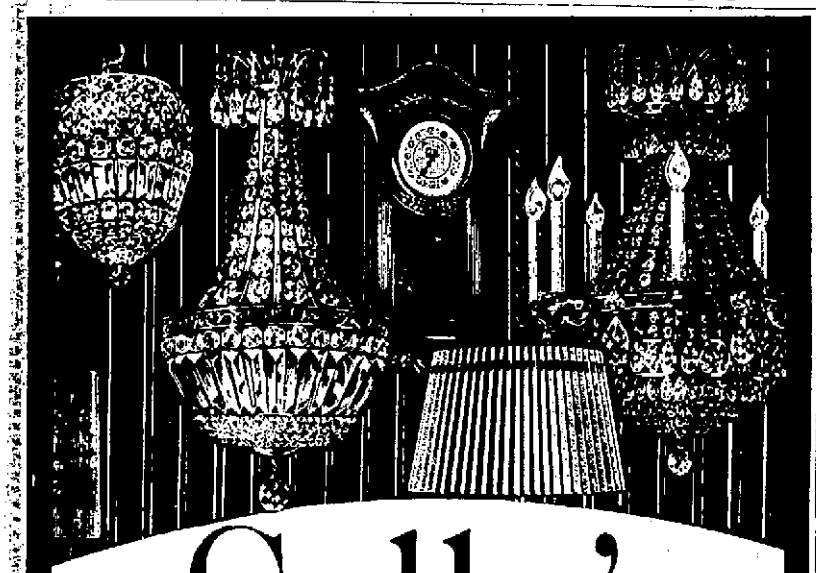

China Radios Urge Fight Against Mao

HONG KONG (AP) — Three radio stations inside Communist China are urging people in daily broadcasts to overthrow the government of Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and to join anti-Maoist guerrilla organizations, Chinese travelers from Canton reported Sunday.

The underground stations are located in the South China provinces of Kwangsi and Kwangtung and can be clearly heard only in nearby areas, the informants said. The two provinces were strongholds of anti-Maoists during the cultural revolution.

Thief Gets Guns

FREMONT (UPI) — More than 60 rifles, shotguns and pistols were stolen Friday along with several thousand rounds of ammunition from a gun shop operated by William J. Wallace.

Lawyer Discipline Studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. X hired a lawyer to represent her in a divorce case. He sent her a bill for $15,000.

She paid $7,500. He demanded the rest. She sought the advice of the disciplinary agency of his state bar association. Investigation determined that the lawyer's services were worth $3,000 at most.

The agency negotiated the return of $4,500. Should the lawyer be let free to overcharge the next client who might not report his complaint?

How should the discipline of the nation's 350,000 lawyers be financed? Should investigations be confined to sworn complaints?

How can discipline be administered in small towns where lawyers and judges are on a first-name basis?

THESE QUESTIONS are being tackled by a special American Bar Association committee headed by retired Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark.

The groups has just released a 253-page preliminary report on the problems of bar discipline and how they can be solved. Since the committee was appointed in 1967, it has conducted hearings in New York, Washington, Miami, Denver, San Francisco, Boston, Dallas and Chicago.

It heard stories like that of Mrs. X.

The hearings alone moved several states, notably Pennsylvania and Michigan, to start working on improved disciplinary machinery.

The Clark group would like its recommendations, if adopted in final form at the Bar Association's Convention in August, turned over to a national conference on disciplinary enforcement. This body would assist state and local bars in setting up more effecive programs.

The Clark committee recommended a centralized program in each state, with a professional staff to carry it on.

IT ALSO approved the creation of a national discipline data bank which is scheduled to begin operating April 1 in Chicago. The purpose is to keep records so a lawyer disciplined in one place cannot easily move elsewhere and hang out his shingle again.

Other suggestions:

— Encouragement of investigations by newspapers or insurance associations, without waiting for complaints, into "known areas of systematic misconduct."

— Abolition of all requirements for sworn complaints which might discourage the airing of legitimate grievances.

— Court rules providing immunity from suits for persons making complaints.

— Immediate suspension of a lawyer convicted of a serious crime.

— Elimination of the jury trial in disciplinary proceedings.

Policeman Slain, 1 Shot by Airman

DETROIT (AP) — One Detroit policeman was slain and another critically wounded Saturday as they went to a home in search of a stolen motorcycle.

Within two hours a 19-year-old airman listed as absent without leave was arrested in connection with the shootings.

Patrolman Richard Woyshner, 47, died in Ford Hospital. Patrolman George Tavoularis, 34, was reported in critical condition. Both had been shot in the chest.

Held without charge for questioning was James Fielder Jr., of Detroit, whom the Air Force had asked police to pick up on an accusation of being away without leave since last Dec. 26. He was arrested at the home of relatives.

U.S. Relief to Nigeria War Zone Expedited

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Nigeria Saturday withdrew its hints of hostility toward a visit by Secretary of State William P. Rogers and moved its best-disciplined troops into former Biafra areas to replace them accused of terrorizing hungry refugees.

U.S. relief efforts were expedited. Fifty American jeeps that arrived Friday aboard two U.S. C-7 transport planes were being painted white and registered. The big planes made test landings at airports in the former war zone but carried no food or medical supplies.

Government sources said it was unlikely the jeeps would start moving before Monday on their 400-mile journey to Enugu, the capital of eastern Nigeria, to relieve acute transportation problems of relief workers.

Convivial Cards

Q. I am an elderly widow and just recently moved to California. Is there any place in North Long Beach where I can go to play pinochle and bridge? F.L., Long Beach.

A. Houghton Park, 6301 Myrtle Ave., is the center of activity for the Golden Club, a senior citizens group which meets on Thursday evenings for potluck dinners, dancing, cards, checkers and chess. You also might like to contact the Long Beach Recreation Department's Senior Citizen Office, 350 E. Ocean Blvd., 436-7422, for information on other senior citizens' activities. ACTION LINE receives frequent similar requests, chiefly from retired persons new in the area. Most communities in this area have municipal recreation departments which stage activities for retirees and also often have additional information on local clubs offering recreational opportunities.

Field Report

Q. Recently, I received a letter from a New York company called World Field Research which claims that I will receive money for sampling and giving up my opinion on various products if I sent them a $10 registration fee. The letter said that I had requested information on the company, but I didn't. Is this firm legitimate? N.R.W., Long Beach, and others.

A. "In light of all circumstances, the National Better Business Bureau does not regard World Field Research's advertising and promotion as in the public interest and does not transmit consumer complaints to the firm for adjustment," an NBBB spokesman told ACTION LINE. The spokesman added that the National and local Better Business Bureaus have received hundreds of inquiries and numerous complaints about the company. "Complaints have emphasized the failure on the part of World Field Research to send any of sufficient items for review, delay in payment and the small fees awarded," he said. Complaints also have reported that they are occasionally sent mail-order solicitations to purchase products, although the firm has stated that it is otherwise disassociated from product sales and does not make its mailing list available. The bureau report on the firm states that in 1967, Jack Fried, president of the company, signed an assurance of discontinuance with the New York State attorney general, consumer frauds and protection bureau. Fried agreed that his company would not represent that it was engaged in market research for sponsor clients and would not specify that particular amounts would be paid for opinions. "Current advertising has omitted such references but the mailings . . . suggest that a regular flow of merchandise to evaluate will be provided. This has not been demonstrated. In consequence, no significant part-time earnings are available," the report states.

Good Deed

Q. While visiting in Long Beach during the Christmas holidays, I noticed the ACTION LINE column and thought you might be able to help me get the ownership papers for six burial plots I bought from the Harbor Rest Memorial Park in Costa Mesa. The plots were paid for in 1961, but I have never received the deed. I wrote to them, but I haven't heard anything. W. L., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. If you will write to James Konkler, manager of Harbor Rest Memorial Park, 1625 Gisler Ave., Costa Mesa, Calif. 92626, he will send you the deeds. Konkler needs your current address and contract number. He said that the deed was sent to you at a Long Beach address on Aug. 6, 1962. The letter was forwarded to general delivery in Las Vegas. When the letter was not claimed, it was returned to Costa Mesa where it has been ever since. Konkler said he could not find any record of your correspondence.

Mother Charged in Bank Heist

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Bail was set at $1,000 Saturday for a welfare mother of four who told police she held up a bank because she needed the money to buy food and clothing for her children.

Mrs. Gloria Ann Lee, 30, was arrested at her home. Police said she was identified from pictures taken by a hidden camera last Saturday during a holdup at the First Wisconsin National Bank. About $1,600 was taken.

None of the money was recovered, but police said large quantities of groceries were found in her home.

Russ Tour Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Eleven Russian journalists Saturday wound up a three day tour of the Chicago area with stops at an Operation Breadbasket meeting and a tour of the Negro newspaper, the Daily Defender. Then they left for San Francisco.

wife, 4-year-old daughter and John went to the field early in the afternoon. The field is one where, for a reasonable price, anyone may pick a bushel of tomatoes.

"WHEN JOHN fell in," Reynolds said, "I looked down the hole and could see his face. He kept crying 'I want out, Daddy. I want out.'

"I felt helpless. The first two hours were hell. Then it dragged on to three, four and five hours."

At first, there was little that could be done. The boy was trapped in the 22-foot-long shaft, pinned against the slimy walls.

HE SCREAMED and it was feared his attempts to free himself would send him plummeting into the water below — to almost certain death.

Rescuers began digging a trench beside the well shaft, planning to dig t hrough beneath the boy, block the well, then lift him to safety.

Knecht, a construction worker, left his job to help, bringing earth-moving equipment with him.

USING A HYDRAULIC scoop, workers began digging some three feet from the shaft, hoping the dirt and mud would not crumble about the child.

Oxygen was pumped into the well. Team and Knecht clawed through the soil from the trench, then placed several iron pipes beneath John to keep him from falling into the water.

"WHEN WE reached him, we saw his fingers moving and we knew we had it made," Team said. "I got one bar under his stomach and another under his fanny. Then he couldn't go anywhere.

"We widened the tunnel a little bit. Then we sort of twisted him around and got his head through and pulled him out."

Team said he was selected for the operation because "I'm the littlest guy in the Sheriff's Department." Team is 5-feet-3 and weighs about 150 pounds.

Portable generators had been moved into the field as darkness fell. Several hundred persons clustered about to watch the rescue operation.

There are several similar wells located on the field, but they are seldom covered — apparently because it was thought no one was small enough to fall in.

Battle's 'Battle' Jails Him

Mike Battle, New York Jets rookie safety, was free on $230 bail today after spending Friday night in jail on suspicion of disturbing the peace and being drunk and disorderly.

The former Long Beach City College and USC football star was arrested by sheriff's deputies when a brawl in which he allegedly was involved spilled into the street from a party at 4001 Crest Drive, El Porta, in the Lennox area.

Bail on the original counts was set at $125. Then, according to police, it was learned Battle had two unanswered traffic warrants in the area and another $105 was tacked to the bail.

Lennox station deputies said Battle, who lives at 5218 Flagstone St., refused to make his one phone call and elected to stay in jail.

He was freed on bail at 11:35 Saturday morning.

Poisoned Children in Coma

WWI Gas Remedy Used; Hogs Fed Bad Grain Traced

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Doctors, lacking a better treatment, are using a World War I mustard gas remedy to fight acute mercury poisoning that put two children in a coma and left their older sister blinded and paralyzed.

The three members of the Ernest Huckleby family of nearby Alamogordo, N.M., ages 8, 13 and 20, became ill after eating pork from a hog their father butchered last September. The hog had been fed feed grain treated with a methyl-mercury fungicide.

"NOBODY HAS any experience in this area to tell us what to do," the Huckleby's physician, Dr. Laurance Nickey, said.

"Acute mercury poisoning is very rare and no one has ever found an effective drug to fight it."

Meanwhile, a packing company in Roswell, N.M., announced Saturday that 11 unaccounted for hogs that were among more than 30 animals sold on two occasions for slaughter after being fed the poisoned grain had now been traced.

"All meat from the 11 suspected hogs has been accounted for," said H. F. Glover of Glover Packing Co. "A majority had not left the plant."

A spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington said there is a lot of meat under detention which may come from the 11 hogs but "we wouldn't say at this time we have all the meat for sure."

The first Huckleby child, Ernestine, 8, became sick in December. Her illness puzzled doctors. Then earlier this month, Dorothy, 20, and Amos, 13, became ill.

Yablonski Case Wider as Jury Subpoenas 20

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — More than 20 persons from "all walks of life" have been subpoenaed for a grand jury investigation of the slayings of United Mine Workers insurgent Joseph Yablonski, his wife and daughter, U.S. Atty. Robert B. Krupansky said Saturday.

Three Cleveland men have been charged with murder by authorities from Pennsylvania, where the slayings occurred.

Krupansky said the probe into the "broadening aspects of the Yablonski investigation" would begin Tuesday and take a number of days. He said it would involve "states other than Ohio" but declined to name them.

ASKED ABOUT an account in the New York Times that a federal investigation was reported to be focusing on a large sum of money promised the killers by a group of persons in the Tennessee-Kentucky coal fields, Krupansky said: "At this point we have not subpoenaed anyone as relates to that specific question."

FBI warrants said plans to kill Yablonski were being made as long ago as July 19.

The three men charged with the slayings, Claude E. Vealey, 26, Aubran W. Martin, 21, and Paul E. Gilly, 36, have been in custody since Wednesday night in Cleveland.

There were these other developments Saturday:

—Pennsylvania state police and FBI skin divers combed the Monongahela River at Fredericktown, about three miles from the Yablonski home in Clarksville, scene of the killings. The searchers, working out of two rowboats used a magnet and grappling hook, and it was reported by residents of the area that a high-powered rifle had been recovered. Authorities declined comment on the dragging operations.

Authorities have said the Yablonskis were shot with a .38-caliber weapon, but police also found a copper-jacketed bullet believed to have been fired from a .30-caliber weapon.

—Mike Trbovich, Yablonski's campaign manager in his unsuccessful bid for the presidency of the UMW, sent a telegram to UMW President W. A. "Tony" Boyle and other top UMW officials calling for their resignations. The telegram charged the officials condoned irregularities and misuse of union funds.

—Mrs. Mabel Vealey, mother of one of the accused men, said her son had never worked in the coal mines and added: "I don't believe he did it. He's not that kind of person."

All three men charged are long-time Cleveland area residents, but were born in coal mining regions, Martin and Vealey in West Virginia and Gilly in Kentucky, according to the U.S. marshall's office.

No connection between the accused men and the UMW has been announced by the FBI.

JOSEPH YABLONSKI slayer suspect, Claude E. Vealey, 26, is escorted back to Cuyahoga County jail by an FBI agent after 12 hours of questioning by federal investigators. Vealey is one of three Cleveland men charged by Pennsylvania authorities with the killing of three people, including Yablonski, the leader of an opposition faction within the United Mine Workers, his wife and daughter. Vealey is an Ohio State Reformatory parolee.

NANTUCKET ISLAND FED BY AIRLIFT

United Press International

Thirty one thousand pounds of food was airlifted across the icebound Nantucket Harbor Saturday to year round residents of Nantucket Island, whose regular ferry service was unable to get through the sometimes three-foot thick ice.

There was no serious shortage of food for the 3,000 residents of the summer playground island who have been without the ferry service four days, officials said. Executive airlines made half a dozen 20-minute flights, carrying mostly perishables, and officials reported the islanders were bearing up in the best of Yankee stoic good humor.

Cargo Plane Crash Kills Two Aboard

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Two men were killed Saturday when the twin-engine cargo plane they were flying crashed southwest of Kalamazoo.

Police identified the victims as Melvin Wilcox, about 50, of Chesterfield, Ohio, and Donald Grizzel, 36, of Bedford, Ohio, pilot and copilot.

PRINCESS LOUISE II, III

2 More Liners to Be Restaurants

The owner of the S.S. Princess Louise ship restaurant has purchased two more ocean-going passenger liners for conversion to restaurants.

One will be moored in Vancouver and the other in an as yet unnamed port, according to Jerry Sutton, owner-operator of the Louise.

"The fleet will be enlarged even further as adaptable ships become available and proper port facilities can be developed," Sutton said Saturday.

THE NEW ships will be rechristened Princess Louise II and III.

Princess II, which has been operating as a cruise ship out of Vancouver, is now in drydock in that city, being remodeled.

Princess III, a 37-year veteran of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Line, is temporarily moored in Seattle awaiting remodeling.

She is a miniature duplicate of the Queen Mary.

Negotiations are under way with officials in Acapulco, Honolulu, San Francisco and San Diego for possible berth space, Sutton said.

The original S.S. Princess Louise, permanently moored at Terminal Island, has grossed over $2 million a year since it opened in 1966.

BONN (AP) — West Germany's minister for economic cooperation, Erhard Eppler, is flying to New York for the first meeting Monday of the United Nations population fund consultative committee. He will meet Tuesday with World Bank President Robert McNamara on development aid projects.

Pair Held in $20,000 Bank Theft

KINGMAN, Ariz. (UPI) — Mrs. Marilyn M. Champion, 20, was arrested Saturday on charges of embezzling more than $20,000 from the First National Bank of Santa Fe, N.M., where she was employed as a teller.

Mrs. Champion and her husband, Melvin, 23, were found in the rear of a pickup camper truck, driven by her father, Ruben Martin, 51, Scottsdale, Ariz., according to the FBI.

Mrs. Champion was held at the Mohave County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond. She will be arraigned before a U.S. commissioner on Monday. Her husband was arrested on charges of aiding a felon. Martin wasn't arrested.

Rising Drugs Use 'Scares' Jury Chief

Rising narcotics use — particularly by young people — is "one of the most frightening things that I learned during my year on the Grand Jury," outgoing chairman Joseph F. Bishop believes.

"The growing incidence of usage by young children — of both drugs and marijuana — was staggering," Bishop said.

Bishop cited a presentation by a UCLA professor on drug and narcotics use before the jurors. "After he finished, I went up and told him that what he said had actually frightened me. He said 'Good. We need a lot more people to be frightened by this situation."

BISHOP SAID HE personally blamed the rise in drug usage on the corresponding decline in family life.

"All around you," he said, "you can see families breaking up. They have this new divorce law — about all you have to do to get a divorce is clap your hands three times — and kids are running all over the streets. The illegitimacy rate is up and still growing.

"I feel that the strongest thing in the world is the family unit. To see it break down, and to see the result it has on children, is very depressing."

HE SAID THE UNCERTAINTY which dogs today's youth also faces their parents.

"Small businesses have all but disappeared — the corner grocer, I mean. I've talked to some fathers who asked me what jobs would provide the best future for their sons, and in the course of the conversation I found out they weren't really sure of their own jobs."

That there is something drastically wrong with the quality of American life today is inescapeable, Bishop feels.

"I say I'm frightened about the use of narcotics and drugs, and I am," he said. "But these things are effects, not causes.

"If we're going to solve the problem of drug abuse, we're going to have to look for the reasons young people take them in the first place."

S. Hollinger had been "most receptive" to the Grand Jury suggestions regarding installation of the machinery to produce comprehensive audits for the county.

"He realizes," Bishop said, "as do most thoughtful businessmen, that the audit is a benefit, not an imposition. It is the best protection you can have for heading off problems before they materialize and hurt you."

Bishop pointed out that the County of San Diego has engaged an outside auditor to sign a comprehensive audit of its finances for years.

"I'M OF THE opinion that if San Diego County can do it, we can do it," Bishop said.

The mode would be different, Bishop added, but the effect would be the same.

The Grand Jury recommended that the county's internal audit department be strengthened to allow systematic auditing of a third of the county's departments each year.

By the end of the third year, the audits of all departments would be available and an outside auditing firm — perhaps spot-checking certain departments to establish information — would then be able to endorse the county's finances as accurate.

"AFTER THAT first three-year cycle," Bishop said, "it would be easier in ensuing years for the audits to be performed. The internal auditors would have a basis for new evaluations, and the outside auditor would have two bases for his decisions.

"Everything may be all right with the county," Bishop said. "But the only way you know it's all right for sure is if you audit.

"Right now, we don't have an audit by either the internal audit department or the outside auditor that tells anyone anything about the condition of county finances."

BISHOP SAID the members of the 1969 Grand Jury were in general agreement that the audit need should be a high priority item for action.

There were other matters on which their concern also ran high.

"One was the situation with contract cities, where some cities are using county services at below cost. The law, as interpreted by the county counsel, says the county can't do that. The Grand Jury says it has to stop the practice.

"ANOTHER thing was county land uses and rentals. There has to be some uniform plan there that will prevent irregularities in rentals and leases from cropping up."

Bishop, whose work in making Walker's one of the Long Beach area's most successful department stores, said he was personally appalled by the rise in the cost of county government.

Just 30 years ago, the county budget was $95 million. In 1969, the figure had skyrocketed to $1.77 billion.

County manpower also leaped commensurately over the 30-year span, from 16,394 to 66,428.

"IT'S REALLY a question of how much service the county should — or can — provide. If it continues to mount the way it has been, it could mark the end of the golden era we've known in this area.

"Services have to be paid for, and it is taxes that pay for them. Some businesses are going to take a look at the high taxes here and locate elsewhere, and if business stays out, the tax base for home and property owners would rise to a terrible size."

BISHOP assumed the job of Grand Jury chairman in January, 1969, with the theory that criticisms of the jury process were invalid, that the jury was actually the most representative body our system of governmental checks and balances had yet devised.

His year of service has reinforced that view.

"The Grand Jury," he said, "is one part of the Establishment that definitely ought to be retained."

IT IS composed of citizens — last year's jury included a Mexican-American, a Filipino, a Chinese and two Negroes — who have enough authority through the subpoena power to summon anyone before it.

"Without the Grand Jury," Bishop questioned, "who would be able to hold the supervisors and their nearly $2 billion budget to account?"

HE PRAISED the "spirit of cooperation" which marked the 1969 jury.

"I'm convinced," he said, "that you should continue to get 23 fresh jurors annually to look at government through their own eyes, using their own backgrounds and objectively viewing this government.

"I think the real key to the success of the jury is the selection by Superior Court judges. I can't think of any place in our society where you'd get such a high caliber of person to make the selection than these judges.

"When you've got 160 or so judges, each selecting two people, you're bound to get a good cross-section for the jury."

BLAST SHATTERS APARTMENT WALL

An explosion shattered an unoccupied Carson apartment building Saturday afternoon, blowing out one wall and heavily damaging five rooms.

The explosion in the three-unit, one-story building at 23306½ Ravenna Drive also touched off a small fire, according to County Fire Capt. Gary Henry.

Damage was estimated at about $20,000 to the structure and $3,000 to its contents, he said.

Six county fire units, under Battalion Chief Tom Rehm, were summoned to the scene about 5 p.m. and extinguished the fire.

According to Rehm, the blast was apparently touched off by a leaking gas line behind a refrigerator in one of the apartments.

Murder, Suicide; 5 Killed

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (AP) — Five members of a family were shot to death in their Blackfoot home Saturday in what police describe as an apparent murder-suicide.

Police Lt. Larry Hultz identified the victims as Gary Powell, 35, his wife, Verla, 33, and three children — Lisa 5, Christina, 3, and Stephen, 1.

Hultz said a sixth member of the family, 13-year-old Kevin Garidikas, fled the house "when the first shot was fired" and alerted neighbors, who called police. The youth was identified as a son of Mrs. Powell by a previous marriage.

Officers said Powell apparently shot his wife and children with a high powered rifle, then turned the gun on himself.

No Woman Envoy for Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has rejected the nomination of a German female diplomat who would have been the first woman ever in the Vatican diplomatic corps, an informed source in the corps said Saturday.

The source identified her as Elizabeth Mueller, 44, currently with West Germany's commercial delegation in Prague.

The rejection was confirmed by Msgr. Fausto Vaillainc, Vatican press spokesman, who said it was because of "an old instruction in Vatican protocol."

L.B. Auto Dealers Provide Data on Safety Factors in New Cars

By BILL HOMER
Staff Writer

The "Big Three" auto makers have complied with a Department of Transportation consumer information regulation, which requires them to supply prospective customers with certain safety statistics.

Foreign car manufacturers also were checked during a survey of local dealerships.

Spokesmen for General Motors, Chrysler Corp., and Ford said their firms have published booklets for inclusion with all 1970 models.

American Motors spokesmen could not be reached for comment, but it was believed the firm also was complying with the regulation, which became effective Jan. 1.

THE DOT regulation, entitled Consumer Information, Part 375, requires manufacturers to provide statistics on their new automobiles' stopping distances, acceleration and passing ability, and tire reserve loads.

All "prospective purchasers" are required to be supplied with the information for shopping comparison purposes, according to an Insurance Institute for Highway Safety bulletin.

In addition to contacting corporate spokesmen for the domestic car makers, The Independent, Press-Telegram checked eight foreign car dealers in Long Beach, who handle 17 different makes of autos.

Of the 17 five had supplied the required safety information either in warantee books or for show room display on bulletin boards or counters.

Six manufacturers whose new models are out had not yet complied and one had informed the dealer the safety information would be forthcoming with the first 1970 models to be delivered.

Five manufacturers whose 1970 models have not yet been sent to local dealers didn't indicate whether they would comply with the law.

OF SEVEN dealers asked whether they'd received correspondence from the DOT regarding the new consumer assistance law, only one said he had.

And six dealers who were asked if customers ever asked them questions about information dealt with by the new regulation all answered "no."

By agency, the following information was obtained:

— Jim Gray Imports, 3515 Atlantic Ave., sells Alfa Romeo and Triumph autos. Owner Jim Gray said Alfa Romeo has included the safety information in the warantee books of its 1970 models.

The dealership has not yet received the 1970 Triumphs, but Gray said the manufacturer has informed him the new regulation will be complied with.

— Palmer Import Motors, 3300 Atlantic Ave., sells autos made by Mercedes-Benz, Fiat and Toyota. Luther Green, sales manager, said only Mercedes has sent the safety information for show-room display. Fiat and Toyota may issue their literature on the matter soon, according to Green, who said he hasn't seen any safety law correspondence for the DOT.

— Long Beach Motors, 3400 Long Beach Blvd., sells Datsuns. Owner Don Rocheleau said he has about six copies of the safety information on file for customers who ask to see them. He said he hasn't been contacted by the DOT, and reported that since he's been in the car sales business he's never had a customer who asked him about statistics dealt with by the new regulation.

— Boulevard Buick, 1881 Long Beach Blvd., sells Opels and Jaguars. Ron Brownell, sales manager, said Opel hasn't yet supplied the firm with printed matter required by the new law. He said the dealership won't receive its first 1970 Jaguars until February, and that the manufacturer has not yet stated whether it will comply with the law.

He said customers have never asked him about stopping distances or other matters covered by the new law, and reported he's seen no correspondence from the DOT about its new regulation.

— C. Bob Autrey Motors, 1860 Long Beach Blvd., sells cars manufactured by BMW, Cortina and Fiat. Bill Greiving, business manager at the agency, said he's only received the new Fiats, and that the other two have not yet supplied, or indicated whether they will supply, the printed matter.

He said he hasn't received correspondence from the DOT and has never been questioned by customers about safety statistics dealt with by the measure.

— Import Auto, 1460 Long Beach Blvd., sells Renault, Peugeot, Sunbeam and Simcas. Sales Manager Roy McCready has a copy of Renault's safety statistics stapled to a display bulletin board, but said he hasn't yet received word from the three other firms.

He said he hasn't heard from the DOT, and that he's never had a customer ask him questions about the information dealt with by the new law.

— Jamestown, 1350 Long Beach Blvd., which sells MG and Austin Healey autos. Robert James, president of the firm, said he hasn't received 1970 models from either of the two manufacturers yet, and that neither of them have indicated whether they'll comply.

He also reported he hasn't been contacted by the DOT, and that he's never been asked about the regulation's required safety information by a customer.

— Clea Harrison Volkswagen, 999 Long Beach Blvd. Robert Hallinan, general sales manager, said he's received safety information pamphlets from VW and that the agency was contacted by the DOT. The pamphlets are displayed on a counter.

Hallinan said customers have never asked him questions about safety statistics contained in the VW pamphlet.

Russ Economy Misses Goals

MOSCOW — Bad weather and the failure of several key industries to meet their goals held back Soviet industrial growth in 1969 to 7 per cent over the previous year, final government figures revealed Saturday.

The summary of 1969 economic performance, filling 1½ pages in the government newspaper Izvestia, confirmed most of the provisional figures made public Dec. 16 at a meeting of the Supreme Soviet parliament.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

by Joe Stoltz
of
LAWSON'S JEWELERS
250 Pine Avenue
Downtown Long Beach Only
A Mills Store

We have now learned that DIAMOND APPRAISALS are not only confusing and complex to the jeweler, but even more so to the customer. Last week we explained the meaning of the term "appraisal." The key to determining "fair market value" is the basic cost of the item being appraised. To this cost you add a reasonable profit to compensate for overhead, etc. and you have the retail fair market value of a diamond.

Therefore, it is the COST of the diamond that is the major factor. And even here, a jeweler's cost of a comparable carat weight, color, clarity, and cut of a diamond may differ and most often does differ!!

Remember when we discussed the distribution of the diamond, from its discovery in the mines to the polished, shimmering beauty set in a mounting? Well, the cost of that diamond will naturally increase as it passes through each stage of production and each stage of its distribution.

The burden is then on the jeweler who is appraising to be able to know, not only what the diamond would cost him, but how much the diamond would cost the jeweler who sold it!!

If the diamond was bought from the cutter it should be less costly than if it were bought from a diamond broker or importer, as the broker would also buy from a cutter. Such a diamond is less costly because one step of distribution has been eliminated.

The same is true of the following statements:

1. If the jeweler bought the diamond from a diamond broker or importer, it should cost less than if it were bought from a wholesaler.
2. If the diamond is loose and unmounted, it should be less costly than if it were mounted, as you must allow for the value of the mounting.
3. If the diamond is mounted and the jeweler purchased it from a diamond ring manufacturer or wholesaler it should cost the most!

We, at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach Only, are fortunate in two ways:

1. We buy our diamonds directly from the cutter,
2. We design, manufacture, and set our own mounting.

Next week we shall write a brief defense on behalf of the poor, harassed jeweler who has been given the thankless task of appraising a diamond.

If you have any questions please feel free to write or contact us at the above address.

Lawyer Discipline Studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. X hired a lawyer to represent her in a divorce case. He sent her a bill for $15,000.

She paid $7,500. He demanded the rest. She sought the advice of the disciplinary agency of his state bar association. Investigation determined that the lawyer's services were worth $3,000 at most.

The agency negotiated the return of $4,500. Should the lawyer be let free to overcharge the next client who might not report his complaint?

How should the discipline of the nation's 350,000 lawyers be financed? Should investigations be confined to sworn complaints?

How can discipline be administered in small towns where lawyers and judges are on a first-name basis?

THESE QUESTIONS are being tackled by a special American Bar Association committee headed by retired Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark.

The groups has just released a 253-page preliminary report on the problems of bar discipline and how they can be solved. Since the committee was appointed in 1967, it has conducted hearings in New York, Washington, Miami, Denver, San Francisco, Boston, Dallas and Chicago.

It heard stories like that of Mrs. X.

The hearings alone moved several states, notably Pennsylvania and Michigan, to start working on improved disciplinary machinery.

The Clark group would like its recommendations, if adopted in final form at the Bar Association's Convention in August, turned over to a national conference on disciplinary enforcement. This body would assist state and local bars in setting up more effecive programs.

The Clark committee recommended a centralized program in each state, with a professional staff to carry it on.

IT ALSO approved the creation of a national discipline data bank which is scheduled to begin operating April 1 in Chicago. The purpose is to keep records so a lawyer disciplined in one place cannot easily move elsewhere and hang out his shingle again.

Other suggestions:

— Encouragement of investigations by newspapers or insurance associations, without waiting for complaints, into "known areas of systematic misconduct."

— Abolition of all requirements for sworn complaints which might discourage the airing of legitimate grievances.

— Court rules providing immunity from suits for persons making complaints.

— Immediate suspension of a lawyer convicted of a serious crime.

— Elimination of the jury trial in disciplinary proceedings.

Policeman Slain, 1 Shot by Airman

DETROIT (AP) — One Detroit policeman was slain and another critically wounded Saturday as they went to a home in search of a stolen motorcycle.

Within two hours a 19-year-old airman listed as absent without leave was arrested in connection with the shootings.

Patrolman Richard Woyshner, 47, died in Ford Hospital. Patrolman George Tavoularis, 34, was reported in critical condition. Both had been shot in the chest.

Held without charge for questioning was James Fielder Jr., of Detroit, whom the Air Force had asked police to pick up on an accusation of being away without leave since last Dec. 26. He was arrested at the home of relatives.

HANOI REJECTS INTERNATIONAL PW RULES

American in 2,000th Day as Prisoner in N. Viet

By WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This is the 2,000th day Navy Lt. Everett Alvarez Jr. has spent in captivity in North Vietnam. In all American history no man has ever been held a prisoner of war so long.

On Aug. 5, 1964, Alvarez was among the first pilots attacking North Vietnam in retaliation for reported torpedo boat attacks on American ships in the Gulf of Tonkin. He never made it back to his ship.

Alvarez had been married only two months when he was captured.

HIS WIFE Tangee, 29, lives — and waits — in an apartment in Lafayette, Calif. "Five years," she said recently, gazing solemnly at a photograph of a young naval officer receiving his wings. "Five years — how much can a man take?"

Shortly after their marriage, Alvarez, now 32, was assigned to the aircraft carrier Constellation.

LT. EVERETT ALVAREZ
Prisoner Longest Time

"It never crossed my mind that something like this could happen," Tangee said. "If only I had thought of it before — maybe we could have said something to each other, talked it over before in case something happened.

"But it never entered my mind — and I don't think it did his either."

Alvarez is one of 430 men identified by the Defense Department as prisoners in Southeast Asia. They have been identified from the letters some have been allowed to write, from propaganda films and from interviews with the nine men Hanoi has released. There probably are still more prisoners, because over 1,000 other men are listed as missing.

BUT HANOI has never given the United States a list of the men it holds — although the Geneva Convention on prisoners, which North Vietnam signed in 1957, calls for such listings. The South Vietnamese, who run all prisoner of war camps for the Allies, regularly give the Red Cross lists of the more than 6,000 North Vietnamese soldiers they hold.

The Geneva regulations also require that prisoners be allowed to send out at least two letters and four cards a month.

In Lt. Alvarez' case, that would amount to more than 130 letters and 260 cards. To date Tangee has received 32 letters. And, for the last three years each has been only six lines long.

Families of 60 per cent of the captives of the Communists haven't received a single letter from their husbands and sons.

On the other hand, Saigon allows North Vietnamese prisoners to write letters which are turned over to the international committee of the Red Cross. But according to Defense Department sources, Hanoi does not accept the mail nor does it allow families in the North to write prisoners in the South. It does not want to admit its troops are even in the South.

THE GENEVA Convention also says that the seriously sick and wounded should be repatriated immediately. But Hanoi has even been reluctant to accept its own men back.

Last year, U.S. ships picked up seven fishermen who had been shipwrecked. The United States tried to send them back home aboard a plane belonging to the International Control Commission, composed of Poland, India and Canada.

Hanoi declined — although the fishermen were not even prisoners of war.

"Eventually," a State Department official says, "we had to buy a boat, put them in the boat and point them in the direction of North Vietnam.

"Fortunately, they were accomplished seamen, so they presumably were able to sail back without injury to themselves."

The South Vietnamese also released over 100 ill and injured northern troops in the demilitarized zone until the area became a battle area and the single border crossing was closed in 1967.

IN RECENT months, the wives of many American men missing in action have gone to Paris seeking some word on their husbands' fates. They were promised information, but to date not one of them has heard anything, the Defense Department says.

Hanoi has recently taken to releasing the names of some prisoners through antiwar groups in the United States. However, only 12 new names have been garnered from three lists totaling 255 names.

The Geneva Convention also requires that neutral representatives "shall have permission to go to all places where prisoners of war may be." Saigon allows regular visits by Red Cross representatives, but Hanoi has never allowed the agency in.

Meanwhile, Everett Alvarez sits in the Hanoi prison. It is doubtful he has any idea that his 2,000 days as a POW far exceed the previous record of 1,370 days set by the Marines captured on Wake Island just two weeks after World War II began.

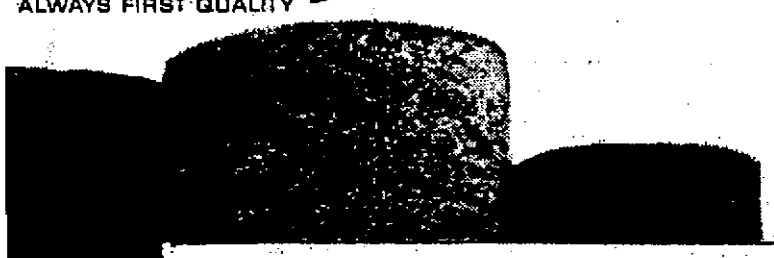

ONCE EACH month Tangee and her husband's parents, who live in Santa Clara, Calif., write a two-page letter and hope Alvarez is allowed to read it.

"At least I know he's alive," Tangee says, "and where there's life, there's hope."

Poisoned Children in Coma

WWI Gas Remedy Used; Hogs Fed Bad Grain Traced

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Doctors, lacking a better treatment, are using a World War I mustard gas remedy to fight acute mercury poisoning that put two children in a coma and left their older sister blinded and paralyzed.

The three members of the Ernest Huckleby family of nearby Alamogordo, N.M., ages 8, 13 and 20, became ill after eating pork from a hog their father butchered last September. The hog had been fed feed grain treated with a methyl-mercury fungicide.

"NOBODY HAS any experience in this area to tell us what to do," the Huckleby's physician, Dr. Laurance Nickey, said.

"Acute mercury poisoning is very rare and no one has ever found an effective drug to fight it."

Meanwhile, a packing company in Roswell, N.M., announced Saturday that 11 unaccounted for hogs that were among more than 30 animals sold on two occasions for slaughter after being fed the poisoned grain had now been traced.

"All meat from the 11 suspected hogs has been accounted for," said H. F. Glover of Glover Packing Co. "A majority had not left the plant."

A spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington said there is a lot of meat under detention which may come from the 11 hogs but "we wouldn't say at this time we have all the meat for sure."

The first Huckleby child, Ernestine, 8, became sick in December. Her illness puzzled doctors. Then earlier this month, Dorothy, 20, and Amos, 13, became ill.

Yablonski Case Wider as Jury Subpoenas 20

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — More than 20 persons from "all walks of life" have been subpoenaed for a grand jury investigation of the slayings of United Mine Workers insurgent Joseph Yablonski, his wife and daughter, U.S. Atty, Robert B. Krupansky said Saturday.

Three Cleveland men have been charged with murder by authorities from Pennsylvania, where the slayings occurred.

Krupansky said the probe into the "broadening aspects of the Yablonski investigation" would begin Tuesday and take a number of days. He said it would involve "states other than Ohio" but declined to name them.

ASKED ABOUT an account in the New York Times that a federal investigation was reported to be focusing on a large sum of money promised the killers by a group of persons in the Tennessee-Kentucky coal fields, Krupansky said: "At this point we have not subpoenaed anyone as relates to that specific question."

FBI warrants said plans to kill Yablonski were being made as long ago as July 19.

The three men charged with the slayings, Claude E. Vealey, 26, Aubran W. Martin, 21, and Paul E. Gilly, 36, have been in custody since Wednesday night in Cleveland.

There were these other developments Saturday:

—Pennsylvania state police and FBI skin divers combed the Monongahela River at Fredericktown, about three miles from the Yablonski home in Clarksville, scene of the killings. The searchers, working out of two rowboats used a magnet and grappling hook, and it was reported by residents of the area that a high-powered rifle had been recovered. Authorities declined comment on the dragging operations.

Authorities have said the Yablonskis were shot with a .38-caliber weapon, but police also found a copper-jacketed bullet believed to have been fired from a .30-caliber weapon.

—Mike Trbuvich, Yablonski's campaign manager in his unsuccessful bid for the presidency of the UMW, sent a telegram to UMW President W. A. "Tony" Boyle and other top UMW officials calling for their resignations. The telegram charged the officials condoned irregularities and misuse of union funds.

—Mrs. Mabel Vealey, mother of one of the accused men, said her son had never worked in the coal mines and added: "I don't believe he did it. He's not that kind of person."

All three men charged are long-time Cleveland area residents, but were born in coal mining regions, Martin and Vealey in West Virginia and Gilly in Kentucky, according to the U.S. marshall's office.

No connection between the accused men and the UMW has been announced by the FBI.

JOSEPH YABLONSKI slayer suspect, Claude E. Vealey, 26, is escorted back to Cuyahoga County jail by an FBI agent after 12 hours of questioning by federal investigators. Vealey is one of three Cleveland men charged by Pennsylvania authorities with the killing of three people, including Yablonski, the leader of an opposition faction within the United Mine Workers, his wife and daughter. Vealey is an Ohio State Reformatory parolee.

NANTUCKET ISLAND FED BY AIRLIFT

United Press International

Thirty one thousand pounds of food was airlifted across the icebound Nantucket Harbor Saturday to year round residents of Nantucket Island, whose regular ferry service was unable to get through the sometimes three-foot thick ice.

There was no serious shortage of food for the 3,000 residents of the summer playground island who have been without the ferry service four days, officials said. Executive airlines made half a dozen 20-minute flights, carrying mostly perishables, and officials reported the islanders were bearing up in the best of Yankee stoic good huntor.

Cargo Plane Crash Kills Two Aboard

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Two men were killed Saturday when the twin-engine cargo plane they were flying crashed southwest of Kalamazoo.

Police identified the victims as Melvin Wilcox, about 50, of Chesterfield, Ohio, and Donald Grizzel, 36, of Bedford, Ohio, pilot and copilot.

PRINCESS LOUISE II, III

2 More Liners to Be Restaurants

The owner of the S.S. Princess Louise ship restaurant has purchased two more ocean-going passenger liners for conversion to restaurants.

One will be moored in Vancouver and the other in an as yet unnanmed port, according to Jerry Sutton, owner-operator of the Louise.

"The fleet will be enlarged even further as adaptable ships become available and proper port facilities can be developed," Sutton said Saturday.

THE NEW ships will be rechristened Princess Louise II and III.

Princess II, which has been operating as a cruise ship out of Vancouver, is now in drydock in that city, being remodeled.

Princess III, a 37-year veteran of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Line, is temporarily moored in Seattle awaiting remodeling.

She is a miniature duplicate of the Queen Mary.

Negotiations are under way with officials in Acapulco, Honolulu, San Francisco and San Diego for possible berth space, Sutton said.

The original S.S. Princess Louise, permanently moored at Terminal Island, has grossed over $2 million a year since it opened in 1966.

German to Visit

BONN (AP) — West Germany's minister for economic cooperation, Erhard Eppler, is flying to New York for the first meeting Monday of the United Nations population fund consultative committee. He will meet Tuesday with World Bank President Robert McNamara on development aid projects.

Pair Held in $20,000 Bank Theft

KINGMAN, Ariz. (UPI) — Mrs. Marilyn M. Champion, 20, was arrested Saturday on charges of embezzling more than $20,000 from the First National Bank of Santa Fe, N.M., where she was employed as a teller.

Mrs. Champion and her husband, Melvin, 23, were found in the rear of a pickup camper truck driven by her father, Ruben Martin, 51, Scottsdale, Ariz., according to the FBI.

Mrs. Champion was held at the Mohave County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond. She will be arraigned before a U.S. commissioner on Monday. Her husband was arrested on charges of aiding a felon. Martin wasn't arrested.

L.B. Auto Dealers Provide Data on Safety Factors in New Cars

By BILL HOMER
Staff Writer

The "Big Three" auto makers have complied with a Department of Transportation consumer information regulation, which requires them to supply prospective customers with certain safety statistics.

Foreign car manufacturers also were checked during a survey of local dealerships.

Spokesmen for General Motors, Chrysler Corp., and Ford said their firms have published booklets for inclusion with all 1970 models.

American Motors spokesmen could not be reached for comment, but it was believed the firm also was complying with the regulation, which became effective Jan. 1.

THE DOT regulation, entitled Consumer Information, Part 375, requires manufacturers to provide statistics on their new automobiles' stopping distances, acceleration and passing ability, and tire reserve loads.

All "prospective purchasers" are required to be supplied with the information for shopping comparison purposes, according to an Insurance Institute for Highway Safety bulletin.

In addition to contacting corporate spokesmen for the domestic car makers, The Independent, Press-Telegram checked eight foreign car dealers in Long Beach, who handle 17 different makes of autos.

Of the 17 five had supplied the required safety information either in warantee books or for show room display on bulletin boards or counters.

Six manufacturers whose new models are out had not yet complied and one had informed the dealer the safety information would be forthcoming with the first 1970 models to be delivered.

Five manufacturers whose 1970 models have not yet been sent to local dealers didn't indicate whether they would comply with the law.

OF SEVEN dealers asked whether they'd received correspondence from the DOT regarding the new consumer assistance law, only one said he had.

And six dealers who were asked if customers ever asked them questions about information dealt with by the new regulation all answered "no."

By agency, the following information was obtained:

— Jim Gray Imports, 3515 Atlantic Ave., sells Alfa Romeo and Triumph autos. Owner Jim Gray said Alfa Romeo has included the safety information in the warantee books of its 1970 models.

The dealership has not yet received the 1970 Triumphs, but Gray said the manufacturer has informed him the new regulation will be complied with.

— Palmer Import Motors, 3300 Atlantic Ave., sells autos made by Mercedes-Benz, Fiat and Toyota. Luther Green, sales manager, said only Mercedes has sent the safety information for show-room display. Fiat and Toyota may issue their literature on the matter soon, according to Green, who said he hasn't seen any safety law correspondence for the DOT.

— Long Beach Motors, 3400 Long Beach Blvd., sells Datsuns. Owner Don Rocheleau said he has about six copies of the safety information on file for customers who ask to see them. He said he hasn't been contacted by the DOT, and reported that since he's been in the car sales business he's never had a customer who asked him about statistics dealt with by the new regulation.

— Boulevard Buick, 1881 Long Beach Blvd., sells Opels and Jaguars. Ron Brownell, sales manager, said Opel hasn't yet supplied the firm with printed matter required by the new law. He said the dealership won't receive its first 1970 Jaguars until February, and that the manufacturer has not yet stated whether it will comply with the law.

He said customers have never asked him about stopping distances or other matters covered by the new law, and reported he's seen no correspondence from the DOT about its new regulation.

— C. Bob Autrey Motors, 1860 Long Beach Blvd., sells cars manufactured by BMW, Cortina and Fiat. Bill Greiving, business manager at the agency, said he's only received the new Fiats, and that the other two have not yet supplied, or indicated whether they will supply, the printed matter.

He said he hasn't received correspondence from the DOT and has never been questioned by customers about safety statistics dealt with by the measure.

— Import Auto, 1460 Long Beach Blvd., sells Renault, Peugeot, Sunbeam and Simcas. Sales Manager Roy McCready has a copy of Renault's safety statistics stapled to a display bulletin board, but said he hasn't yet received word from the three other firms.

He said he hasn't heard from the DOT, and that he's never had a customer ask him questions about the information dealt with by the new law.

— Jamestown, 1350 Long Beach Blvd., which sells MG and Austin Healey autos. Robert James, president of the firm, said he hasn't received 1970 models from either of the two manufacturers yet, and that neither of them have indicated whether they'll comply.

He also reported he hasn't been contacted by the DOT, and that he's never been asked about the regulation's required safety information by a customer.

— Clea Harrison Volkswagen, 999 Long Beach Blvd. Robert Hallinan, general sales manager, said he's received safety information pamphlets from VW and that the agency was contacted by the DOT. The pamphlets are displayed on a counter.

Hallinan said customers have never asked him questions about safety statistics contained in the VW pamphlet.

Russ Economy Misses Goals

MOSCOW — Bad weather and the failure of several key industries to meet their goals held back Soviet industrial growth in 1969 to 7 per cent over the previous year, final government figures revealed Saturday.

The summary of 1969 economic performance, filling 1½ pages in the government newspaper Izvestia, confirmed most of the provisional figures made public Dec. 16 at a meeting of the Supreme Soviet-parliament.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

by Joe Stoltz
of
250 Pine Avenue
Downtown Long Beach Only
A Mills Store

We have now learned that DIAMOND APPRAISALS are not only confusing and complex to the jeweler, but even more so to the customer. Last week we explained the meaning of the term "appraisal." The key to determining "fair market value" is the basic cost of the item being appraised. To this cost you add a reasonable profit to compensate for overhead, etc. and you have the retail fair market value of a diamond.

Therefore, it is the COST of the diamond that is the major factor. And even here, a jeweler's cost of a comparable carat weight, color, clarity, and cut of a diamond may differ and most often does differ!!

Remember when we discussed the distribution of the diamond, from its discovery in the mines to the polished, shimmering beauty set in a mounting? Well, the cost of that diamond will naturally increase as it passes through each stage of production and each stage of its distribution.

The burden is then on the jeweler who is appraising to be able to know; not only what the diamond would cost him, but how much the diamond would cost the jeweler who sold it!!

If the diamond was bought from the cutter it should be less costly than if it were bought from a diamond broker or importer, as the broker would also buy from a cutter. Such a diamond is less costly because one step of distribution has been eliminated.

The same is true of the following statements:

1. If the jeweler bought the diamond from a diamond broker or importer, it should cost less than if it were bought from a wholesaler.
2. If the diamond is loose and unmounted, it should be less costly than if it were mounted, as you must allow for the value of the mounting.
3. If the diamond is mounted and the jeweler purchased it from a diamond ring manufacturer or wholesaler it should cost the most!

We, at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach Only, are fortunate in two ways:

1. We buy our diamonds directly from the cutter.
2. We design, manufacture, and set our own mounting.

Next week we shall write a brief defense on behalf of the poor, harassed jeweler who has been given the thankless task of appraising a diamond.

If you have any questions please feel free to write or contact us at the above address.

MOVIES DO THE TRICK

Pentagon Stages College Comeback

By DEREK SHEARER
DNS Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense, some of it anyway, is making a comeback on college campuses. America's youth has discovered that Pentagon movies are more fun than Bogart flicks, Bela Lugosi thrillers, and reruns of Flash Gordon.

For example, when the U.S. Student Press Association, which includes most college newspaper editors, held its annual convention last year in Boulder, Colo., the feature entertainment was a Department of Defense documentary entitled "Third Challenge: Unconventional Warfare." The movie drew rave, but not always reverent, reviews.

Adding to the fun is the fact that the films are free, easy to get, and of high quality; no more waiting months for a yellowing print of a Charlie Chan mystery. In addition, there are plenty of them.

For the past 20 years, the Pentagon has been producing films for public exhibition, designed to persuade citizens — as well as soldiers — of the rightness of the country's defense policies. Viewing them is often instructive and fun. Many are in color, and narrated by such famous Hollywood stars as James Stewart, Bob Hope Glen Ford, and Jack Webb.

EACH BRANCH of the service also produces its own films, as does the Department of Defense under the auspices of the office of the assistant secretary of defense for public affairs. Some of the films listed in a catalog distributed by this office for public showing are:

"A Free People" — "Folk music sung by Gordon MacRae, the New Christy Minstrels, and Peter, Paul, and Mary accompany the scenes of this film, telling the story of America and the American way of life — from colonial times to the present."

The Line Is Drawn" — "This story of Capt. James P. Spruill, Army, who was killed while on duty in Vietnam, is based on his letters home. It covers his experiences in Vietnam and his view of the issues at stake there."

"The Road to the Well" — "James Cagney narrates this documentary on modern communism. The film traces the events that brought communism to power in Russia and other countries."

"Third Challenge": Unconventional Warfare — "Insurgency and America's capability to counter it are examined closely in this film, which also touches on our capability of waging nuclear and conventional warfare."

"Freedom and You" — "An American citizen suddenly finds his town taken over by Communists in this dramatic feature film, narrated by Jack Webb, and is jolted into a full realization of the importance of his civic responsibilities."

"Third Challenge," which lasts 45 minutes and was shot in color, deals with a fictional Third World country threatened by guerrillas. The leader of the insurgents is dressed in a Nazi-like uniform; his No. 2 man looks remarkably like Che Guevara. Trouble mounts in the country, the insurgency spreads, then the U.S. enters the scene. The loyal government troops are trained in counter-guerrilla measures by American 'advisers' and proceed to wipe out the rebels' stronghold. The guerrilla leader escapes to sea in a small boat to foment revolution in some other country (which is why the U.S. must be ever vigilant).

The hero of "Fredom and You" skips his union meetings for bowling. His wife reproves him, but he makes light of her. He goes to bed—and in his nightmare—wakes in the morning to find that his town has "gone communist." At breakfast, his eldest daughter announces that she is leaving home to join a work brigade. The next day is Sunday and he tries to take the younger children to church, only to find that the church has been turned into a "people's museum." He stares dumbfounded at exhibits of ancient telephones and airplanes which credit Russians as the inventors.

"HEY, AMERICANS discovered these," he shouts and commences breaking apart the displays. He is arrested and tried; his wife and children testify against him. Just as the pistol is being placed to his head, the nightmare ends and he awakens "to a full realization of the importance of his civic responsibilities."

"The Big Picture" is an Army program that produces 30-minute color films for television. Many of these titles are available in Army film libraries for use by public groups. They include films such as "The Bridge," in which John Daly hosts a visit to the Army Chaplains School; and "When The Chips Are Down," with Bob Hope discussing the readiness of the citizen soldier.

One of the newest Army films is "Shotgun Rider." A catalog description says, "The Shotgun Rider, protecting the stagecoach, blasted a colorful trail through the pages of American history. Today he still plays a colorful role, for the war in Vietnam has put the shotgun rider back in business. Not aboard a stage coach, but in a helicopter. His weapon is no longer a shotgun, but a machine gun. His mission, however, is the same: to protect the interest of a free people as he stretches from his helicopter firing at enemy targets."

The Navy sometimes produces films on vital social problems. Two of its films on the dangerous effects of drugs, "A Trip To Where" and "LSD," the Navy estimates have been seen by 75 million people. Not to be outdone by "Shotgun Rider," the Navy has produced a 28-minute color film, "Eye of the Dragon" — "the story of the American Navy advisers to Vietnamese junk forces told in a panoramic style using a montage of sequences, native music and the Kipling theme of 'East Is East and West Is West.'"

THE AIR FORCE is also into the drug scene. Its film "Trip," which depicts a "bad trip," was shown to participants at a White House sponsored governors conference, followed by Art Linkletter's talk on how LSD killed his daughter. A recent Air Force film entitled "Operation Pathfinder Exercise" deals with American forces in Spain. A description reads:

"Depicts largest airborne training exercise in Europe. Demonstrates USAF, U.S. Army, and Spanish troops in hypothetical combat situation. Pictures Moron, Spain, center of activity, where men, equipment, and supplies are dropped in enemy territory. Portrays paratroopers in mass assault to secure airfield. Shows effective tactical air power with proud forces marching before commanders. Depicts bullfights and reception given by Spanish people in honor of participants."

"The Full Blade," a Marine Corps film, describes "Operation Golden Fleece" in which "Marines protected the South Vietnamese farmers on the harvest of their rice crops." Other Marine films deal with such topics as recruit training on Parris Island and the taking of Iwo Jima.

Military films are available free of charge for loan to any public group. The only stipulation is that no charge be made for viewing. The motion pictures are available at film libraries on Army, Navy and Air Force bases around the country and at branch audio-visual centers which serve particular areas of the country.

A pamphlet, "A List of Selected Armed Forces Films for Public Exhibition," which explains loan procedures and lists the audio-visual centers, can be obtained on request from the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Public Affairs), Department of Defense, Washington, D.C., 20301. A valuable supplement is the publication "Current Information Materials Catalog," also available from the same office, which lists military posters and fact sheets, as well as motion pictures.

Bajo Calif. Urges Extend Trade Zone

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Lower California has asked President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz to extend the life of a special trade incentive zone along its border with California and Arizona. The zone is scheduled to close June 30.

Gov. Raul Sanchez told the president the zone was not a privilege but a necessity for Baja California, whose 1.5 million population was increasing at 10 per cent annually.

Financier to Be Freed From Prison

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Louis E. Wolfson, Miami financier, will be released on parole Monday from the federal prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, a Justice Department spokesman said Saturday.

Wolfson, whose association with Abe Fortas led to the former Supreme Court justice's resignation, was charged with selling unregistered stock.

HANOI REJECTS INTERNATIONAL PW RULES

American in 2,000th Day as Prisoner in N. Viet

By WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This is the 2,000th day Navy Lt. Everett Alvarez Jr. has spent in captivity in North Vietnam. In all American history no man has ever been held a prisoner of war so long.

On Aug. 5, 1964, Alvarez was among the first pilots attacking North Vietnam in retaliation for reported torpedo boat attacks on American ships in the Gulf of Tonkin. He never made it back to his ship.

Alvarez had been married only two months when he was captured.

HIS WIFE Tangee, 29, lives — and waits — in an apartment in Lafayette, Calif. "Five years," she said recently, gazing solemnly at a photograph of a young naval officer receiving his wings. "Five years — how much can a man take?"

Shortly after their marriage, Alvarez, now 32, was assigned to the aircraft carrier Constellation.

LT. EVERETT ALVAREZ
Prisoner Longest Time

"It never crossed my mind that something like this could happen," Tangee said. "If only I had thought of it before — maybe we could have said something to each other, talked it over before in case something happened.

"But it never entered my mind — and I don't think it did his either."

Alvarez is one of 430 men identified by the Defense Department as prisoners in Southeast Asia. They have been identified from the letters some have been allowed to write, from propaganda films and from interviews with the nine men Hanoi has released. There probably are still more prisoners, because over 1,000 other men are listed as missing.

BUT HANOI has never given the United States a list of the men it holds — although the Geneva Convention on prisoners, which North Vietnam signed in 1957, calls for such listings. The South Vietnamese, who run all prisoner of war camps for the Allies, regularly give the Red Cross lists of the more than 6,000 North Vietnamese soldiers they hold.

The Geneva regulations also require that prisoners be allowed to send out at least two letters and four cards a month.

In Lt. Alvarez' case, that would amount to more than 130 letters and 260 cards. To date Tangee has received 32 letters. And for the last three years each has been only six lines long.

Families of 60 per cent of the captives of the Communists haven't received a single letter from their husbands and sons.

On the other hand, Saigon allows North Vietnamese prisoners to write letters which are turned over to the international committee of the Red Cross. But according to Defense Department sources, Hanoi does not accept the mail nor does it allow families in the North to write prisoners in the South. It does not want to admit its troops are even in the South.

THE GENEVA Convention also says that the seriously sick and wounded should be repatriated immediately. But Hanoi has even been reluctant to accept its own men back.

Last year, U.S. ships picked up seven fishermen who had been shipwrecked. The United States tried to send them back home aboard a plane belonging to the International Control Commission, composed of Poland, India and Canada.

Hanoi declined — although the fishermen were not even prisoners of war.

"Eventually," a State Department official says, "we had to buy a boat, put them in the boat and point them in the direction of North Vietnam.

"Fortunately, they were accomplished seamen, so they presumably were able to sail back without injury to themselves."

The South Vietnamese also released over 100 ill and injured northern troops in the demilitarized zone until the area became a battle area and the single border crossing was closed in 1967.

IN RECENT months, the wives of many American men missing in action have gone to Paris seeking some word on their husbands' fates. They were promised information, but to date not one of them has heard anything, the Defense Department says.

Hanoi has recently taken to releasing the names of some prisoners through antiwar groups in the United States. However, only 12 new names have been garnered from three lists totaling 255 names.

The Geneva Convention also requires that neutral representatives "shall have permission to go to all places where prisoners of war may be." Saigon allows regular visits by Red Cross representatives, but Hanoi has never allowed the agency in.

Meanwhile, Everett Alvarez sits in the Hanoi prison. It is doubtful he has any idea that his 2,000 days as a POW far exceed the previous record of 1,370 days set by the Marines captured on Wake Island just two weeks after World War II began.

ONCE EACH month Tangee and her husband's parents, who live in Santa Clara, Calif., write a two-page letter and hope Alvarez is allowed to read it.

"At least I know he's alive," Tangee says, "and where there's life, there's hope."

LIKE BEING 'BURIED ALIVE'

American Hijacker Tells of Terror in Cuban Jail

By FRANK FROSCH

SAVANNAH, Ga. (UPI) — "As they closed the door, I felt like I was being buried alive . . . in a tomb. I explored the cell, but there wasn't much exploring to do. It was about the size of a small bathroom."

So begins the diary of Robert M. Helmey, 36, a Savannah lumber dealer.

On Jan. 11, 1969, Helmey hijacked a United Air Lines jet and forced its pilot to fly to Havana, Cuba. After 103 days of virtual solitary confinement by Cuban authorities, he was released April 23 and sent to Canada, where he arranged to surrender himself to U.S. authorities.

Charged with air piracy and kidnaping, Helmey went on trial in federal court here last Nov. 17. After less than 30 minutes of jury deliberation he was acquitted, judged innocent by reason of temporary insanity. At the time of the hijacking, Helmey testified, he imagined he was part of a CIA-FBI plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

ALONE IN HIS tiny cell in Cuba, Helmey first kept track of things by scratching symbols into the whitewashed walls, he said. He called this record his "diary." Later, he said, he transferred his record-keeping to a tablecloth which also served as his only blanket.

Describing his cell, Helmey said: "I could lie down in the middle of the floor and touch every wall with my hands and feet. There were no windows in the cell, only vents near the 10-foot-high ceiling."

The only sanitary facility, he said, was a hole in the floor, into a pipe. Light was provided, his account said, by two bulbs, one in the ceiling and the other set behind a metal grate in the wall and with both lights controlled from an outside switch.

ON HIS FIRST day in jail, Jan. 12, Helmey said, he was given two pieces of hard bread for breakfast and later in the day received a tray of rice and black beans. He said this was his basic diet for 101 more days.

"I didn't have a spoon, I didn't have a cup," he said. "I didn't have toilet paper."

Once, he said, he became ill from the stench in the cell because a water spigot designed to flush the pipe didn't work for the first 13 days.

He was questioned intermittently by two officers who wanted to know why he had come to Cuba. He always, he said, demanded to see Castro — a demand apparently not taken seriously or ever granted.

There were other Americans in the prison, Helmey said.

"Underneath my cell," he said, "was this other guy. I couldn't see him but I could hear him. They beat on him three or four times a day. While they were beating on him he'd sing the Marines' hymn. Then he'd pray and say crazy things like he wanted to get back in the womb."

HELMEY SAID that through a slip in security he got a glimpse of "a young hippie with real long hair" in one of the cells.

"That kid really had guts," Helmey said. "You could hear him in his cell yelling at the guards to 'Come in here, you B----S.' I'd encourage him by yelling back, 'Get 'em baby . . . get 'em baby.'"

"When he wasn't doing that," Helmey continued, "He'd sit in his cell and sing — crazy stuff like Little Red Riding Hood, with dirty words."

Helmey said he discovered he could communicate with another prisoner by talking through an unused conduit shaft. He said the man was a plane hijacker from Bogota, Colombia.

"We'd talk until we heard the guards coming," Helmey said. "You could hear their boots squeaking in the hall. Man, you sure can tell a Cuban boot, the way they squeak."

TEN DAYS after his jailing, Helmey said, he was taken from his cell for the first time and fingerprinted, photographed and weighed. He'd already dropped in weight from 250 to 212 pounds, he said. During the entire time, he said, he lost at least 100 pounds.

On Jan. 29, Helmey said, and for reasons he couldn't explain, two Cuban officers took him for a drive into Havana, pointing out various buildings and landmarks. At one point, he said, he saw "25 or 30 Russian-made helicopters and one MIG 21," a late model Soviet fighter plane.

On Feb. 5, after an interrogation session during which his questioner said Cuba made "the best ice cream in the world," Helmey said he was driven to a Havana ice cream emporium called Copelia. "I guess that was for propaganda," he said. "They probably had cameras all over the place."

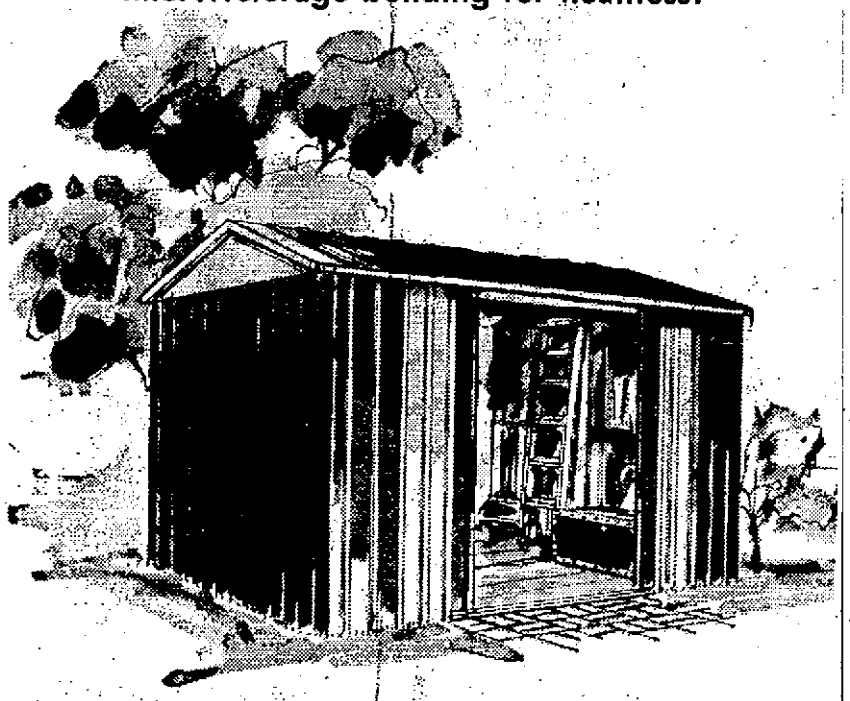

HE WAS GIVEN another outing, according to his account, this time to a pre-revolution night club named La Roca. He said he was treated to a fine meal including filet mignon and a green tomato salad. "I figured there were cameras there and they were trying to get me to smile," he said. "I didn't because I din't want any pictures made of me smiling in a Cuban night club."

Helmey told of no abuse other than the confined quarters and poor daily fare, but said his questioners did warn him there were "ways we can make you talk."

Church Council Leaders See Need for Major Policy Change

By GEORGE CORNELL

TULSA, Okla (AP) — The future of the 20-year-old National Council of Churches, its makeup, methods and functions, is now a wide-open question.

That was the central fact that emerged from a five-day meeting the organization's policy-making general board, concluded here Friday.

"It's a fundamental question, involving the whole future direction of the council, its nature, role, funding, staffing and relationships with member churches, with today's world and its people," said Dr. Edwin Espy, the council's general secretary.

In its closing hours, the 250-member board, representing 33 Protestant and Orthodox denominations with 44 million members, named a task force to draw up proposals for redesigning the cooperative organization.

The objective is to work out a pattern of structure and operation that will "reflect the new mood and new demands that are upon us" and which can "mobilize the participation of all Christian people in this land."

THE COUNCIL now includes about two-thirds of them. The largest denominations not belonging are the Southern Baptists and Roman Catholics. But they take part in some council departmental activities.

The board also took steps to pump new influences into its present system.

It increased representation of young people and blacks to numerous committees and departmental boards and initiated a process intended to involve more youths in the decision-making and functions of the entire council.

But these moves were viewed as only preliminary to widening the scope and refocusing the work and ways of the enterprise.

Part of the pressure for change showed up in reports of shrinking financial support from denominations for some council activities.

"The truth is we're hurting financially," said Espy, a Baptist from New York.

"But the reason is that the churches themselves are hurting. They've had to make damaging, almost crippling, reductions in their budgets, even more drastic than the council in some cases."

Nevertheless, the council has almost drained away its reserves in the last four years through deficit financing, and also has cut staff and curtailed some programs.

IN ASSIGNING the task force to draw up proposals for reorganization, the council instructed the group to make sure the new framework will enlist wide general backing from member churches, both in energies and finances, so it can carry out its undertakings.

Under the present setup, some projects, particularly on matters of race and peace, have faltered for lack of funds and participation from member denominations.

Committees at the meeting here offered some tentative recommendations for a revamped council, the suggested alternatives differing somewhat but shared key objectives.

Both would seek wider inter-Christian involvement.

Las Vegas Crash Kills Guard Flier

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An Ohio Air National Guardsman died Friday when his F'84 jet fighter crashed while on a gunnery practice mission 50 miles northeast of here.

A Nellis Air Force Base spokesman identified the pilot as Maj. Leonard E. Haskovec of Miami, Fla. the Air Force said Haskovec was a commercial pilot for Eastern Airlines here on active duty.

Ban Sought on Armed Convicts as Guards

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Complaints about the use of armed prisoners as guards at Arkansas prison farms will be aired Monday at a federal court hearing here.

Dist. Court Judge J. Smith Henley has consolidated a number of inmate suits for a comprehensive review of the state prisons, which a former prison superintendent charged were a throwback to the Dark Ages.

Lawyers for the inmate plaintiffs say the hearing could result in an order to close the farms, or prohibit commitment of more convicts until improvements are made.

Judge Henley, in past cases involving the prisons, has ruled both corporal punishment and solitary confinement, as it existed at the farms, unconstitutional.

Complaints in the consolidated suits include lack of adequate food and medical services; poor sanitary conditions; lack of adequate protection from attacks by other inmates; and the forcing of inmates to work the fields.

The 1,300 inmates at Cummins Prison Farm are supervised by about 90 gun-carrying trustees and 35 civilian employes.

Gore Hits Nixon on Interest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Albert E. Gore accused President Nixon Saturday of "abdicating his responsibility" to roll back interest rates which, he said are so high they match those of countries "whose economies are on the verge of collapse."

The Tennessee Democrat said Nixon was benefiting only "the banker barons" in his refusal to use the power Congress gave him last year. This would allow Nixon to establish voluntary or mandatory controls on the flow of credit so everyone could get a share of the credit available.

"The Nixon Administration," he said, "by the policy it has pursued and by its failure to exercise the moral and legal authority of the presidency, has placed an intolerable burden on the working people and the small businessmen of this country."

Today's high interest rates, Gore said, have led to a slump in home construction, an increase in joblessness, a jump in the number of small business bankruptcies, an inability by states and localities to borrow money to improve services for their citizens, a 36 per cent increase in the prime lending rate, a 26 per cent increase in mortgage rates, and "record prosperity" for big corporations, insurance firms and banks.

MOVIES DO THE TRICK

Pentagon Stages College Comeback

By DEREK SHEARER
DNS Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense, some of it anyway, is making a comeback on college campuses. America's youth has discovered that Pentagon movies are more fun than Bogart flicks, Bela Lugosi thrillers, and reruns of Flash Gordon.

For example, when the U.S. Student Press Association, which includes most college newspaper editors, held its annual convention last year in Boulder, Colo., the feature entertainment was a Department of Defense documentary entitled "Third Challenge: Unconventional Warfare." The movie drew rave, but not always reverent, reviews.

Adding to the fun is the fact that the films are free, easy to get, and of high quality; no more waiting months for a yellowing print of a Charlie Chan mystery. In addition, there are plenty of them.

For the past 20 years, the Pentagon has been producing films for public exhibition, designed to persuade citizens — as well as soldiers — of the rightness of the country's defense policies. Viewing them is often instructive and fun. Many are in color, and narrated by such famous Hollywood stars as James Stewart, Bob Hope Glen Ford, and Jack Webb.

EACH BRANCH of the service also produces its own films, as does the Department of Defense under the auspices of the office of the assistant secretary of defense for public affairs. Some of the films listed in a catalog distributed by this office for public showing are:

"A Free People" — "Folk music sung by Gordon MacRae, the New Christy Minstrels, and Peter, Paul, and Mary accompany the scenes of this film, telling the story of America and the American way of life — from colonial times to the present."

"The Line Is Drawn" — "This story of Capt. James P. Spruill, Army, who was killed while on duty in Vietnam, is based on his letters home. It covers his experiences in Vietnam and his view of the issues at stake there."

"The Road to the Wall" — "James Cagney narrates this documentary on modern communism. The film traces the events that brought communism to power in Russia and other countries."

"Third Challenge": Unconventional Warfare — "Insurgency and America's capability to counter it are examined closely in this film, which also touches on our capability of waging nuclear and conventional warfare."

"Freedom and You" — "An American citizen suddenly finds his town taken over by Communists in this dramatic feature film, narrated by Jack Webb, and is jolted into a full realization of the importance of his civic responsibilities."

"Third Challenge," which lasts 45 minutes and was shot in color, deals with a fictional Third World country threatened by guerrillas. The leader of the insurgents is dressed in a Nazi-like uniform; his No. 2 man looks remarkably like Che Guevara. Trouble mounts in the country, the insurgency spreads, then the U.S. enters the scene. The loyal government troops are trained in counter-guerrilla measures by American 'advisers' and proceed to wipe out the rebels' stronghold. The guerrilla leader escapes to sea in a small boat to foment revolution in some other country (which is why the U.S. must be ever vigilant).

The hero of "Freedom and You" skips his union meetings for bowling. His wife reproves him, but he makes light of her. He goes to bed—and in his nightmare—wakes in the morning to find that his town has "gone communist." At breakfast, his eldest daughter announces that she is leaving home to join a work brigade. The next day is Sunday and he tries to take the younger children to church, only to find that the church has been turned into a "people's museum." He stares dumbfounded at exhibits of ancient telephones and airplanes which credit Russians as the inventors.

"H-E-Y, AMERICANS discovered these," he shouts and commences breaking apart the displays. He is arrested and tried; his wife and children testify against him. Just as the pistol is being placed to his head, the nightmare ends and he awakens "to a full realization of the importance of his civic responsibilities."

"The Big Picture" is an Army program that produces 30-minute color films for television. Many of these titles are available in Army film libraries for use by public groups. They include films such as "The Bridge," in which John Daly hosts a visit to the Army Chaplain's School; and "When The Chips Are Down," with Bob Hope discussing the readiness of the citizen soldier.

One of the newest Army films is "Shotgun Rider." A catalog description says, "The Shotgun Rider, protecting the stagecoach, blasted a colorful trail through the pages of American history. Today he still plays a colorful role, for the war in Vietnam has put the shotgun rider back in business. Not aboard a stage coach, but in a helicopter. His weapon is no longer a shotgun, but a machine gun. His mission, however, is the same; to protect the interest of a free people as he stretches from his helicopter firing at enemy targets."

The Navy sometimes produces films on vital social problems. Two of its films on the dangerous effects of drugs, "A Trip To Where" and "LSD," the Navy estimates have been seen by 75 million people. Not to be outdone by "Shotgun Rider," the Navy has produced a 28-minute color film, "Eye of the Dragon" — "the story of the American Navy advisers to Vietnamese junk forces told in a panoramic style using a montage of sequences, native music and the Kipling theme of 'East Is East and West Is West."

THE AIR FORCE is also into the drug scene. Its film "Trip," which depicts a "bad trip," was shown to participants at a White House sponsored governors conference, followed by Art Linkletter's talk on how LSD killed his daughter. A recent Air Force film entitled "Operation Pathfinder Exercise" deals with American forces in Spain. A description reads:

"Depicts largest airborne training exercise in Europe. Demonstrates USAF, U.S. Army, and Spanish troops in hypothetical combat situation. Pictures Moron, Spain, center of activity, where men, equipment, and supplies are dropped in enemy territory. Portrays paratroopers in mass assault to secure airfield. Shows effective tactical air power with proud forces marching before commanders. Depicts bullfights and reception given by Spanish people in honor of participants."

"The Full Blade," a Marine Corps film, describes "Operation Golden Fleece" in which "Marines protected the South Vietnamese farmers on the harvest of their rice crops." Other Marine films deal with such topics as recruit training on Parris Island and the taking of Iwo Jima.

Military films are available free of charge for loan to any public group. The only stipulation is that no charge be made for viewing. The motion pictures are available at film libraries on Army, Navy and Air Force bases around the country and at branch audio-visual centers which serve particular areas of the country.

A pamphlet, "A List of Selected Armed Forces Films for Public Exhibition," which explains loan procedures and lists the audio-visual centers, can be obtained on request from the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Public Affairs), Department of Defense, Washington, D.C., 20301. A valuable supplement is the publication "Current Information Materials Catalog," also available from the same office, which lists military posters and fact sheets, as well as motion pictures.

Bajo Calif. Urges Extend Trade Zone

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Lower California has asked President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz to extend the life of a special trade incentive zone along its border with California and Arizona. The zone is scheduled to close June 30.

Gov. Raul Sanchez told the president the zone was not a privilege but a necessity for Baja California, whose 1.5 million population was increasing at 10 per cent annually.

Financier to Be Freed From Prison

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Louis E. Wolfson, Miami financier, will be released on parole Monday from the federal prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, a Justice Department spokesman said Saturday.

Wolfson, whose association with Abe Fortas led to the former Supreme Court justice's resignation, was charged with selling unregistered stock.

CONFUCIUS, HE SAY: DISTANCE LENDS ENCHANTMENT

Asians Think U.S. is Great Place—to Stay Away From

By ERNIE HERNANDEZ
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — America is still the land of golden streets and powerful cars and skyscrapers, as far as the folks in the Far East are concerned.

But the man on the street in Manila, Bangkok, Auckland, Taipei, Canberra, Kuala Lumpur or Singapore is not captivated by a mad urge to emigrate To him, there's no place like home.

(First of a Series)

These are some impressions of a reporter, who while on Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's 11-nation trip, managed a few hours now and then to talk to the natives at their bars, stores, taxicabs, homes and farms.

I was impressed that they have caught the phrase, "it must be a great place to visit, but not to live in."

They are convinced, particularly in New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Malaysia, Taiwan and Thailand that prosperity is just around the corner and that their standard of living is going up. Their daily lives are already comfortable.

AND WEIGHED against that comfort is their picture of life in an American city — where the streets aren't safe, where whites and blacks are at war, where there are roving teenage gangs.

"I'm happy here in Auckland," said Robin Drew, a nurse. "We're not in a hurry. We get all we need: good food, beaches, cars, good climate."

And Robert Wong, a bartender in Kuala Lumpur, said he'd never give up Malaysia. His city with its artistic modern buildings and six-lane highways was a traveler's surprise. It's Asia's best-kept secret.

The vice president, in his talks with kings, prime ministers and presidents, became convinced that while the nations he visited want U.S. aid or trade, they felt they were doing well on their own. Vietnam was the only exception.

AND WHAT leaders told Agnew in conference was told reporters and other travelers in casual conversations by the citizens.

"America isn't that great any more," a 22-year-old Fillipino demonstrator told me over a cup of coffee while his sign "Go Home, Fascist" was being used by a friend. "We can do without Uncle Sam."

In a quieter mood was a Manila cabdriver, father of six children, who said in Tagalog that U.S. troops provide income for many Fillipinos. "But soldiers don't make good ambassadors," he said.

Everywhere we went we were quickly told what the natives think of Americans: rich.

"You are an American, you can afford this," said a Bangkok jeweler about a jade necklace costing about $900. Is there a response better than simply walking away?

Except in Nepal, the inhabitants seemed anxious to impress on us Americans that their countries were wonderful and improving.

In Australia it was virtually impossible for any lone American to have just one drink of beer at a pub. Invariably, he'd be joined by an Aussie for another drink, and another and another.

Same with the Kiwis, the nickname for the English-descent New Zealander. Rev. Ludwig Felderhof told me two hours after I arrived in Auckland that Kiwis would ask me again and again how I liked their country. They did. They seemed so anxious to be liked.

The Agnew entourage was made up of 56, including staffers and secret service men and 10 newsmen. Most of the men and women on the trip were seeing the Orient for the first time, and each nation left a different impression. These were mine:

MANILA — My own home town, visited for only the third time in 20 years — was a city of contrast; of ugly tin shacks of squatters along muddy rivers against the plush, orante-iron-barred homes of the rich.

VIETNAM — on my second trip — seemed like a country caught by inflation. Saigon tea, for instance, has risen from 150 to 400 piastres. But the pace seems more comfortable. In 1966, there were no refrigerators in the boondocks.

TAIPEI — On a third visit — was a city of disciplined people, with 10,000 schoolchildren waving flags, 3,000 soldiers at attention, nine sets of dragon-dancers. All were there to welcome Agnew.

BANGKOK — An old city with a lot of class — has its colossal golden temples, its gracious people, its elegant women, its fancy jewelry and silk stores. It was a city of proud people.

KATHMANDU — High in the Himalayas — was a city of the sacred cows. I saw the damned animals eat the merchandise of starving storekeepers who sat helpless. This was a depressing city of poverty, where the streets are narrow and dusty; the castles are old, abandoned and dirty; where veiled lepers and skinny beggars sit on the cold sidewalks and stare.

KABUL — With snow-capped mountains all around it — looked forlorn. A lasting first impression was the honor guards at the Russian-built airport. They had Russian coats, Russian helmets, Russian Ad-47s. And then, there was the Afghani princess . . . and that's another story.

SINGAPORE — The third China — symbol of progress and efficiency, trade center of Southeast Asia's 200 million people, the 4th largest port in the world, was impressive for its fast pace in a region of slow-moving inhabitants.

BALI — Beautiful even without barebreasted women — was an island of flowing waters, intricate rice terraces, delicate wood carvings, detailed paintings and ancient dances. But it's a resort being ruined by commercialism. Now the natives demand money if you take pictures of their terraces.

CANBERRA — Sanitized capital of Australia — was a city immaculate. The streets are swept, the buildings are washed, the stores close at 6:30, and the bars at 10, and then the streetlights are dimmed for nighty-night.

AUKLAND — It could be anywhere, USA — Could be in Rolling Hills of Southern Indiana, or the pastures of South Dakota. It has 100-year-old buildings and 1968 bungalows, it has milk bars and hamburgers. It has just about everything America has. But no pollution, no race riots, no crime in the streets.

CLAIM POLICE INTIMIDATION

Picketers 'Harassed' by Camera

A complaint charging that Los Angeles police attempted to "harrass and intimidate" demonstrators by taking their pictures has been filed in U.S. District Court.

The demonstrators had been picketing the LAPD Hollenbeck Division to protest the shooting of a Mexican-American youngster by a Los Angeles police officer.

The amended complaint, filed by the Western Center on Law and Poverty, charged that police photographers took pictures of the picketers "solely for the purpose of interfering and harassing them in their lawful and peaceful activity of picketing."

It charges that police intended to create in the demonstrators a "fear that their continued picketing would result in the compilation of police records and files . . .".

Pasadena Ignores Southern Threat

PASADENA (UPI) — The attorney handling the Pasadena School District's defense against racial discrimination charges said Saturday the case will not be altered by the possible intervention of other states.

A federal judge has ordered the school system to integrate at all levels by September and file a plan for doing so by Feb. 16.

"Our consideration on filing an appeal and our clients' compliance with terms of the court order would not be affected in any way by intervention of other states," said John Pollack, who heads the district's defense.

The attorneys general of Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi announced Friday they would try to intervene in support of the Justice Department suit against the Pasadena Schools.

"We want to give others a taste of what we in the South are going through," said Jack Gremillion, Louisiana attorney general.

Pollack questioned the intent of the southern officials.

"Which side will they take," he questioned. "Will they align themselves with the federal government or with Pasadena — or will they present a side of their own?"

Pollack said he was surprised that if the states had a genuine interest in the Pasadena case, the first on the west coast in which the government has intervened, they would have spoken up before it went to trial.

If Pollack decides to appeal the ruling, issued last Tuesday, the southern states could attempt to intervene as "friends of the court" when the case reaches the U.S 9th circuit court of appeals.

Price Lids Fixed

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — To cope with sudden price rises, such as 25 per cent on bread, the Argentine government has fixed a new schedule of maximum prices. A loaf that had risen to 20 cents now must sell for 14.

ADA Hits Nixon's Message

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The liberal Americans for Democratic Action said Saturday that President Nixon's State of the Union message had "totally failed the nation" in offering adequate solutions to domestic problems.

In a resolution adopted by its national board, the ADA said that "to cut taxes and reduce public spending on domestic needs in the face of today's urban poverty reveals a callous disregard for human needs."

It urged higher taxes and closing of tax loopholes to provide added funds to fight poverty, crime and pollution, with $20 billion a year going alone to the antipoverty effort as a cause of crime.

The ADA said Nixon's remarks on crime constituted "an outrageous appeal to fear" with no serious intention of dealing with the causes of crime. It faulted him for failing to "point out the responsibility of private industry for the mounting pollution problem."

LIKE BEING 'BURIED ALIVE'

American Hijacker Tells of Terror in Cuban Jail

By FRANK FROSCH

SAVANNAH, Ga. (UPI) — "As they closed the door, I felt like I was being buried alive . . . in a tomb. I explored the cell, but there wasn't much exploring to do. It was about the size of a small bathroom."

So begins the diary of Robert M. Helmey, 36, a Savannah lumber dealer.

On Jan. 11, 1969, Helmey hijacked a United Air Lines jet and forced its pilot to fly to Havana, Cuba. After 103 days of virtual solitary confinement by Cuban authorities, he was released April 23 and sent to Canada, where he arranged to surrender himself to U.S. authorities.

Charged with air piracy and kidnaping, Helmey went on trial in federal court here last Nov. 17. After less than 30 minutes of jury deliberation, he was acquitted, judged innocent by reason of temporary insanity. At the time of the hijacking, Helmey testified, he imagined he was part of a CIA-FBI plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

ALONE IN HIS tiny cell in Cuba, Helmey first kept track of things by scratching symbols into the whitewashed walls, he said. He called this record his "diary." Later, he said, he transferred his record-keeping to a tablecloth which also served as his only blanket.

Describing his cell, Helmey said: "I could lie down in the middle of the floor and touch every wall with my hands and feet. There were no windows in the cell, only vents near the 10-foot-high ceiling."

The only sanitary facility, he said, was a hole in the floor, into a pipe. Light was provided, his account said, by two bulbs, one in the ceiling and the other set behind a metal grate in the wall and with both lights controlled from an outside switch.

ON HIS FIRST day in jail, Jan. 12, Helmey said, he was given two pieces of hard bread for breakfast and later in the day received a tray of rice and black beans. He said this was his basic diet for 101 more days.

"I didn't have a spoon. I didn't have a cup," he said. "I didn't have toilet paper."

Once, he said, he became ill from the stench in the cell because a water spigot designed to flush the pipe didn't work for the first 13 days.

He was questioned intermittently by two officers who wanted to know why he had come to Cuba. He always, he said, demanded to see Castro — a demand apparently not taken seriously or ever granted.

There were other Americans in the prison, Helmey said.

"Underneath my cell," he said, "was this other guy. I couldn't see him but I could hear him. They beat on him three or four times a day. While they were beating on him he'd sing the Marines' hymn. Then he'd pray and say crazy things like he wanted to get back in the womb."

HELMEY SAID that through a slip in security he got a glimpse of "a young hippie with real long hair" in one of the cells.

"That kid really had guts," Helmey said. "You could hear him in his cell yelling at the guards to 'Come in here, you B----S.' I'd encourage him by yelling back, 'Get 'em baby . . . get 'em baby.'"

"When he wasn't doing that," Helmey continued, "He'd sit in his cell and sing — crazy stuff like Little Red Riding Hood, with dirty words."

Helmey said he discovered he could communicate with another prisoner by talking through an unused conduit shaft. He said the man was a plane hijacker from Bogota, Colombia.

"We'd talk until we heard the guards coming," Helmey said. "You could hear their boots squeaking in the hall. Man, you sure can tell a Cuban boot, the way they squeak."

TEN DAYS after his jailing, Helmey said, he was taken from his cell for the first time and fingerprinted, photographed and weighed. He'd already dropped in weight from 250 to 212 pounds, he said. During the entire time, he said, he lost at least 100 pounds.

On Jan. 29, Helmey said, and for reasons he couldn't explain, two Cuban officers took him for a drive into Havana, pointing out various buildings and landmarks. At one point, he said, he saw "25 or 30 Russian-made helicopters and one MIG 21," a late model Soviet fighter plane.

On Feb. 5, after an interrogation session during which his questioner said Cuba made "the best ice cream in the world," Helmey said he was driven to a Havana ice cream emporium called Copela. "I guess that was for propaganda," he said. "They probably had cameras all over the place."

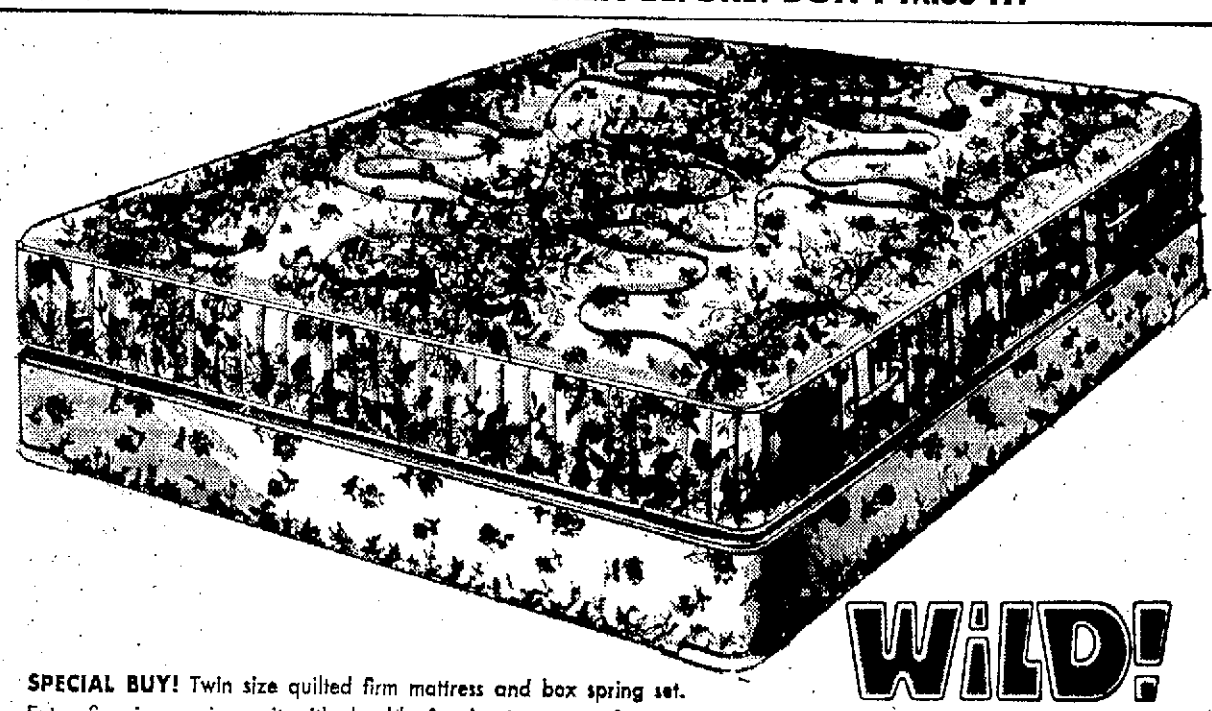

HE WAS GIVEN another outing, according to his account, this time to a pre-revolution night club named La Roca. He said he was treated to a fine meal including filet mignon and a green tomato salad. "I figured there were cameras there and they were trying to get me to smile," he said. "I didn't because I din't want any pictures made of me smiling in a Cuban night club."

Helmey told of no abuse other than the confined quarters and poor daily fare, but said his questioners did warn him there were "ways we can make you talk."

VESSEL WILL "MATE" WITH DISABLED SUBMARINES TO RESCUE TRAPPED SURVIVORS

SUB SAVER WILL 'WALK IN' SURVIVORS

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A torpedo-shaped, electric submarine rescue vehicle, developed after the tragic loss of the submarine Thresher and its crew, was launched Saturday.

The craft, called a Deep Submergence Rescue Vehicle, will give the Navy an operational rescue capability anywhere in the world, in any weather.

The vessel was rolled down tracks into the water after Mrs. O. D. Waters, wife of Rear Adm. Waters, oceanographer of the Navy, christened it with a bottle of champagne.

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., said the ship would "help to open the secrets of the greatest frontier left to mankind."

He noted that many corporations and the government, as well as Massachusetts Institute of Technology, took part in the development of the vessel.

"Without this support, we cannot hope to master the unexplored two-thirds of the earth's surface which lies before us," Wilson said. "The job is simply too large."

The ship s maximum operating depth was listed as 5,000 feet, and the Navy said the vessel could match the depths and range of today's most advanced submarines.

The vessel, 49 feet, 8 inches long and weighing 76,000 pounds submerged, has an outer hull of fiberglass-reinforced plastic, around a three-sphere inner hull. The outer hull holds propulsion, sensor, control, life support and maneuvering systems.

Rescuing men from sunken submarines would be accomplished by "mating" the ship's hatch to those of disabled submarines, so crewmen could be transferred dry.

The 76,000-pound craft also is capable of a variety of other missions and could be used to aid foreign submarines, the Navy said.

In operation, the vessel will be carried "piggy back" on a "mother submarine" to the rescue sites, and it is large enough to take 24 survivors aboard at a time.

The ship also can be loaded aboard an Air Force C141A jet transport for quick flight to a port near a disabled submarine, where it would then be mounted on a nuclear submarine.

The battery-powered rescue vehicle was built by Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., of Sunnyvale and will be delivered to the Navy this fall. Dockside and at-sea tests will be conducted through 1971.

Pilots Stage Jet Noise Tests

LONDON (AP) — A group of British airline pilots has carried out secret take-off tests and made recommendations for cutting the noise of jets using London's Heathrow Airport.

Geoffrey Holmes, a member of the local authority aircraft Noise Council, a consortium of 18 municipal authorities in areas around London affected by jet noise, told newsmen Saturday pilots had made the tests during take-offs of scheduled flights without informing their airline employers.

He said their recommendations will be sent to the Board of Trade, the government body responsible for British airlanes.

Holmes said the pilots tried to show that by climbing as quickly as possible at takeoff noise could be minimized for many people although there would be extra noise at the immediate runway.

On the other hand, he said, pilots wanted a more gradual descent on landing rather than the present practice of dropping steeply from 3,000 to 2,0000 feet.

Judge Carswell Has Good Reputation Back Home

New York Times Service

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Federal Circuit Judge G. Harrold Carswell, nominated by President Nixon to the Supreme Court last week, always has had a good reputation in his adopted home town.

But some of his acquaintances have said he has been "too anxious to please" his conservative friends during his 12 years as a federal judge.

"He would rule against us in court and then tell us in the hallway outside that he really was for us, but that the law was against us," one civil rights leader said. 'And then the 5th Circuit would reverse him on appeal."

A lawyer who practiced before Carswell said the judge "is no Cardoza or Brandeis, but then, who is?"

Mrs. Clifton Lewis of Tallahassee who has been a party to almost every civil rights movement since Carswell has been on the bench, said that the judge "has good will for everybody. He would like for everyone to have roses and football season tickets."

UNLIKE many of his friends and social acquaintances here, Carswell has not been a speculator in real estate. A search of the land records of Leon County, where Tallahassee is situated, showed he was involved in only two land deals other than those pertaining to his home on Lake Jackson.

In 1952, Carswell and his wife and three other couples sold a plot of land to the Florida University system for an indicated price of $18,500. One of the other couples was Leroy Collins, who later was a Florida governor, and his wife. Carswell had worked in Collins' law firm. Also in 1952, Carswell and the other two couples sold their shares of another Tallahassee lot to Collins for $6,000.

The 1970 tax rolls of Leon County have not yet been completed. The 1969 tax records show that the only real estate owned in the county by Carswell and his wife was their home and a 10-acre lot on Lake Jackson.

THIS is how Judge Carswell appeared as a Navy lieutenant at the end of World War II. He served for more than three years. —AP Wirephoto

Leon County intangible tax records showed that the Carswells in 1969 paid taxes on $68,640 worth of class b intangibles, which in Florida, are stocks and bonds.

IN AN interview last Monday, after Nixon announced Carswell's nomination to the Supreme Court, the judge said that he owned no stocks or bonds, but that his wife had some interest in the Elberta Crate and Box Co., a Tallahassee box factory operated by Jack W. Simmons, who is Mrs. Carswell's father.

Jack W. Simmons Jr., who is Mrs. Carswell's brother, and his family also live on Lake Jackson, alongside the Carswells.

In the April, 1969 session of the Florida Legislature, Simmons acted as a lobbyist in seeking to push through the Legislature a bill to operate a harness track in South Florida. The bill subsequently was passed.

The Miami Herald said a dinner party for legislators who had lobbied in behalf of the race track bill was held at the Carswell home. Simmons party had been planned for his own home but Mrs. Simmons asked that the party not be held because she was still in mourning for their two small children who had been killed the previous month in an automobile accident.

Mrs. Carswell offered to let her brother use the Carswell home. Simmons said that Carswell was not the host and that the judge, who had been out of town on business, did not arrive home until the party was about to break up.

Efficient Trash Crew Trips Trial

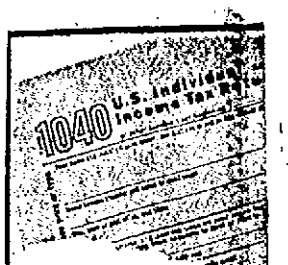

VALPARAISO, Ind. (UPI) — A maintenance worker dumped a box of state's exhibits into a trash container and posed the possibility of invalidating a kidnap trail.

The trail of Ralph Hensley, 20, had been moving smoothly up to Friday morning, when the court reporter in Porter Superior Court of Judge Russell Nixon discovered a box containing the state's evidence was missing.

Investigation determined that a new employe of a maintenance firm which handles custodial work for the courthouse had believed the box contained junk and threw it in the trash.

The trash was picked up by a truck driver who found some of the exhibits such as clothing and a belt with cartridges in it were too good to throw away.

Those items were recovered, but others could not be found.

LSD

LSD ("ACID") is a synthetic chemical compound: d-lysergic acid diethylamide.

It is one of the most popular drugs in the underground drug cult today.

Its direct effect is rarely fatal and apparently not physically addictive. But, its effect on the mind is entirely unpredictable.

It is an hallucinogen...

It can be a psychedelic that takes the mind on a "magical mystical" trip. Or...

It can create a mental disaster, resulting in panic, psychosis or depression that can remain or flashback long after the initial effects of the drug have worn off.

Its effect on animal and human chromosomes and genes is still unknown.

No one can be sure how any given amount will affect any one person at any one time, even in the most apparently stable subject.

Why was LSD developed, how is it obtained?

LSD was first produced by accident in 1938. Subsequently, it has been used as a research drug in several areas including the study of psychoses. It has provided new insight into psychological behavior and in understanding how the brain functions chemically. However, the Food and Drug Administration has not sanctioned LSD for anything other than research. Use for any other purpose is illegal. Yet, an illicit product, often found to be questionably synthesized and mixed with other compounds or drugs, is widely available.

How is LSD taken?

Because LSD is so potent, (4,000 times more potent by weight than naturally grown mescaline and psilocybin) it can be "dropped" in a variety of ways. When diluted, LSD may be taken by ampule or hypodermic, but these two methods are rarely used. The white powder or clear liquid in purer form is far more potent: Dangerous, pinhead-sized amounts of the tasteless, odorless drugs are easily concealed in sugar cubes, chewing gum, even postage stamps.

What can happen when you "drop" LSD?

Reality can dissolve. Time and space relationships can be lost. One may "hear" colors or "see" sounds. A feeling of "total wisdom" and "new insight" may wash over the user, altering his perception of surroundings. The user may feel relaxed, extremely self assured, and powerful or he may become anxious and apprehensive. He might feel he can stop a freight train with his body... or, want to jump out a window, "a bird frightened to flight".

Short-term physical effects include an increase in blood pressure, heart rate and blood sugar. There is the possibility of nausea, chills, irregular breathing, sweating and trembling of the hands. Sleep will likely be deferred until the drug's effect wears off. Pupils will probably be dilated. Users will often have to protect their eyes with dark glasses even indoors or at night.

Long-term effect includes loss of interest in normal daily routines. The user may leave family and friends, become highly introspective and live only for the next "trip".

Who are drug abusers and why?

Curiosity, desire to experiment, dissatisfaction with "the establishment" and a search for a pleasurable release from a variety of physical and mental pressures and depression are all factors leading to drug abuse. In what has become a "pill-taking" adult society, young people are particularly vulnerable. They are more often introduced to drugs by friends than outsiders and it's pretty hard to refuse a friend. It's harder still to resist a group. The problem is, as psychologists cannot predict which social drinkers will become alcoholics, there is no sure test for spotting a potential drug abuser. However, repeated use may eventually lead to a psychological dependency on drugs that can't be broken.

Church Council Leaders See Need for Major Policy Change

By GEORGE CORNELL

TULSA, Okla (AP) — The future of the 20-year-old National Council of Churches, its makeup, methods and functions, is now a wide-open question.

That was the central fact that emerged from a five-day meeting the organization's policy-making general board concluded here Friday.

"It's a fundamental question, involving the whole future direction of the council, its nature, role, funding, staffing and relationships with member churches, with today's world and its people," said Dr. Edwin Espy, the council's general secretary.

In its closing hours, the 250-member board, representing 33 Protestant and Orthodox denominations with 44 million members, named a task force to draw up proposals for redesigning the cooperative organization.

The objective is to work out a pattern of structure and operation that will "reflect the new mood and new demands that are upon us" and which can "mobilize the participation of all Christian people in this land."

THE COUNCIL now includes about two-thirds of them. The largest denominations not belonging are the Southern Baptists and Roman Catholics. But they take part in some council departmental activities.

The board also took steps to pump new influences into its present system.

It increased representation of young people and blacks to numerous committees and departmental boards and initiated a process intended to involve more youths in the decision-making and functions of the entire council.

But these moves were viewed as only preliminary to widening the scope and refocusing the work and ways of the enterprise.

Part of the pressure for change showed up in reports of shrinking financial support from denominations for some council activities.

"The truth is we're hurting financially," said Espy, a Baptist from New York.

"But the reason is that the churches themselves are hurting. They've had to make damaging, almost crippling, reductions in their budgets, even more drastic than the council in some cases."

Nevertheless, the council has almost drained away its reserves in the last four years through deficit financing, and also has cut staff and curtailed some programs.

IN ASSIGNING the task force to draw up proposals for reorganization, the council instructed the group to make sure the new framework will enlist wide general backing from member churches, both in energies and finances, so it can carry out its undertakings.

Under the present setup, some projects, particularly on matters of race and peace, have faltered for lack of funds and participation from member denominations.

Committees at the meeting here offered some tentative recommendations for a revamped council, the suggested alternatives differing somewhat but shared key objectives.

Both would seek wider inter-Christian involvement.

Las Vegas Crash Kills Guard Flier

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An Ohio Air National Guardsman died Friday when his F84 jet fighter crashed while on a gunnery practice mission 50 miles northeast of here.

A Nellis Air Force Base spokesman identified the pilot as Maj. Leonard E. Haskovec of Miami, Fla. the Air Force said Haskovec was a commercial pilot for Eastern Airlines here on active duty.

Ban Sought on Armed Convicts as Guards

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Complaints about the use of armed prisoners as guards at Arkansas prison farms will be aired Monday at a federal court hearing here.

Dist. Court Judge J. Smith Henley has consolidated a number of inmate suits for a comprehensive review of the state prisons, which a former prison superintendent charged were a throwback to the Dark Ages.

Lawyers for the inmate plaintiffs say the hearing could result in an order to close the farms, or prohibit commitment of more convicts until improvements are made.

Judge Henley, in past cases involving the prisons, has ruled both corporal punishment and solitary confinement, as it existed at the farms, unconstitutional.

Complaints in the consolidated suits include lack of adequate food and medical services; poor sanitary conditions; lack of adequate protection from attacks by other inmates; and the forcing of inmates to work the fields.

The 1,300 inmates at Cummins Prison Farm are supervised by about 90 gun-carrying trustees and 35 civilian employes.

Gore Hits Nixon on Interest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Albert E. Gore accused President Nixon Saturday of "abdicating his responsibility" to roll back interest rates which, he said are so high they match those of countries "whose economies are on the verge of collapse."

The Tennessee Democrat said Nixon was benefiting only "the banker barons" in his refusal to use the power Congress gave him last year. This would allow Nixon to establish voluntary or mandatory controls on the flow of credit so everyone could get a share of the credit available.

"The Nixon Administration," he said, "by the policy it has pursued and by its failure to exercise the moral and legal authority of the presidency, has placed an intolerable burden on the working people and the small businessmen of this country."

Today's high interest rates, Gore said, have led to a slump in home construction, an increase in joblessness, a jump in the number of small business bankruptcies, an inability by states and localities to borrow money to improve services for their citizens, a 36 per cent increase in the prime lending rate, a 26 per cent increase in mortgage rates, and "record prosperity" for big corporations, insurance firms and banks.

BATTERY POWER FOR 10-FOOT HOLES

Astronaut to Operate Electric Drill

By PAUL K. HARRAL

DENVER (UPI) — Where man goes, he attempts to do work. And where he would do work, he must have tools — even on the moon.

A space age research team at Martin Marietta's Denver space center will watch astronaut Fred W. Haise Jr. carefully during Apollo 13 this spring.

Haise will operate an electric drill on the surface of the moon — stepping beyond the simple hand tools used on the moon during man's first two landings there.

The purpose of the drill is to make two 10-foot holes for a scientific experiment to measure any heat the moon might radiate from its core — and, if there is time, a third hole to bring back a core sample of the moon to a depth never reached before.

"We've drilled 12 or 15 feet of solid rock with this device," said Donald S. Crouch, head of the company's Apollo lunar surface drill program, indicating almost lovingly the flat white drill.

THE DRILL, using some standard power drill components, is designed to produce one-half horsepower and operate 40 minutes from a silver-zinc battery of 24 volts. That's equal to 16 regular flashlight batteries.

"Based on what we think we know now about the lunar surface, we expect less than 10 minutes operation on the surface for the two holes," Crouch said.

The drill has been under development since June 1966 and man's knowledge of the moon has advanced much since then. But the predictions of the surface were so exact that Martin's scientists found they had no changes to make after the moon landings.

"Everyone feels what the drill can presently drill through meets present models (scientific simulations)," said William Britton, technical director of the drill project.

These simulations were based at first on visual observation, then refined from Ranger photographs beamed back to earth before the capsule crashed into the moon and refined further from Lunar Orbiter photographs which mapped the moon.

Recession? Maybe —But No Slump

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Will there be a recession along with inflation in 1970?

Very likely, according to some economists. Technically speaking, in fact, the recession — a very mild one — may already have begun, they say.

The White House economists disagree. President Nixon's annual Economic Report to Congress, due in a week or so, reportedly will reaffirm the forecast of a flattening-out, but no recession.

THE DIFFERENCE hinges largely on how you define a recession.

Most of the economists who predict one seem to be thinking of a dip so shallow it meets only a technical definition of the term.

Very few are forecasting the kind of slump that became familiar in the 1950s — a spiraling downskid of profits, production and income with painfully rising unemployment.

That could bring about what economists have called the "worst of all possible worlds" — a combined inflation and recession, with an unstoppable rise in living costs aggravating the distress of the unemployed.

NIXON LAST saw it happen in 1957, when he was vice president. Few consider it will happen again in 1970.

The government would ease its tight-money restraints before a serious slump set in, economists agree. And the slowdown would be countered by massive plant and equipment spending plans already announced by industry, together with prospective strong consumer buying demand.

BUT A moderate and relatively brief recession is possible, under the only widely accepted definition of the word recession. A decline in the real Gross National Product lasting for two or more quarters.

This is the definition developed and used for many years by the National Bureau of Economic Research, New York, the nonprofit organization formerly headed by Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chairman-designate of the Federal Reserve Board. The bureau is famed for its research on the business cycle.

The real GNP — the total value of all goods and services produced, measured in 1958 dollars to discount for inflation — dropped slightly in the last quarter of 1969. It moved to an annual rate of $730.5 billion, compared with the third quarter's $730.6 billion.

THE DECLINE of $100 million is considered statistically insignificant. But the present quarter is expected to produce a further and more substantial decline in real GNP.

Together, the two quarters of decline would constitute a recession, by the definition of the National Bureau, even if the nine-year boom should resume its expansion in the spring.

Nixon's economic message, Administration aides said, is likely to reflect the view of his Council of Economic Advisers that the first half of 1970 will witness a leveling-off, rather than a downturn, and that the year as a whole will be one of slow growth.

REFERRING to the National Bureau's definition of recession, one official commented that "zero growth for a long time could be much more serious than two quarters of actual decline in production."

The government itself has no definition of a recession. It recognizes that the National Bureau must have one, in order to establish the starting points and finish lines of every downturn and upturn in the business cycle.

But the definition doesn't mean much, one Administration adviser points out, without information on the scope, rapidity and total duration of the decline.

SPEAKING of the dangers of a prolonged period of zero growth, one official put it this way:

"Without production ever dropping at all, you could fall so far behind the growth of the labor force and the production potential that you would have rising unemployment and all the problems of a recession.

"In fact, you could suffer the problems of a recession even while growing, if the growth rate were too slow.

"Suppose you achieved only 1 per cent expansion a year in real GNP, instead of the 4 per cent needed — you would eventually wind up in a real depression.

"Nowadays, people have less interest n the turning points of economic trends, and more interest in whether we keep people employed and match our growth potential."

CONFUCIUS, HE SAY: DISTANCE LENDS ENCHANTMENT

Asians Think U.S. is Great Place—to Stay Away From

By ERNIE HERNANDEZ
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — America is still the land of golden streets and powerful cars and skyscrapers, as far as the folks in the Far East are concerned.

But the man on the street in Manila, Bangkok, Auckland, Taipei, Canberra, Kuala Lumpur or Singapore is not captivated by a mad urge to emigrate To him, there's no place like home.

(First of a Series)

These are some impressions of a reporter, who while on Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's 11-nation trip, managed a few hours now and then to talk to the natives at their bars, stores, taxicabs, homes and farms.

I was impressed that they have caught the phrase, "it must be a great place to visit, but not to live in."

They are convinced, particularly in New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Malaysia, Taiwan and Thailand that prosperity is just around the corner and that their standard of living is going up. Their daily lives are already comfortable.

AND WEIGHED against that comfort is their picture of life in an American city — where the streets aren't safe, where whites and blacks are at war, where there are roving teenage gangs.

"I'm happy here in Auckland," said Robin Drew, a nurse. "We're not in a hurry. We get all we need, good food, beaches, cars, good climate."

And Robert Wong, a bartender in Kuala Lumpur, said he'd never give up Malaysia. His city with its artistic modern buildings and six-lane highways was a traveler's surprise. It's Asia's best-kept secret.

The vice president, in his talks with kings, prime ministers and presidents, became convinced that while the nations he visited want U.S. aid or trade, they felt they were doing well on their own. Vietnam was the only exception.

AND WHAT leaders told Agnew in conference was told reporters and other travelers in casual conversations by the citizens.

"America isn't that great any more," a 22-year-old Fillipino demonstrator told me over a cup of coffee while his sign "Go Home, Fascist" was being used by a friend. "We can do without Uncle Sam."

In a quieter mood was a Manila cabdriver, father of six children, who said in Tagalog that U.S. troops provide income for many Filipinos. "But soldiers don't make good ambassadors," he said.

Everywhere we went we were quickly told what the natives think of Americans: rich.

"You are an American, you can afford this," said a Bangkok jeweler about a jade necklace costing about $900. Is there a response better than simply walking away?

Except in Nepal, the inhabitants seemed anxious to impress on us Americans that their countries were wonderful and improving.

In Australia it was virtually impossible for any lone American to have just one drink of beer at a pub. Invariably, he'd be joined by an Aussie for another drink, and another and another.

Same with the Kiwis, the nickname for the Engish-descent New Zealander. Rev. Ludwig Felderhof told me two hours after I arrived in Auckland that Kiwis would ask me again and again how I liked their country. They did. They seemed so anxious to be liked.

The Agnew entourage was made up of 56, including staffers and secret service men and 10 newsmen. Most of the men and women on the trip were seeing the Orient for the first time, and each nation left a different impression. These were mine:

MANILA — My own home town, visited for only the third time in 20 years — was a city of contrast; of ugly tin shacks of squatters along muddy rivers against the plush, ornate-iron-barred homes of the rich.

VIETNAM — on my second trip — seemed like a country caught by inflation. Saigon tea, for instance, has risen from 150 to 400 piastres. But the pace seems more comfortable. In 1966, there were no refrigerators in the boondocks.

TAIPEI — On a third visit — was a city of disciplined people, with 10,000 schoolchildren waving flags, 3,000 soldiers at attention, nine sets of dragon-dancers. All were there to welcome Agnew.

BANGKOK — An old city with a lot of class — has its colossal golden temples, its gracious people, its elegant women, its fancy jewelry and silk stores. It was a city of proud people.

KATHMANDU — High in the Himalayas — was a city of the sacred cows. I saw the damned animals eat the merchandise of starving storekeepers who sat helpless. This was a depressing city of poverty, where the streets are narrow and dusty; the castles are old, abandoned and dirty; where veiled lepers and skinny beggars sit on the cold sidewalks and stare.

KABUL — With snow-capped mountains all around it — looked forlorn. A lasting first impression was the honor guards at the Russian-built airport. They had Russian coats, Russian helmets, Russian Ad-47s. And then, there was the Afghani princess . . . and that's another story.

SINGAPORE — The third China — symbol of progress and efficiency, trade center of Southeast Asia's 200 million people, the 4th largest port in the world, was impressive for its fast pace in a region of slow-moving inhabitants.

BALI — Beautiful even without barebreasted women — was an island of flowing waters, intricate rice terraces, delicate wood carvings, detailed paintings and ancient dances. But it's a resort being ruined by commercialism. Now the natives demand money if you take pictures of their terraces.

CANBERRA — Sanitized capital of Australia — was a city immaculate. The streets are swept, the buildings are washed, the stores close at 6:30, and the bars at 10, and then the streetlights are dimmed for nighty-night.

AUKLAND — It could be anywhere, USA — Could be in Rolling Hills of Southern Indiana, or the pastures of South Dakota. It has 100-year-old buildings and 1968 bungalows, it has milk bars and hamburgers. It has just about everything America has. But no pollution, no race riots, no crime in the streets.

CLAIM POLICE INTIMIDATION

Picketers 'Harassed' by Camera

PASADENA (UPI) — The attorney handling the Pasadena School District's defense against racial discrimination charges said Saturday the case will not be altered by the possible intervention of other states.

A federal judge has ordered the school system to integrate at all levels by September and file a plan for doing so by Feb. 16.

"Our consideration on filing an appeal and our clients' compliance with terms of the court order would not be affected in any way by intervention of other states," said John Pollack, who heads the district's defense.

The attorneys general of Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi announced Friday they would try to intervene in support of the Justice Department suit against the Pasadena Schools.

"We want to give others a taste of what we in the South are going through," said Jack Gremillion, Louisiana attorney general.

Pollack questioned the intent of the southern officials.

"Which side will they take," he questioned. "Will they align themselves with the federal government or with Pasadena — or will they present a side of their own?"

Pollack said he was surprised that if the states had a genuine interest in the Pasadena case, the first on the west coast in which the government has intervened, they would have spoken up before it went to trial.

If Pollack decides to appeal the ruling, issued last Tuesday, the southern states could attempt to intervene as "friends of the court" when the case reaches the U.S 9th circuit court of appeals.

Pasadena Ignores Southern Threat

A complaint charging that Los Angeles police attempted to "harrass and intimidate" demonstrators by taking their pictures has been filed in U.S. District Court.

The demonstrators had been picketing the LAPD Hollenbeck Division to protest the shooting of a Mexican-American youngster by a Los Angeles police officer.

The amended complaint, filed by the Western Center on Law and Poverty, charged that police photographers took pictures of the picketers "solely for the purpose of interfering and harassing them in their lawful and peaceful activity of picketing."

It charges that police intended to create in the demonstrators a "fear that their continued picketing would result in the compilation of police records and files . . . ".

Price Lids Fixed

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — To cope with sudden price rises, such as 25 per cent on bread, the Argentine government has fixed a new schedule of maximum prices. A loaf that had risen to 20 cents now must sell for 14.

ADA Hits Nixon's Message

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The liberal Americans for Democratic Action said Saturday that President Nixon's State of the Union message had "totally failed the nation" in offering adequate solutions to domestic problems.

In a resolution adopted by its national board, the ADA said that "to cut taxes and reduce public spending on domestic needs in the face of today's urban poverty reveals a callous disregard for human needs."

It urged higher taxes and closing of tax loopholes to provide added funds to fight poverty, crime and pollution, with $20 billion a year going alone to the antipoverty effort as a cause of crime.

The ADA said Nixon's remarks on crime constituted "an outrageous appeal to fear" with no serious intention of dealing with the causes of crime. It faulted him for failing to "point out the responsibility of private industry for the mounting pollution problem."

FUNNIES

SHOUT?

PELSALL, England (UPI) — Some people have telephones but cannot get their number listed in the directory. Leonard Wilcox's problem is he has a telephone number but no telephone.

The General Post Office and Wilcox's local council got into an argument eight months ago about the route over which the line would be strung.

Today, Wilcox was still waiting to answer the number the GPO has for him in the directory.

STEAMED ! !

HOUSTON (UPI) — Responsing to a call Wednesday that smoke was pouring from the roof vent of an apartment, axe-carrying firefighters banged on the apartment door to excavate the inhabitants.

The blushing young lady who peeked from behind the door assured them she was only taking a steam bath.

BIRD STRIKE

SAN GIMIGNANO, Italy (UPI) — The 100 pigeons of this medieval town have gone on a hunger strike.

They don't seem to like the new kind of birdseed a city policeman scatters daily in San Gimignano's two main squares. The policeman reports they have not eaten anything since the municipal council switched to the new quality seed four days ago.

UNDIVORCE

BOURNEMOUTH, England (UPI) — Bournemouth's divorce club has decided to cut down its number of meetings because of declining attendance.

The club started three years ago with more than 70 members but has dwindled to about 15 regulars.

The rest got married.

IN-GRAIN

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Roxbury Mills, a feed and fertilizer firm, is losing its bookkeeper, Elsie Rice. She will be replaced by Rosemary Wheat.

NECTAR?

LONDON (UPI) — Milk as it comes from the cow may be too ordinary in the 1970s, a government report suggested Thursday.

The report said the dairy industry should consider flavoring milk with rum, whisky and various fruits to boost sales.

BINGO PRIZE

BARRY, Wales (UPI) — The Empire Bingo and Social Club is offering a gentleman as a prize for the lady who wins their grand bingo prize.

Tyrone Francis, a 20-year-old six footer who is the prize, said for 24 hours he will do everything the winner says "anything short of murder."

TALL TALE

PETERBOROUGH, England (UPI) — Peter Hawes, who is 6 feet 6, is tired of answering stupid questions. So he had a card printed which says:

"I am six feet six inches tall, 252 pounds in weight and the possessor of size 14 shoes. No, I am not cold up here, nor am I the tallest man in the world. Yes, I do give the tailor a headache. No, I do not like low doors, overhanging shop awnings or single beds.

"Any further questions will be gladly answered."

ONE FOOT...

HALIFAX, England (UPI) — Mourners at a cemetery had to summon firemen Tuesday to free the leg of Sexton Ivor Hepworth, which was pinned inside the grave when the coffin was lowered. The funeral service continued after firemen departed.

LOST INDIAN

An Indian is being hunted in the Southland. He has been widely known for 40 years. But he has vanished into the darkness of night without so much as a parting war-hoop, and Jim Bachelor of Louise's Antiques, 13011 Beach Blvd., Westminster, would like to know where he is.

The Indian is a chief in full headress. He weighs 500 pounds and stands on a round pedestal. He is about two feet in diameter.

ISSUE SOBER WARNING

Soviets Deplore High Vodka Sales

By Bernard Gwertzman
New York Times Service

MOSCOW — A ranking Soviet law enforcement official has called for a sharp curtailment in the sale of vodka amid indications that the government will soon take stricter measures against drunkenness.

An article by Boris T. Shumilin, deputy minister of the interior, in Sovietskaya Rossiya, a central committee newspaper, was the most authoritative yet in the month long campaign in the press and on television against excessive drinking.

Soviet sources have said the campaign was launched by party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev in his unpublished speech to the Party Central Committe on problems in the economy. He was said to have called for an end to laxity on dealing with drunks who, he charged, are often responsible for slowing down production schedules in industry.

SINCE THEN, the press has published many suggestions on dealing with the problem. Television has focused on how drunks disturb public order and ruin families. Candid shots of drunks in "sobering up stations" have been shown on the screen, with flashbacks of the men in wedding-day suits, the moral being that drinking has ruined their lives.

Many Russians expect that some definite restrictions will be put into effect as the follow-up to the campaign, and Shumilin's article could represent policy.

Shumilin cited statistics indicating most crimes were due to those under the influence "losing their heads." He did not, however, disclose the number of persons charged with crimes or the number arrested for drunkenness.

"Some comrades," he said, advocate a "dry law" — otal abolition of strong spirits. But he said experience in other countries shows that "this does not solve the problem."

"More realistic means are needed," Shumilin said. He advocated "reasonable limitations and regulation of the sale of strong spirits, a wide antialcohol campaign, and punishment of those who maliciously violate the established limitations."

20 Pickets at Sheriff's Unit Quit

About 20 members of a car club picketing Norwalk's Sheriff's Station Saturday broke up their own demonstration after they were joined by two militant Mexican-American groups.

Casual Gents car club members were protesting the arrest of one of their number. They halted the demonstration, apparently believing the other groups intended to change its purpose, according to Sheriff's Lt. Joe Antonoff.

The two-hour "orderly demonstration" swelled to nearly 150 onlookers and pickets after members of Brown Berets and MECHA arrived, Antonoff said.

Antonoff said the Casual Gents broke up the picket line peacefully when members of the other groups began chanting slogans dealing with other issues.

The Casual Gents — all juveniles — had been protesting the January 18 arrest of a 16-year-old Norwalk youth on charge of assault with a deadly weapon during a fight between rival groups.

The youth is free in the custody of his parents pending further action by juvenile authorities.

Singer Inspired

SAN REMO, Italy (UPI) — Italy's labor troubles gave pop singer Adriano Celentano the inspiration for a new song he said he would introduce at the forthcoming San Remo song festival. It is titled "When You Strike You Can't Make Love."

'MAD SNIPER' BATS THOUSAND, QUITS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two dozen police crouched for cover behind their patrol cars Saturday, dodging the "bullets" of a "mad sniper" who vowed to kill them and his wife and eight children.

"He's shooting at anything that moves," a police official reported during the hour and 50-minute seige.

Two sharpshooters trained high-powered rifles with scopes at the sniper's first-floor window in a dingy Bronx tenement facing the elevated Penn Central Railroad tracks.

Advancing warily in bulletproof vests, two more policemen entered the building and, talking through the closed apartment door, began the delicate process of pursuading the gunman to surrender.

Finally the door opened — revealing Rufus Lemmons and a baseball bat.

The noise of gunfire inside the apartment turned out to have been the bat hitting the metal door in rapid fire fashion. The bullets police were dodging were purely imaginary.

"It sounded like shooting," a detective said. "We thought we had a mad sniper on our hands."

Police took Lemmons to Jacobi Hospital for observation.

Papers Forced to Print 'Freedom' Rules

LIMA (UPI) — Lima newspapers Saturday were forced to print in its entirety on their first or second pages a 1,600-word official communique from the military government.

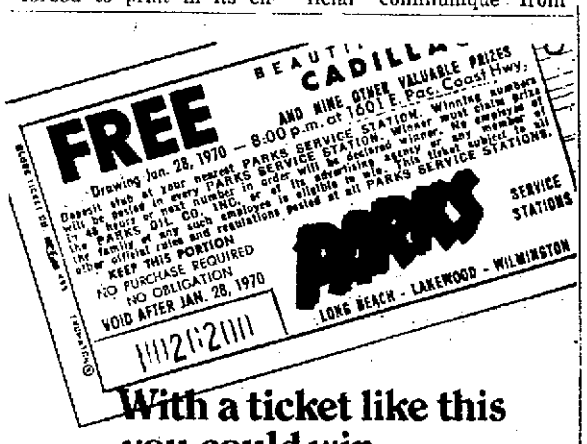

It was the most overt demand the government has made under the terms of its new "freedom of the press" law which actually places a whole new series of restrictions on the press designed to bring it under government control. Two newspapers refused the order.

One of the provisions of the law is that newspapers print in their entirety in their first pages all the official government communications.

The law does not allow the newspapers to make the decisions whether the official communiques are of interest to their readers. The communique printed Saturday was the "official" account of the visit Friday in Columbia of Foreign Minister Edgardo Mercado Jarrin.

The law, which has generated a storm of national and international protest since it was handed down Dec. 31, provides for a fine of $239 for failure to print the government communiques, apparently by accident. But the fine can be as much as $1,500 for refusal to print the communiques.

VESSEL WILL "MATE" WITH DISABLED SUBMARINES TO RESCUE TRAPPED SURVIVORS

SUB SAVER WILL 'WALK IN' SURVIVORS

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A torpedo-shaped, electric submarine rescue vehicle, developed after the tragic loss of the submarine Thresher and its crew, was launched Saturday.

The craft, called a Deep Submergence Rescue Vehicle, will give the Navy an operational rescue capability anywhere in the world, in any weather.

The vessel was rolled down tracks into the water after Mrs. O. D. Waters, wife of Rear Adm. Waters, oceanographer of the Navy, christened it with a bottle of champagne.

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., said the ship would "help to open the secrets of the greatest frontier left to mankind."

He noted that many corporations and the government, as well as Massachusetts Institute of Technology, took part in the development of the vessel.

"Without this support, we cannot hope to master the unexplored two-thirds of the earth's surface which lies before us," Wilson said. "The job is simply too large."

The ship s maximum operating depth was listed as 5,000 feet, and the Navy said the vessel could match the depths and range of today's most advanced submarines.

The vessel, 49 feet, 8 inches long and weighing 76,000 pounds submerged, has an outer hull of fiberglass-reinforced plastic, around a three-sphere inner hull. The outer hull holds propulsion, sensor, control, life support and maneuvering systems.

Rescuing men from sunken submarines would be accomplished by "mating" the ship's hatch to those of disabled submarines, so crewmen could be transferred dry.

The 76,000-pound craft also is capable of a variety of other missions and could be used to aid foreign submarines, the Navy said.

In operation, the vessel will be carried "piggy back" on a "mother submarine" to the rescue sites, and it is large enough to take 24 survivors aboard at a time.

The ship also can be loaded aboard an Air Force C141A jet transport for quick flight to a port near a disabled submarine, where it would then be mounted on a nuclear submarine.

The battery-powered rescue vehicle was built by Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., of Sunnyvale and will be delivered to the Navy this fall. Dockside and at-sea tests will be conducted through 1971.

Pilots Stage Jet Noise Tests

LONDON (AP) — A group of British airline pilots has carried out secret take-off tests and made recommendations for cutting the noise of jets using London's Heathrow Airport.

Geoffrey Holmes, a member of the local authority aircraft Noise Council, a consortium of 18 municipal authorities in areas around London affected by jet noise, told newsmen Saturday pilots had made the tests during take-offs of scheduled flights without informing their airline employers.

He said their recommendations will be sent to the Board of Trade, the government body responsible for British airlanes.

Holmes said the pilots tried to show that by climbing as quickly as possible at takeoff noise could be minimized for many people although there would be extra noise at the immediate runway.

On the other hand, he said, pilots wanted a more gradual descent on landing rather than the present practice of dropping steeply from 3,000 to 2,0000 feet.

Judge Carswell Has Good Reputation Back Home

New York Times Service

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Federal Circuit Judge G. Harrold Carswell, nominated by President Nixon to the Supreme Court last week, always has had a good reputation in his adopted home town.

But some of his acquaintances have said he has been "too anxious to please" his conservative friends during his 12 years as a federal judge.

"He would rule against us in court and then tell us in the hallway outside that he really was for us, but that the law was against us," one civil rights leader said. "And then the 5th Circuit would reverse him on appeal."

A lawyer who practiced before Carswell said the judge "is no Cardoza or Brandeis, but then, who is?"

Mrs. Clifton Lewis of Tallahassee who has been a party to almost every civil rights movement since Carswell has been on the bench, said that the judge "has good will for everybody. He would like for everyone to have roses and football season tickets."

THIS is how Judge Carswell appeared as a Navy lieutenant at the end of World War II. He served for more than three years. —AP Wirephoto

UNLIKE many of his friends and social acquaintances here, Carswell has not been a speculator in real estate. A search of the land records of Leon County, where Tallahassee is situated, showed he was involved in only two land deals other than those pertaining to his home on Lake Jackson.

In 1952, Carswell and his wife and three other couples sold a plot of land to the Florida University system for an indicated price of $18,500. One of the other couples was Leroy Collins, who later was a Florida governor, and his wife. Carswell had worked in Collins' law firm. Also in 1952, Carswell and the other two couples sold their shares of another Tallahassee lot to Collins for $6,000.

The 1970 tax rolls of Leon County have not yet been completed. The 1969 tax records show that the only real estate owned in the county by Carswell and his wife was their home and a 10-acre lot on Lake Jackson.

Leon County intangible tax records showed that the Carswells in 1969 paid taxes on $68,640 worth of class b intangibles, which in Florida, are stocks and bonds.

IN AN interview last Monday, after Nixon announced Carswell's nomination to the Supreme Court, the judge said that he owned no stocks or bonds, but that his wife had some interest in the Elberta Crate and Box Co., a Tallahassee box factory operated by Jack W. Simmons, who is Mrs. Carswell's father.

Jack W. Simmons Jr., who is Mrs. Carswell's brother, and his family also live on Lake Jackson, alongside the Carswells.

In the April, 1969 session of the Florida Legislature, Simmons acted as a lobbyist in seeking to push through the Legislature a bill to operate a harness track in South Florida. The bill subsequently was passed.

The Miami Herald said a dinner party for legislators who had lobbied in behalf of the race track bill was held at the Carswell home. Simmons party had been planned for his own home but Mrs. Simmons asked that the party not be held because she was still in mourning for their two small children who had been killed the previous month in an automobile accident.

Mrs. Carswell offered to let her brother use the Carswell home. Simmons said that Carswell was not the host and that the judge, who had been out of town on business, did not arrive home until the party was about to break up.

President Treated

BONN (UPI) — President Gustav Heinemann, hospitalized for the past five days for treatment of a middle ear infection, will leave the Bonn University clinic early next week, his office announced Saturday.

Efficient Trash Crew Trips Trial

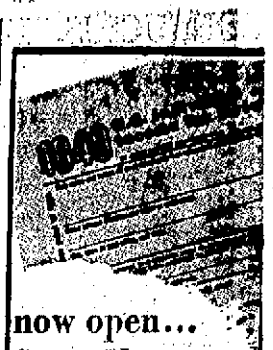

VALPARAISO, Ind. (UPI) — A maintenance worker dumped a box of state's exhibits into a trash container and posed the possibility of invalidating a kidnap trail.

The trail of Ralph Hensley, 20, had been moving smoothly up to Friday morning, when the court reporter in Porter Superior Court of Judge Russell Nixon discovered a box containing the state's evidence was missing.

Investigation determined that a new employe of a maintenance firm which handles custodial work for the courthouse had believed the box contained junk and threw it in the trash.

The trash was picked up by a truck driver who found some of the exhibits such as clothing and a belt with cartridges in it were too good to throw away.

Those items were recovered, but others could not be found.

LSD ("ACID") is a synthetic chemical compound: d-lysergic acid diethylamide.

It is one of the most popular drugs in the underground drug cult today.

Its direct effect is rarely fatal and apparently not physically addictive. But, its effect on the mind is entirely unpredictable.

It is an hallucinogen...

It can be a psychedelic that takes the mind on a "magical mystical" trip. Or...

It can create a mental disaster, resulting in panic, psychosis or depression that can remain or flashback long after the initial effects of the drug have worn off.

Its effect on animal and human chromosomes and genes is still unknown.

No one can be sure how any given amount will affect any one person at any one time, even in the most apparently stable subject.

Why was LSD developed, how is it obtained?

LSD was first produced by accident in 1938. Subsequently, it has been used as a research drug in several areas including the study of psychoses. It has provided new insight into psychological behavior and in understanding how the brain functions chemically. However, the Food and Drug Administration has not sanctioned LSD for anything other than research. Use for any other purpose is illegal. Yet, an illicit product, often found to be questionably synthesized and mixed with other compounds or drugs, is widely available.

How is LSD taken?

Because LSD is so potent, (4,000 times more potent by weight than naturally grown mescaline and psilocybin) it can be "dropped" in a variety of ways. When diluted, LSD may be taken by ampule or hypodermic, but these two methods are rarely used. The white powder or clear liquid in purer form is far more potent. Dangerous, pinhead-sized amounts of the tasteless, odorless drugs are easily concealed in sugar cubes, chewing gum, even postage stamps.

What can happen when you "drop" LSD?

Reality can dissolve. Time and space relationships can be lost. One may "hear" colors or "see" sounds. A feeling of "total wisdom" and "new insight" may wash over the user, altering his perception of surroundings. The user may feel relaxed, extremely self assured, and powerful or he may become anxious and apprehensive. He might feel he can stop a freight train with his body... or, want to jump out a window, "a bird frightened to flight".

Short-term physical effects include an increase in blood pressure, heart rate and blood sugar. There is the possibility of nausea, chills, irregular breathing, sweating and trembling of the hands. Sleep will likely be deferred until the drug's effect wears off. Pupils will probably be dilated. Users will often have to protect their eyes with dark glasses even indoors or at night.

Long-term effect includes loss of interest in normal daily routines. The user may leave family and friends, become highly introspective and live only for the next "trip".

Who are drug abusers and why?

Curiosity, desire to experiment, dissatisfaction with "the establishment" and a search for a pleasurable release from a variety of physical and mental pressures and depression are all factors leading to drug abuse. In what has become a "pill-taking" adult society, young people are particularly vulnerable. They are more often introduced to drugs by friends than outsiders and it's pretty hard to refuse a friend. It's harder still to resist a group. The problem is, as psychologists cannot predict which social drinkers will become alcoholics, there is no sure test for spotting a potential drug abuser. However, repeated use may eventually lead to a psychological dependency on drugs that can't be broken.

LSD. It can be a psychedelic that takes the mind on a "magical mystical" trip. Or, ...

It can create a mental disaster, resulting in panic, psychosis, or depression that can remain or flashback long after initial effects of the drug have worn off.

Think about it.

FROM VIET VETERAN

Letter Hints New My Lai Disclosures

Unspecified "other aspects" of the alleged My Lai massacre "ought to be looked at," says Vietnam veteran Ronald L. Ridenhour, who first revealed the March, 1968, incident.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., disclosed Saturday in an interview at Los Angeles International Airport, that Ridenhour had sent him a letter suggesting attention be given those "other aspects."

UDALL RIDENHOUR

Udall, visiting Anaheim for a Democratic fund-raising event Saturday night, substituting for Democratic National Chairman Sen. Fred Harris, D-Okla., said he passed Ridenhour's letter to the Defense Dept., and "I am satisfied those aspects will be looked into."

HE WOULD NOT divulge details of Ridenhour's letter nor otherwise comment on the alleged massacre, because "we're interested now in seeing there is a thorough investigation and a fair trial."

Udall was not hesitant to talk partisan politics, however. He said Democrats have the potential to score as well in this year's elections as they did in 1958. "This year's scenario is the closest we've had to 1958 in modern times," he said.

"I HAVE the feeling there may be another 1958 in the making," he added. "In 1958, Ike and Nixon had won, there was a Democratic Congress, (former Sen. William F.) Knowland was a 'sure thing' for governor, Clair Engle was a 'hopeless' candidate for the Senate, the Administration had blundered us into a recession and Democrats won a resounding victory."

That victory, he said, might well be nationwide, not just in California, adding: "We're teetering on the edge of a recession, unemployment is up and they (the Administration) have the worst of both worlds; they've raised all the old economic issues that Democrats have always capitalized on. Of course, if Nixon is skillful enough to cool the economy without a recession, there could be another scenario."

The six-foot-five former pro basketball player, brother of former Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall, expressed uneasiness over Vietnam.

"THERE'S A strong possibility Vietnam is going sour. Nixon bought time and is headed in the right direction, but by April or May — or surely by fall — we'll have reached a cross-over point where our withdrawals will pose the serious question of whether Saigon can handle the situation. I hope I'm wrong," he said.

The basic fallacy, Udall continued, is though we can't win with a half-million Americans, plus the Vietnamese, we can win only with the Vietnamese.

"It's like the Rams, unable to beat the Vikings, devising a plan in which they take out their quarterback, their three best linemen and a flanker and play with only six men," he said.

Udall said he has doubts also about the President's performance versus the rhetoric of his antipollution statements.

"IF I READ right," said Udall, "there is no new federal money or effort, but an actual cutback. Step up the rhetoric, cut back the money."

He said only $4 billion of Nixon's proposed $10 billion program for clean water would be federal money. The 1966 act, he added, specified the need for $1 billion this year just to keep pollution from getting worse, but Nixon cut it to $214 million, one-fifth of the need.

Congress raised it to $800 million "but there's some question, considering the Administration's preoccupation with inflation, that it will spend even that amount."

Udall said he doubts that Republicans have actually preempted the issues from Democrats. "Nixon has obviously jumped on the bandwagon," he said, "but he's really expanding old Democratic programs."

Japan Ups Spending for Defense

New York Times Service

TOKYO — Japan's defense spending in 1970 will make its sharpest rise since World War II, according to the draft national budget presented by the finance minister.

The ministry allocated approximately $1.6 billion for the self-defense forces in the fiscal year beginning April 1, an increase of 17.6 per cent over last year's defense budget.

The total national budget has been drafted at a record $22 billion, 19.9 per cent above budget for fiscal 1969.

Children March Over Taxes, School Busing

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — About 2,000 white children and adults marched through the downtown area Saturday to protest proposed school taxes and court-ordered school busing for achieving racial integration.

A counter demonstration of 18 black and white students paraded along side them without incident.

Another rally in support of the school levy, which will be voted on Tuesday, was staged at the state Capitol Friday night by about 100 high school students.

Organizers of the anti-busing, anti-tax march Saturday have called for defeat of the levy to protest U. S. Dist. Judge Luther Bohanon's decisions, which have forced reassignment and busing of students outside their neighborhoods to bring about racial integration in public schools.

They also said they objected to Bohanon's imposing jail sentences and fines on the Raymond P. York family, who defied the judge's order by sending their 14-year-old son to his old school, despite reassignment.

New Rioting in N. Ireland

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops in full riot regalia erected barbed wire barriers in the main streets Saturday night after a series of violent clashes between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

It was the first significant trouble in Londonderry since the ferocious wave of religious feuding which tore Northern Ireland apart last August — and the first time army cardons had appeared since the last of the barbed wire was taken away two months ago.

BATTERY POWER FOR 10-FOOT HOLES

Astronaut to Operate Electric Drill

By PAUL K. HARRAL

DENVER (UPI) — Where man goes, he attempts to do work. And where he would do work, he must have tools — even on the moon.

A space age research team at Martin Marietta's Denver space center will watch astronaut Fred W. Haise Jr. carefully during Apollo 13 this spring.

Haise will operate an electric drill on the surface of the moon — stepping beyond the simple hand tools used on the moon during man's first two landings there.

The purpose of the drill is to make two 10-foot holes for a scientific experiment to measure any heat the moon might radiate from its core — and, if there is time, a third hole to bring back a core sample of the moon to a depth never reached before.

"We've drilled 12 or 15 feet of solid rock with this device," said Donald S. Crouch, head of the company's Apollo lunar surface drill program, indicating almost lovingly the flat white drill.

THE DRILL, using some standard power drill components, is designed to produce one-half horsepower and operate 40 minutes from a silver-zinc battery of 24 volts. That's equal to 16 regular flashlight batteries.

"Based on what we think we know now about the lunar surface, we expect less than 10 minutes operation on the surface for the two holes," Crouch said.

The drill has been under development since June 1966 and man's knowledge of the moon has advanced much since then. But the predictions of the surface were so exact that Martin's scientists found they had no changes to make after the moon landings.

"Everyone feels what the drill can presently drill through meets present models (scientific simulations)," said William Britton, technical director of the drill project.

These simulations were based at first on visual observation, then refined from Ranger photographs beamed back to earth before the capsule crashed into the moon and refined further from Lunar Orbiter photographs which mapped the moon.

Recession? Maybe —But No Slump

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Will there be a recession along with inflation in 1970?

Very likely, according to some economists. Technically speaking, in fact, the recession — a very mild one — may already have begun, they say.

The White House economists disagree. President Nixon's annual Economic Report to Congress, due in a week or so, reportedly will reaffirm the forecast of a flattening-out, but no recession.

THE DIFFERENCE hinges largely on how you define a recession.

Most of the economists who predict one seem to be thinking of a dip so shallow it meets only a technical definition of the term.

Very few are forecasting the kind of slump that became familiar in the 1950s — a spiraling downskid of profits, production and income with painfully rising unemployment.

That could bring about what economists have called the "worst of all possible worlds" — a combined inflation and recession, with an unstoppable rise in living costs aggravating the distress of the unemployed.

NIXON LAST saw it happen in 1957, when he was vice president. Few consider it will happen again in 1970.

The government would ease its tight-money restraints before a serious slump set in, economists agree. And the slowdown would be countered by massive plant and equipment spending plans already announced by industry, together with prospective strong consumer buying demand.

BUT A moderate and relatively brief recession is possible, under the only widely accepted definition of the word recession. A decline in the real Gross National Product lasting for two or more quarters.

This is the definition developed and used for many years by the National Bureau of Economic Research, New York, the nonprofit organization formerly headed by Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chairman-designate of the Federal Reserve Board. The bureau is famed for its research on the business cycle.

The real GNP — the total value of all goods and services produced, measured in 1958 dollars to discount for inflation — dropped slightly in the last quarter of 1969. It moved to an annual rate of $730.5 billion, compared with the third quarter's $730.6 billion.

THE DECLINE of $100 million is considered statistically insignificant. But the present quarter is expected to produce a further and more substantial decline in real GNP.

Together, the two quarters of decline would constitute a recession, by the definition of the National Bureau, even if the nine-year boom should resume its expansion in the spring.

Nixon's economic message, Administration aides said, is likely to reflect the view of his Council of Economic Advisers that the first half of 1970 will witness a leveling-off, rather than a downturn, and that the year as a whole will be one of slow growth.

REFERRING to the National Bureau's definition of recession, one official commented that "zero growth for a long time could be much more serious than two quarters of actual decline in production."

The government itself has no definition of a recession. It recognizes that the National Bureau must have one, in order to establish the starting points and finish lines of every downturn and upturn in the business cycle.

But the definition doesn't mean much, one Administration adviser points out, without information on the scope, rapidity and total duration of the decline.

SPEAKING of the dangers of a prolonged period of zero growth, one official put it this way:

"Without production ever dropping at all, you could fall so far behind the growth of the labor force and the production potential that you would have rising unemployment and all the problems of a recession.

"In fact, you could suffer the problems of a recession even while growing, if the growth rate were too slow.

"Suppose you achieved only 1 per cent expansion a year in real GNP, instead of the 4 per cent needed — you would eventually wind up in a real depression.

"Nowadays, people have less interest n the turning points of economic trends, and more interest in whether we keep people employed and match our growth potential."

Train Hits Truck, Two Die in Flames

LODA, Ill. (AP) — Two men were killed and two seriously injured Saturday in a collision of the southbound Illinois Central Railroad's City of New Orleans passenger train and a bulk gasoline truck.

The truck exploded and spread a sheet of flames over the train's three locomotive units.

French Plan Chad

PARIS (AP) — French military forces expect to begin gradual withdrawal from Chad in July, authoritative sources reported.

About 2,500 French infantry, marines and foregin legionnaires have been helping the government of President Francois Tombalbaye since last April to control rebel bands that seized parts of the Chad Saharan interior.

SHOUT?

PELSALL, England (UPI) — Some people have telephones but cannot get their number listed in the directory. Leonard Wilcox's problem is he has a telephone number but no telephone.

The General Post Office and Wilcox's local council got into an argument eight months ago about the route over which the line would be strung.

Today, Wilcox was still waiting to answer the number the GPO has for him in the directory.

STEAMED ! !

HOUSTON (UPI) — Responsing to a call Wednesday that smoke was pouring from the roof vent of an apartment, axe-carrying firefighters banged on the apartment door to excavate the inhabitants.

The blushing young lady who peeked from behind the door assured them she was only taking a steam bath.

BIRD STRIKE

SAN GIMIGNANO, Italy (UPI) — The 300 pigeons of this medieval town have gone on a hunger strike.

They don't seem to like the new kind of birdseed a city policeman scatters daily in San Gimignano's two main squares. The policeman reports they have not eaten anything since the municipal council switched to the new quality seed four days ago.

UNDIVORCE

BOURNEMOUTH, England (UPI) — Bournemouth's divorce club has decided to cut down its number of meetings because of declining attendance.

The club started three years ago with more than 70 members but has dwindled to about 15 regulars.

The rest got married.

IN-GRAIN

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Roxbury Mills, a feed and fertilizer firm, is losing its bookkeeper, Elsie Rice. She will be replaced by Rosemary Wheat.

NECTAR?

LONDON (UPI) — Milk as it comes from the cow may be too ordinary in the 1970s, a government report suggested Thursday.

The report said the dairy industry should consider flavoring milk with rum, whisky and various fruits to boost sales.

BINGO PRIZE

BARRY, Wales (UPI) — The Empire Bingo and Social Club is offering a gentleman as a prize for the lady who wins their grand bingo prize.

Tyrone Francis, a 20-year-old six footer who is the prize, said for 24 hours he will do everything the winner says "anything short of murder."

TALL TALE

PETERBOROUGH, England (UPI) — Peter Hawes, who is 6 feet 6, is tired of answering stupid questions. So he had a card printed which says:

"I am six feet six inches tall, 252 pounds in weight and the possessor of size 14 shoes. No, I am not cold up here, nor am I the tallest man in the world. Yes, I do give the tailor a headache. No, I do not like low doors, overhanging shop awnings or single beds.

"Any further questions will be gladly answered."

ONE FOOT . . .

HALIFAX, England (UPI) — Mourners at a cemetery had to summon firemen Tuesday to free the leg of Sexton Ivor Hepworth, which was pinned inside the grave when the coffin was lowered. The funeral service continued after firemen departed.

LOST INDIAN

An Indian is being hunted in the Southland. He has been widely known for 40 years. But he has vanished into the darkness of night without so much as a parting war-hoop, and Jim Bachelor of Louise's Antiques, 13011 Beach Blvd., Westminster, would like to know where he is.

The Indian is a chief in full headress. He weighs 500 pounds and stands on a round pedestal. He is about two feet in diameter.

'MAD SNIPER' BATS THOUSAND, QUITS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two dozen police crouched for cover behind their patrol cars Saturday, dodging the "bullets" of a "mad sniper" who vowed to kill them and his wife and eight children.

"He's shooting at anything that moves," a police official reported during the hour and 50-minute seige.

Two sharpshooters trained high-powered rifles with scopes at the sniper's first-floor window in a dingy Bronx tenement facing the elevated Penn Central Railroad tracks.

Advancing warily in bulletproof vests, two more policemen entered the building and, talking through the closed apartment door, began the delicate process of pursuading the gunman to surrender.

Finally the door opened — revealing Rufus Lemmons and a baseball bat.

The noise of gunfire inside the apartment turned out to have been the bat hitting the metal door in rapid fire fashion. The bullets police were dodging were purely imaginary.

"It sounded like shooting," a detective said. "We thought we had a mad sniper on our hands."

Police took Lemmons to Jacobi Hospital for observation.

Papers Forced to Print 'Freedom' Rules

LIMA (UPI) — Lima newspapers Saturday were forced to print in its entirety on their first or second pages a 1,600-word official communique from the military government.

It was the most overt demand the government has made under the terms of its new "freedom of the press" law which actually places a whole new series of restrictions on the press designed to bring it under government control. Two newspapers refused the order.

One of the provisions of the law is that newspapers print in their entirety in their first pages all the official government communications.

The law does not allow the newspapers to make the decisions whether the official communiques are of interest to their readers. The communique printed Saturday was the "official" account of the visit Friday in Colombia of Foreign Minister Edgardo Mercado Jarrin.

The law, which has generated a storm of national and international protest since it was handed down Dec. 31, provides for a fine of $239 for failure to print the government communiques, apparently by accident. But the fine can be as much as $1,500 for refusal to print the communiques.

ISSUE SOBER WARNING

Soviets Deplore High Vodka Sales

By Bernard Gwertzman
New York Times Service

MOSCOW — A ranking Soviet law enforcement official has called for a sharp curtailment in the sale of vodka amid indications that the government will soon take stricter measures against drunkenness.

An article by Boris T. Shumilin, deputy minister of the interior, in Sovietskaya Rossiya, a central committee newspaper, was the most authoritative yet in the month long campaign in the press and on television against excessive drinking.

Soviet sources have said the campaign was launched by party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev in his unpublished speech to the Party Central Committe on problems in the economy. He was said to have called for an end to laxity on dealing with drunks who, he charged, are often responsible for slowing down production schedules in industry.

SINCE THEN, the press has published many suggestions on dealing with the problem. Television has focused on how drunks disturb public order and ruin families. Candid shots of drunks in "sobering up stations" have been shown on the screen, with flashbacks of the men in wedding-day suits, the moral being that drinking has ruined their lives.

Many Russians expect that some definite restrictions will be put into effect as the follow-up to the campaign, and Shumilin's article could represent policy.

Shumilin cited statistics indicating most crimes were due to those under the influence "losing their heads." He did not, however, disclose the number of persons charged with crimes or the number arrested for drunkenness.

"Some comrades," he said, advocate a "dry law" — otal abolition of strong spirits. But he said experience in other countries shows that "this does not solve the problem."

"More realistic means are needed," Shumilin said. He advocated "reasonable limitations and regulation of the sale of strong spirits, a wide antialcohol campaign, and punishment of those who maliciously violate the established limitations."

20 Pickets at Sheriff's Unit Quit

About 20 members of a car club picketing Norwalk's Sheriff's Station Saturday broke up their own demonstration after they were joined by two militant Mexican-American groups.

Casual Gents car club members were protesting the arrest of one of their number. They halted the demonstration, apparently believing the other groups intended to change its purpose, according to Sheriff's Lt. Joe Antonoff.

The two-hour "orderly demonstration" swelled to nearly 150 onlookers and pickets after members of Brown Berets and MECHA arrived, Antonoff said.

Antonoff said the Casual Gents broke up the picket line peacefully when members of the other groups began chanting slogans dealing with other issues.

The Casual Gents — all juveniles — had been protesting the January 18 arrest of a 16-year-old Norwalk youth on charge of assault with a deadly weapon during a fight between rival groups.

The youth is free in the custody of his parents pending further action by juvenile authorities.

School Dollar Squeeze--What's to Be Done?

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

It was a bleak week for dollar-pressed California school districts — including Long Beach.

First came reiteration from Washington that President Nixon will stand on his promise to veto a Health, Education and Welfare departmental budget that otherwise would provide Long Beach with $1 million, and $14 million to Los Angeles.

With schoolmen staggering from this blow, word came from Sacramento that efforts to aid all California districts via constitutional amendment were in trouble.

Needed are an additional 69,339 signatures to qualify for a June ballot a constitutional change that would require the state to provide an average of 50 per cent support for its schools.

"What's to be done?" is the strained question voiced in educational circles.

Prepare to reduce school programs in 1970-71? This would seem most likely in Long Beach.

Call an immediate tax election here to seek an emergency override fund? Timing is all-important, officials feel, and there is belief such an election might better be delayed.

Teacher organizations question the time factor and last week the smaller, militant American Federation of Teachers' Long Beach chapter demanded an immediate vote. There are indications, rumors, that the larger Teachers Association of Long Beach may soon move to such a position.

Wait until "they" solve all the problems in Washington and Sacramento?

A highly unlikely course, this, since educators basically are realists and it requires enormous naivete to assume today that a miracle can or will occur in the two capitals.

Of course, it's possible that proponents of the constitutional amendment can succeed in placing it on the June ballot, even in the face of an attorney general's ruling that the deadline passed last week.

And President Nixon's promised veto of HEW's $9.1 billion budgeted for education could be overridden by a two-thirds vote of both national legislative houses. Unless this or a similar step is taken, Long Beach faces loss of $1 million in aid to federally impacted area funds and as yet-undetermined amounts for compensatory education of the disadvantaged.

Nobody is holding his breath.

School officials today are tabulating results from a questionnaire distributed recently to the Long Beach district's 4,000 teaching and non-academic employes for their reactions.

Presented was a list of possible reductions which, if completely implemented, could result in saving the district about $6 million. A $4 million cut actually will be needed unless one of the "miracles" materializes.

Employes were asked their thinking as to where cuts should be imposed.

While large, significant savings can be effected only by reducing junior-senior high school days, raising class sizes in grades K-12 while reducing staff requirements, there are other areas considered for possible slashes.

BERRY STAND BEGINNINGS

Knotts Celebrate 50 Years

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

In 50 years, Walter and Cordelia Knott made it from a piece of pie to 15,000 daily dinners — each with a piece of pie.

Oddly enough, it wasn't what either of them wanted.

The fabulous story of how they beat the depression in the 20's with a roadside berry stand, which became world-famed Knott's Berry Farm, was the inspiration Saturday for a golden anniversary celebration in Buena Park.

It started with the traditional Prospectors' Day parade, to note the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill 122 years ago. It wound up with a program at the Berry Farm's Ghost Town, with Mr. and Mrs. Knott as the stars.

Their start at hosting the public was not without its problems, Knott recalled.

A depression was on, he remembered, adding that "we had to do something. We decided to set up a berry stand." That was in 1920 — on land that's now part of the Berry Farm. Soon they found customers. Seven years later, they added coffee and pie — and customers found them.

Then came the Great Depression of the late 1920's and early '30's, but instead of going under, the Knotts decided to serve chicken dinners.

She protested that "I don't want a restaurant," but she agreed to a "tea room."

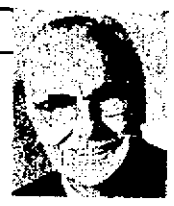

"The first day we sold eight dinners, at 65 cents apiece," Knott recalled.

Those dinners were delicious — and the customers told others. The Knotts were on their way to a business that put out more

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

IS the bloom off the space program? Not a word about it was said by Pres. Nixon in his State of the Union address, which didn't ignore many important subjects.

Sure, we're going ahead on the Apollo program, but now that the mountain has been climbed, public interest has lagged enough to permit the Pres. to pass it up as a topic with hardly anybody noticing.

Meanwhile, Cong. Craig Hosmer, reporting on a survey of opinions about public issues in the local Congressional district, says that respondents were divided 50-50 to a question as to whether we should send another man to the moon.

And for a little family exercise this morning, try quickly to name the four Americans who have placed their feet on the moon, all within the last few months. We tried it and got it, but not without some headscratching. Neil Armstrong and . . . er . . .

ONE of the wild-eyed young columnists on the State College campus newspaper, defending the showing of sex films in that controversial "Social Myths" class, said they were the kind of films that might be shown "at a Kiwannis banquet."

If he was talking about Kiwanis (with one n) he has made a startling revelation. Being an old Kiwanis member, and having attended a hundred pleasantly stuffy Kiwanis banquets, I'd like to know when the sex film showings begin. So, I'm sure, would many of my fellow Kiwanians.

LITTLE do we know in how many breasts the fires of political ambitions smoulder.

Councilman Emmet Sullivan's resignation from the Sixth Dist. position in L.B. fanned embers into flames, and at this writing, a total of 17 good citizens have served notice of intention to run.

If all qualify by the deadline Tuesday, it will be one of the largest candidate fields in the history of local politics, and with a good chance that the result will be decided by a plurality rather than a majority.

If you're unfamiliar with the municipal election system, it should be pointed out that a special election to fill a vacancy on the Council is conducted only in the district represented and with no run-off. In regular elections, each of the nine districts nominates two candidates for city-wide selection.

As has happened here, when a long-tenured incumbent leaves office, it often opens a floodgate. In a county in which I used to live, the sheriff quit voluntarily after 24 years in office. Twenty-two citizens filed for an office which, time after time, had gone to him by default. Even one woman filed, which was pretty amusing in that rough-tough high-country county. (She didn't make it.)

ON the phone is a citizen of Hawaiian Gardens with a down-to-earth constitutional question.

She wants to know if it would violate some provision of the Bill of Rights if a law were passed requiring people to move their empty rubbish and garbage cans from curbsides after a collection.

She alleges her area looks terrible, with cans standing on curbs week after week. When she complained, an official told her nothing could be done about it because it would encroach on individual rights.

Wonder how that one would fare in the Burger court?

I, P-T REPORTER RECEIVES AWARD

Bob Geivet, veteran Independent, Press-Telegram reporter, received the Orange County Press Club's "Sky" Dunlap Memorial Award during ceremonies Saturday night.

An estimated 350 persons attended the club's 15th annual awards banquet, held at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Geivet, a past president of the organization, was the first recipient of the Dunlap award, initiated for recognition of journalistic excellence. Dunlap died in 1968.

In all, some $1,500 in awards, representing 30 categories of competition, were presented to Orange County newsmen.

New Orange County Press Club officers were installed at the banquet. They include: Jim Duncan, president. Ray Rhoads, president-elect; Art Vinsel, vice president; Diane Reed, secretary; and Madison Burden, treasurer.

View of Plan to Revitalize L.B. Offered

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

The first city-wide presentation of the Gruen Report recommendations for revitalizing downtown Long Beach will be made Tuesday at 3 p.m. in the Elks Lodge, 4101 E. Willow St.

The meeting is open to the public on a first-come, first-served basis. No tickets or reservations are required.

Highlights of the report, which was developed over a 15-month period, will be given by Ernest Mayer Jr., city planning director, and officials of Victor Gruen Associates, which made the study.

Long Beach Chamber of Commerce and Long Beach District Board of Realtors are the cosponsors of Tuesday's meeting.

H. G. HANAWALT, chamber president, and Jack Krueger, president of realty board, joined in urging residents to attend the meeting to become "informed and involved in all categories of planning and decision-making that will affect the future character of our cities."

The Gruen Report recommends a multimillion dollar development of the area south of the proposed Pacific Coast Freeway, between Los Angeles River and Alamitos Avenue.

It envisions a 28-block "business core," which would include such things as a regional shopping center of 1 million square feet, an elevated train to serve the area, pedestrian malls, and extensive parking facilities.

Three major "residential neighborhoods," in which some streets would be closed to restrict traffic and make possible small parks and playgrounds, are proposed.

Adjacent to each "residential neighborhood" would be a "service area," which would include local shopping, schools, offices and related services.

The Gruen Report indicated that the entire project would represent a combined effort of government and private enterprise over a period of about 15 years.

TOTAL INVESTMENT, as seen by the Gruen planners, would involve about $500 million, of which $100 million would be public funds and the rest would come from private interests.

Wreckers Gain Delay on Building

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Auto wreckers in Carson have won temporary relief from a city ordinance that would require concrete block fences and other improvements on their property.

Long Beach Superior Court Judge Max Wisot issued an oral statement Friday which will be drafted into a formal preliminary injunction Monday. It would prohibit the city from closing or bringing criminal proceedings against auto wrecking businesses that don't comply with provisions of the ordinance.

Judge Wisot said wreckers shouldn't be required to make large improvement expenditures until the ordinance's validity is established in a trial before him next March 17.

Two auto wreckers already have spent $25,000 and $56,000, respectively, to build block walls.

The ordinance also requires auto wreckers to provide off-street parking, landscaping and, where needed, make dedications to widen streets.

Twenty of the city's 88 wrecking firms joined in a suit seeking a permanent injunction or outright over-turning of the ordinance on grounds of discrimination. They contend the ordinance doesn't require similar development by other heavily industrial firms.

Attorneys for the city and the auto wreckers will consult on exact wording of the preliminary injunction before presenting it to be issued by Judge Wisot on Monday.

USS Fanning Is Launched

Described as "part of our alternative to war," the USS Fanning was launched Saturday by Todd Shipyards Corp. in San Pedro.

Principal remarks at the launching ceremony were made by Rep. Alphonzo E. Bell, R-Calif.

Saying that we must do more than wish for an end to wars, Bell said the Fanning was built to remind others of America's might.

"FANNING IS part of our alternative to war," Bell said. "It is my belief that she will prove an effective deterrent to those who might foolishly test our will, for our strength is great."

John T. Gilbride, Todd president, in his remarks at the launching, revealed a $20-million expansion plan for the San Pedro shipbuilding facility.

The Fanning, last of 14 destroyer escorts built by Todd under a current U.S. Navy contract, is the third ship named for Lt. Nathaniel Fanning, a Revolutionary War hero.

The newest Fanning is 438 feet long, displaces 4,000 tons fully loaded and has a top speed of 27 knots.

Mrs. Robert H. Lathrop, great-great-great granddaughter of Lt. Fanning, christened the ship.

Press Barred as 9 Candidates 'Meet People'

Nine candidates out of 17 filing for the Sixth District vacancy on the City Council in the April 17 special election showed up before a sparse audience at a "meet the people" session at Polytechnic High School auditorium Saturday night.

Before introducing the candidates, Rev. Leon Morrisson, pastor of the First Providence Missionary Baptist Church, requested that all members of the press leave the gathering.

The meeting, arranged by the Long Beach Central Area Neighborhood Council, was attended by about 50 citizens.

We have only three years to save ourselves from an insidious international Communist conspiracy, a marketing professor from California State College at Long Beach told a Knotts Berry Farm audience Saturday.

Professor Charles E. Wolff told almost 100 persons at the farm's Independece Hall that the "200-year-old conspiracy" works through "so-called civil rights groups" funded by major corporation foundations.

But the conspiracy couldn't last long if it were only exposed, Wolff said.

"We've got to take an awful lot of little people who are worried about their little world and slam them right between the eyes with the truth," he said.

"We must save ourselves from this darkness of sin and sedition and anarchy," he said. "The Communists and the super rich and the conspiracy are all inter-

FROM VIET VETERAN

Letter Hints New My Lai Disclosures

Unspecified "other aspects" of the alleged My Lai massacre "ought to be looked at," says Vietnam veteran Ronald L. Ridenhour, who first revealed the March, 1968, incident.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., disclosed Saturday in an interview at Los Angeles International Airport, that Ridenhour had sent him a letter suggesting attention be given those "other aspects."

UDALL RIDENHOUR

Udall, visiting Anaheim for a Democratic fund-raising event Saturday night, substituting for Democratic National Chairman Sen. Fred Harris, D-Okla., said he passed Ridenhour's letter to the Defense Dept., and "I am satisfied those aspects will be looked into."

HE WOULD NOT divulge details of Ridenhour's letter nor otherwise comment on the alleged massacre, because "we're interested now in seeing there is a thorough investigation and a fair trial."

Udall was not hesitant to talk partisan politics, however. He said Democrats have the potential to score as well in this year's elections as they did in 1958. "This year's scenario is the closest we've had to 1958 in modern times," he said.

"I HAVE the feeling there may be another 1958 in the making," he added. "In 1958, Ike and Nixon had won, there was a Democratic Congress, (former Sen. William F.) Knowland was a 'sure thing' for governor, Clair Engle was a 'hopeless' candidate for the Senate, the Administration had blundered us into a recession and Democrats won a resounding victory."

That victory, he said, might well be nationwide, not just in California, adding: "We're teetering on the edge of a recession, unemployment is up and they (the Administration) have the worst of both worlds; they've raised all the old economic issues that Democrats have always capitalized on. Of course, if Nixon is skillful enough to cool the economy without a recession, there could be another scenario."

The six-foot-five former pro basketball player, brother of former Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall, expressed uneasiness over Vietnam.

"THERE'S A strong possibility Vietnam is going sour. Nixon bought time and is headed in the right direction, but by April or May — or surely by fall — we'll have reached a crossover point where our withdrawals will pose the serious question of whether Saigon can handle the situation. I hope I'm wrong," he said.

The basic fallacy, Udall continued, is though we can't win with a half-million Americans, plus the Vietnamese, we can win only with the Vietnamese.

"It's like the Rams, unable to beat the Vikings, devisiting a plan in which they take out their quarterback, their three best linemen and a flanker and play with only six men," he said.

Udall said he has doubts also about the President's performance versus the rhetoric of his antipollution statements.

"IF I READ right," said Udall, "there is no new federal money or effort, but an actual cutback. Step up the rhetoric, cut back the money."

He said only $4 billion of Nixon's proposed $10 billion program for clean water would be federal money. The 1966 act, he added, specified the need for $1 billion this year just to keep pollution from getting worse, but Nixon cut it to $214 million, one-fifth of the need.

Congress raised it to $800 million "but there's some question, considering the Administration's preoccupation with inflation, that it will spend even that amount."

Udall said he doubts that Republicans have actually preempted the issues from Democrats. "Nixon has obviously jumped on the bandwagon," he said, "but he's really expanding old Democratic programs."

Japan Ups Spending for Defense

New York Times Service

TOKYO — Japan's defense spending in 1970 will make its sharpest rise since World War II, according to the draft national budget presented by the finance minister.

The ministry allocated approximately $1.6 billion for the self-defense forces in the fiscal year beginning April 1, an increase of 17.6 per cent over last year's defense budget.

The total national budget has been drafted at a record $22 billion, 19.9 per cent above budget for fiscal 1969.

Children March Over Taxes, School Busing

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — About 2,000 white children and adults marched through the downtown area Saturday to protest proposed school taxes and court-ordered school busing for achieving racial integration.

A counter demonstration of 18 black and white students paraded along side them without incident.

Another rally in support of the school levy, which will be voted on Tuesday, was staged at the state Capitol Friday night by about 100 high school students.

Organizers of the anti-busing, anti-tax march Saturday have called for defeat of the levy to protest U. S. Dist. Judge Luther Bohanon's decisions, which have forced reassignment and busing of students outside their neighborhoods to bring about racial integration in public schools.

They also said they objected to Bohanon's imposing jail sentences and fines on the Raymond P. York family, who defied the judge's order by sending their 14-year-old son to his old school, despite reassignment.

New Rioting in N. Ireland

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops in full riot regalia erected barbed wire barriers in the main streets Saturday night after a series of violent clashes between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

It was the first significant trouble in Londonderry since the ferocious wave of religious feuding which tore Northern Ireland apart last August — and the first time army cordons had appeared since the last of the barbed wire was taken away two months ago.

To poison air ranked with great crimes

WE HAVE BEEN looking at the opening statements of the candidates for attorney general from the viewpoint of the single issue of pollution. For too long, we think, the men in this office have been taking a narrow view of their powers in this field. The time has come when the attorney general should assume the mantle of leadership

Quite frankly, we'd like to see somebody in the office who would take a leaf from the notebook of Illinois' William Scott Jr. In the past six months, he has brought more than 200 lawsuits against polluting industries in a crusade that has attracted nationwide attention.

"What greater crime is there," he asks, "than to posion the air that people breathe?"

IN OUR PERUSAL, we've been seeking statements that had a ring to them like Scott's. The nearest at this hour seem to be those of Evelle J. Younger. He clearly sees his role as that of an activist.

"I shall actively assert the previously unused powers of the attorney general's office . . ." he said the day he announced. "The time has come to treat destruction of the environment on a par with crimes against society."

Younger also has an interesting plan for practical implementation of his "direct legal attack on the pollutors." It's the formation of an "environmental task force," a group of scientists and economists who can identify sources of pollution and serve as expert witnesses in court.

He seems to understand, too, that the attorney general, as the state's chief law enforcement officer, will set the tone for the remaining enforcement agencies in the state. He promises an "environmental quality control divison" that will study ecological developments and provide local law enforcement officers and agencies with encouragement and assistance.

ALL THE CANDIDATES will be making a mistake, we think, — if in making known their feelings on law and order — they obscure their position on the pollution issue. In the minds of many, the one is as important to the public welfare as the other.

"How much more destruction and impairment of human, animal and plant life through pollution of our air, land and water must there be before we realize we can no longer afford to do less" than wage all out war on pollution? Younger asked in his announcement.

We hope, be it he or whoever who finally assumes the attorney general's chair, that they remember that question.

A birthday present for state

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK
RALPH HINMAN JR.

WHILE OTHER California school officials relax on Lincoln's birthday, state Board of Education members will be deeply involved in one of 1970's most crucial educational policy-making sessions.

Of prime significance is the top agenda item — "Reorganization of the Board" — to be considered when President Howard Day, a Long Beach insurance broker, opens a Feb. 12 meeting in San Francisco.

Three new members will be appointed between now and then. For the first time in nearly a decade, an all-Republican board then may be sitting. But the identity of three successors to the last of Edmund G. Brown's holdover appointees remains a closely guarded secret in Sacramento.

Where does this unknown trio fit into the spectrum of contemporary Republicanism? Moderate? Conservative? Ultra-Conservative?

THIS IS THE question being pondered in statewide educational circles today. For these three will hold in their collective hand the balance of power on the state Board of Education during the coming year.

Their votes Feb. 12 can guarantee Day another term as a moderate peacemaking presiding officer or, conversely, give the post to a more conservative member should such a candidate arise.

During the past year regular board-watchers noted a small but distinct political polarization growing among supposedly non-partisan members. It was particularly noticeable during three hearings devoted to a pair of moral guidelines developed for use on all school levels.

At issue were codes developed by state Supt. Max Rafferty's protege, Dr. Edwin Klotz, and by a committee whose chairman was member Donn Moomaw, a Bel Air Presbyterian minister.

Klotz' critics claimed his guidelines would have imposed a 19th Century, Protestant-Puritan-McGuffey's Reader ethical stance on children of many racial or religious heritages.

DR. MOOMAW'S committee report — ultimately adopted by the board with few modifications— took a middle-of-the-road position, stressing the teaching of American liberty under law while leaving instruction in basic religious beliefs to home and church.

A January public hearing in Los Angeles to weigh the relative merits of Klotz vs. Moomaw almost turned into a donnybrook. Klotz' partisans screamed, hissed, booed; accused Rev. Moomaw of "sweeping Christianity out of our schools," Godlessness, Communist leanings and possibly worse.

Among the ironies overlooked: moderately conservative Dr. Moomaw is Gov. Reagan's "home pastor" in Bel Air; the governor's influential educational consultant, Dr. Alex Sheriffs, served as a member of Moomaw's committee.

The final board vote was all-but-unanimous, with but one negative tally cast—ironically enough, by outgoing liberal member Dorman Commons, first appointed by Pat Brown.

"I reluctantly must vote no," Commons said, "because (the revised guidelines) do not completely repudiate Klotz."

During heated debate, however, there seemingly was sympathy, tacit or otherwise, for the Klotz code from members Eugene N. Ragle, Dr. Thomas Harward and Henry T. Gunderson.

MEMBERS indicating favor for the Moomaw version were its author, Dr. John R. Ford and Mrs. Donald Krotz. Day, as presiding officer, maintained a completely neutral position during debate but voted for Moomaw.

The three now-departed lame-ducks, Commons, Dr. Miguel Montes and Mrs. Seymour Mathiesen, urged acceptance of the more moderate stance.

Rafferty, who serves as chief administrative officer to the board, remained outside the fray even when Moomaw partisans repeatedly tacked a "Rafferty-Klotz" label to the conservative guidelines.

In a postscript to the meeting, Commons' swansong as a member bitterly indicted Rafferty for "incompetence, negligence . . . and cynical (political) misuse of his non-partisan office."

Rafferty's defense was voiced by Ragle, in an equally bitter attack on Commons. The superintendent himself did not comment.

To outside observers these incidents were but straws in a coming wind. Overheated ideological feuds among fellow members of the same party could result in a paralysis of strong statewide leadership at a time when educational statesmanship is so critically needed.

The signs are present. These yet-to-be-named appointees are destined to play crucial roles far out of proportion to their actual rank as three freshmen members.

Plight of Redmen

EDITOR:

Your editorial, "Redmen Face Many Moons of Waiting" was greatly appreciated by this (part) Indian. The neglect of Indians is indeed enormous. The injuries will not stop as long as the U.S. government persecutes and robs them as it still does.

My people, the Cherokees, were torn from their homes on the East Coast, their homes looted and burned, driven like cattle through thousands of miles of incredibly cold wintry weather, with little or no food, one out of three dying, to what is now Oklahoma, to be theirs "evermore." But "evermore" was less than 70 years, when again their homes uprooted, their land greatly reduced and parceled out. Last September, as the story forever contines, the state of Oklahoma wanted more — and removed my mother's my grandmother's, my great-uncle's and aunt's bones for "progress".

Bail denial a constitutional possibility

BOB HOUSER

BAIL REFORM, Dist. Atty. Evelle J. Younger indicated here Friday, may be the "most radical, most dramatic" facet of his campaign to become California's attorney general.

That may be wishful thinking. At this stage it seems unlikely the three other Republican candidates for Atty. Gen. Thomas Lynch's seat will wax hot for this issue as a hinge for victory. But on the off chance it is that important, Younger's stance should be recorded.

Erase the whole system, he says, and build a new one that is logical. Release on money bail today is dependent upon the economic status of the defendant. Who makes bail? The wealthy or moderately wealthy or the knowledgeable hoodlum who has salted away his rainy day bail fund. But the truck driver father of six in his first pinch with the law either can't make bail or pays an economically crippling premium for the money.

The theory that posted money assures a defendant's return is not true, Younger says. He feels a more compelling device to assure return would be making failure to return a separate crime.

A judge should be able to deny bail completely — despite the letter of the Constitution — in cases where the defendant may return to crime or where his own safety is at stake.

Younger's examples: A man tries to kill his wife, fails but promises to finish the job when he's free. Or an assassin like Sirhan Sirhan whose life might be taken if he were released.

Those charged with such offenses as rioting and child molesting could be released on their own recognizance but the judge should be able to set strict conditions regulating defendants' movements during that release. Violation of conditions would be a separate felony for which a mandatory consecutive sentence should be added to whatever penalty is assessed for the original crime.

YOUNGER POINTS out that the U.S. Constitution says that "excessive bail shall not be required." But under our present system the only thing a court can do to keep the would be wife killer in custody is to set bail at an impossibly high figure.

"There are situations," he said, "in which it is just not realistic to set bail on a certain defendant."

Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., has a bill pending which aims to solve the problem at the federal level. Younger said experts agree that the remedy is available with such legislation and would not be violative of the Constitution. "All this bill would say is that in certain circumstances, and on a proper showing, 'no bail' would not be excessive."

California's Constitution, in Younger's view, "seems to say that a person has an absolute right to bail except in capital cases. To this extent California's Constitution provision seems to be more restrictive or more protective of the arrestee than does the U.S. Constitution.

"WHATEVER THE device requires, whether it be a simple legislative enactment or amendment to the Constitution of the State of California, we must have such a procedure for our state."

Younger has proposed two other pieces of legislation with high priority in his campaign talks. One would legalize wire tapping and bugging at the state level as is now the case at the federal level. Another would legalize court issuance of search warrants by telephone.

Just good ol' golden rule daze

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — There is an abundance of things wrong with the way California's public schools are financially supported. About the only good thing which can be said about the problem is that it has just about gotten so bad that something is finally going to have to be done about it.

BOB SCHMIDT

The varied and circuitous routes that money takes as it travels from the taxpayer to the schools defy analysis. Fourteen pages are required in the 1969-70 Long Beach Unified School District budget just to list the different sources of income for the district.

There are federal funds coming directly from federal sources, federal funds channeled through state sources, federal funds going through local sources, regular state apportionments and special state apportionments, income from county sources and income from district sources.

And each of those broad categories is broken down into numerous subcategories. There are various formulas for various programs for various class and age groupings.

THE STATE has established that it costs at least "X" amount of dollars per child to maintain a basic education program. On top of that basic figure are the costs of numerous other programs. Some of those programs are mandated., some are optional.

There are programs for the handicapped, programs for veterans, programs emphasizing vocational training, programs for adults. There are incentives to keep class sizes down, and incentives to unify. There are school lunch programs and breakfast programs and milk programs and seemingly endless et ceteras.

Local school district officials complain that the state, for example, mandates a program, then fails to provide adequate funds to keep it going or to account for growth.

This incredibly cumbersome financing procedure is now, very simply, breaking down of its own weight.

The expenditure demands, because of inflation and the continuing population increase, have strained the present revenue sources. More youngsters mean more classrooms are needed, which cost more to build this year than last. It means more teachers and non-certificated personnel, who get paid more this year than last. It means more books, which cost more this year than last. Et cetera again.

NOT ONLY is the present system of financing schools clearly inadequate, but it permits inequities. A youngster lucky enough to be born into a family who lives in a wealthy school district has the opportunity to receive a higher quality of education than one not so lucky, simply because the wealthy district can finance more programs.

A teacher can earn more money in the Long Beach Unified School District than in the Lawndale District. He can earn more teaching in Beverly Hills than in Long Beach.

If you're a competent teacher with a family to feed, where do you go?

Predictably, there are already a number of bills concerning school financing before the state legislature. There will be more.

But the state alone can't solve the problem, because local school districts are dependent upon federal financing, too.

Financing of public schools is a federal-state-local matter. All three entities must be involved in a common search for a solution or else it will be like three carpenters individually trying to shorten the legs of a table in the dark.

One of the alternatives suggested is greater reliance on the private school. Sen. John G. Schmitz of Orange County suggests tax credits for families who send their youngsters to private schools and thereby ease the burden on public schools

But the end result, as far as the parents' pocketbook is concerned, would be the same. Schools cost money. Better schools are going to cost more money.

But maybe the public schools wouldn't cost so much if government could find a way to get the money from the taxpayer to the schools without so much of it disappearing enroute.

L. A. C. SAYS

A cause for pride in W. Europe and U.S.

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

AS OUR ECONOMY slows down under impact of the efforts to curb inflation it is comforting to realize how very well we have progressed and overcome previous periods when much the same conditions prevailed. It is comforting to view the splendid recovery in Western Europe from conditions far more dangerous than any we have had over the past third of a century.

The news of prosperity in the major countries of Western Europe should remind us that unless we take as courageous actions as they did we may suffer a much more serious recession than is necessary. It could have a much greater impact on the world economy because of our greatness. We have a population of about 204 million compared with a total of about 219 million in West Germany, France, Britain and Italy. But our gross national product (total value of all goods and services) is more than double that of these four great nations and more than that of all the Communist nations.

IT SHOULD BE interesting to the reader to compare the figures given in an article in the Arizona Republic. It should cause support for the President in his efforts to retard the inflation we are suffering or we will not only end in a serious recession here but severely affect the economy of our friends. It should be remembered our 1929-1930s depression came after European nations had been suffering from similar depressions. Some of the contrasts are given as follows:

The French mass circulation weekly, Paris Match, recently published interesting and encouraging figures on the growing economy of West Europe. The major West European states — West Germany, France, Britain and Italy — are still considerably behind the development level of the U.S. But they have progressed enormously in the past few years, and West Europe can now be considered one of the most prosperous areas of the world.

West Europe's giant is West Germany, whose gross national product exceeds $125 billion a year. France comes next with $115 billion, followed by Britain with $110 billion, and Italy with $74 billion. West Germany's population, however, is nearly 60 million, while the population of France is 51 million, of Britain 56 million, and of Italy 52 million. (Comparative figures for the U.S.A.: population 204 million, GNP — over $900 billion.)

FRANCE HOLDS the first place in passenger cars — over 13.5 million, followed by Britain — 13 million; West Germany — 12.5 million; and Italy — 9 million. Britain is first in TV sets — nearly 15 million, followed by West Germany — 13.5 million, France — 8 million, and Italy — 7.5 million.

Britain is also first in telephones — 12 million, followed by West Germany — 10 million, Italy — 7 million, and France — 6.5 million. (Comparative figures for the U.S.A.: autos — 102 million, TV sets—78 million, telephones — 101 million.)

These European figures are even more impressive when we recall that West Europe was a disaster area some 25 years ago. Italy and Germany were defeated countries whose economies lay in utter ruin. France, though on the side of the victors, hardly fared any better. Britain, once the proud leader of an empire, faced enormous post-war economic difficulties and seemed destined for bankruptcy.

The United States played a very important part in the economic recovery of all these nations. U.S. economic assistance, channeled first through the Marshall Plan, put West Europe on its feet and built the groundwork which made her economic progress possible.

Today when pessimists and gloomlovers talk only of the failures of U.S. foreign policy, it is well to remind them of the U.S. record in West Europe during the past 25 years. It is a proud record of really splendid achievements, rarely equalled in the history of nations.

Who cares for child if mom works?

WHEN THE NIXON Administration unveiled its package of welfare reforms last August, it indirectly focused on a problem that is certain to get a bundle of attention in the 1970s: the growing need for child care centers in the United States.

Not since the Second World War, when hundreds of thousands of women enlisted in the war effort and trooped off to defense factories, has the problem of working mothers and the care of their children taken on such an overriding sense of urgency.

Today there are upwards of 11 million working mothers in the country —or almost 40 per cent of all the women now working. And it is generally agreed by child care and nursery school experts that present facilities aren't meeting the needs of an overwhelming number of them—not to mention the needs of those mothers who would gladly go to work if child centers were available at tolerable prices.

The Los Angeles city school system, for example, now serves 5,000 children in its extended day care centers. Those on its waiting lists number 12,000.

IN LONG BEACH, the Unified School District runs 19 state-supported children's centers for more than 1,100 youngsters. And while the city appears to be in better shape than Los Angeles, officials like Mrs. Helen L. Rose, supervisor of early childhood education for the district, acknowledge that many more families would use them if the families could qualify under the program and additional centers were operating.

Long Beach's centers are part of a unique network of state centers. In fact, California is the only state in the union that operates a day care program through its school system.

The program was established—and originally financed—by the federal government in 1943 as a war measure, but "was continued after 1945 (in California) because of the still-existing need for women in the labor force," according to Theresa S. Mahler of the California Children's Centers Directors and Supervisors Assn.

IT IS NOW RUN by the state's 82 school districts and serves 21,000 youngsters in 347 centers. The state pays 75 per cent of the cost of operating the system—or $11 million—while the parents ante up an extra $4 million on the basis of their ability to pay.

Gradually, the centers have become more than baby-sitting facilities. They now offer an instructional experience that makes them, in effect, an extension of the schools. Today, because their fees are tied to the parents' incomes, they provide a vital service to thousands of families that cannot afford private schools.

Yet the fact that the program is designed primarily for low-income families and a few "exempt" categories, such as teachers, migrant farm workers and nurses, indicates how narrow its base is. At best, only a small portion is served.

To further limit its reach, the program takes only children over two. Yet thousands of women with children under two both desire and need employment, according to George Toll, former employment service manager in Long Beach, who believes the exclusion of younger tots from most nursery schools is a major contributor to female unemployment and the welfare problem.

UNTIL RECENTLY, children whose parents worked in industries "essential to the mobilization effort" —a throwback to the war—were eligible for the schools' day care program. But the "defense" category was dropped from the eligibility list two months ago, forcing a number of families, including 18 in Long Beach, off the program. Their places are being filled by welfare mothers being trained for jobs in what is known as the WIN program—or Work Incentive Program, a federally financed effort run by the State Human Resources agency.

Opening the program to more welfare mothers is a step in the right direction. The trouble is, it looks too much like a final step. There's nothing to indicate that the state intends to open the program to more of the poor, let alone those thousands of families who, living on the shaky margins of the middle class, can neither qualify for the program nor afford private alternatives.

Some of the mothers in those families may, if they're lucky and can afford them, have babysitters—although sitters can hardly offer children the same creative opportunities that a good children's center can.

The rest, along with their husbands (if they have them), must continue to struggle desperately to make ends meet. Worse yet, many of them must bear the psychological burden of a way of life—domesticity—that increasing numbers of them are finding empty and unsatisfying.

CALIFORNIA SHOULD BE credited for keeping and strengthening the wartime system of child care centers. But the fact remains that its policies fall far short of meeting the state's human and social requirements in a field that not only demands a greater commitment of resources, but some fresh perspectives as well.

In a way, President Nixon's plan to create more publicly supported day care centers for welfare mothers who want to work is merely an extension of the California system. As such, it reveals the same inherent paradoxes. Unless the federal government, for example, creates more real job opportunities in an economy that seems perpetually plagued by unemployment, the training of more workers can hardly serve a useful or humanitarian purpose. That way lies more bitterness, not less.

Moreover, unless the administration program is a massive one, it is sure to exaggerate the plight of large segments of the poor and middle class that won't be able to qualify for it.

SOMEHOW, THE NATION is going to have to accommodate itself to growing numbers of working mothers (unless, of course, we begin to accept the concept of leisure and income maintenance on a large scale).

It won't be only economic pressure that forces many of the mothers onto the job market—although that will remain a powerful factor. It will be the dawning realization by many of them that life's creative possibilities lie outside the home, not in it. For some, it will be the growing conviction that housework and child rearing have become a form of enslavement.

There is obviously a social revolution afoot among women. Perhaps its anger and content were best expressed by writer Susan Suthelm in a recent article for Motive magazine, a publication of the United Methodist Church.

"We are half of mankind," wrote Miss Suthelm. "We are 53 per cent of America. We've been pinched and repressed and distorted in a thousand ways for a thousand years and more. Tap that sublimated and misdirected energy, and something's going to happen. Is happening."

Assuming Miss Suthelm is correct —and many think she is—there's little question that the pressure for public day care centers and nurseries will continue to build. The question is whether the nation will respond now to the pressure, or wait until it explodes in another one of those social crises that seem to be a hallmark of our time.

THOUGHTS

Let us then with confidence draw near to the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy and find grace to help in time of need.—Hebrews 4:16.

A jungle wallah at last oasis

MY FAVORITE weekly newspaper, the late Rosalie Ripsaw, used to be filled with items like the following:

"Irma Heinrich spent Saturday at the Ed Thomas home at Walthill. Mrs. Ed (Gracie Schmidt) is her aunt on her mother's side."

And, in the same edition:

"Mrs. Ed Thomas (Gracie Schmidt) of Walthill visited here Monday at the home of her niece, Irma Heinrich."

Like the Rosalie Ripsaw this column brings you News From All Over. Recently we talked about prohibition in the U.S. As part of our neighborhood news service we report today on prohibition in India.

India started drying up in 1957. The laws work little hardship on tourists. You can get a jug of wine or spirits if you are of drinking age. In India that's 16. However, since public drinking is discouraged you can no longer order a cocktail while watching a movie. This means that the Plaza Theater in New Delhi is no longer the golden oasis treasured by the jungle wallahs of World War II.

YOU DO NOT KNOW about wallahs? In the north of India wallah is the term of a huckster of goods or services. Its fine flexibility endeared it to American soldiers in 1943-'45 and they added it to their slang, which at Rear Echelon Hq. of the China-Burma-India Theater became a jabberwocky of Hindustani, Brooklynese, Lower Alabamaian and Upper Kansan. An officer was a brass wallah, an Anglo-Indian date was a love wallah and in one happy instance a young clerk from the state of Washington became a Walla Walla wallah.

Jungle wallah was a derisive term for the typewriter commando. The farther he was from the jungle the more jungly he tried to appear. His uniform was standardized — suntan trousers and blouse, crisp bush jacket, topee, sun-glasses and soft boots empurpled with native dye like Little Black Sambo's.

The open neck of the blouse reeked with mosquito repellent as the Rear Echelon file clerk set forth after evening chow, jingling with silver 8-anna pieces and pointing for the Plaza Theater on the far side of Connaught Circus. If the evening was hot as usual the specimen paused in front of Davico's Restaurant and whistled for a tonga. The two-wheeled vehicle was drawn by a skeleton pony under the whiplash of a tonga wallah twisting an ingratiating smile around a wispy mustache.

AT THE PLAZA THEATER our hero alighted in two pieces. He awarded the driver a one-anna (two-cent) tip, brushed off shrill protests, stode into the modernistic lobby and queued up to reserve a two-rupee seat. The double bill might be "The Palm Beach Story" and "Reveille With Beverly." Or "Tortilla Flat" and "Reveille With Beverly." Ann Miller danced in "Reveille." Indian theater managers were convinced that bare-legged dancing outside the seraglio was indecent and, therefore, just what the Yanks wanted.

After pocketing his ticket the jungle wallah looked at his post exchange watch. It was 6:10 and that meant 50 minutes to kill. The place to kill them was the air-conditioned bar. Due to rationing, no liquor was sold until 6:30. The white-turbaned, black-mustached waiter shuffled his naked feet while Sahib made a reluctant choice among lime, lemon or orange squash (pop) and Vimto. Vimto sounded like a restorative of powers sapped by the sub-tropics, but proved a murky grape phosphate with a sneaky, bitter after-taste. At 6:30 Vimto yielded to Tom Collins. Two double-Toms knocked hell out of a 5-rupee note. They tasted like carnival lemonade laced with fusel oil. After 19 months in India they tasted good.

SHARP ON 7 the curtain went up. Sahib lingered over his Collins, hoping to avoid the 50 or 60 violently tinted advertising slides which preceded the newsreel. When at last he lurched into his appointed seat the slides were still running the gamut from Rajah's Perfumed Castor Oil ("for Mem-Sahib's hair") to Ram Ghopal's Piggery.

The British Paramount News was travel-worn. It was June in New Delhi, but one of the scenes pictured GI's attending Thanksgiving services in Westminster Abbey. Opening with a fierce American eagle, United News brought the Pacific campaign up to Eniwetok. Indian News Parade showed a Sikh festival, grain rationing in Bombay, a cannon chopping up a hill in Burma, and one Japanese prisoner.

After that "Tortilla Flat" started to unreel and somehow became jumbled with "Reveille With Beverly." (Indian film operators had only the vaguest notion of proper sequence in foreign films). Indeed, at one point Akim Tamiroff exited from Mr. Steinbeck's movie and brazenly materialized in "Reveille," leering at Beverly.

THIS MISHMASH disturbed our jungle wallah only slightly. Lounging in a leather-cushioned chair, he was fortified by the recurrent sluff-sluff of the barefoot booze wallah, bearing fresh fusel.

When the lights went up, a trailer made in 1937 portrayed the King and Queen while "God Save the King" scratched off the sound-track. This forced the soggy clerk up on the heels of his purple boots.

He staggered out into a tonga and sang broken pieces of "Bless 'em All" as he was jolted back to the barracks. In the gloaming (an Indian mid-summer evening can gloam clear up to 9:30) the horse looked like twin xylophones mounted on a mechanized step-ladder.

SUN SHINES ON CROSBY

Yancey Clings to Lead

PEBBLE BEACH — Playing conservatively because he didn't "feel quite right," Bert Yancey grimly clung to a one-stroke advantage in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Classic Saturday with a 72 over the rugged Pebble Beach layout under surprisingly sunny skies.

The even-par round gives Yancey a 54-hole total of 209, one swing better than Bob Goalby, Rod Funseth and Don Massengale, winner of the 1966 Crosby.

Funseth had a 68 at Pebble Beach, Goalby a 71, while Massengale, playing Spyglass, continued to be the model of consistency as he posted his third consecutive 70.

Another stroke back at 211 is Bobb Dickson, former national amateur champion from Oklahoma, who had a 68 at Pebble, while defending champion George Archer is tied with George Knudson and Dave Stockton at 212. Stockton had the low round of the group — a five-under 67 at Cypress Point.

Arnold Palmer is among eight tied at 213, four strokes off the pace, after a par 72 at Spyglass.

Jack Nicklaus is at 214 following a par round of 72 at Cypress.

Billy Casper, the other member of this country's "big three," lags far behind at 218 despite a 71 at Spyglass.

The golfers appear to be "home free" weatherwise. Weather forecasts call for partly cloudy skies today and the only precipitation which might be recorded would be nothing more serious than a light shower or two.

All the leaders agreed, "it was a perfect day for golf" even though the courses were still quite soggy and muddy from a downpour during the night.

Related Story, Scores Pg. S-4

Yancey got off to a bad start when he bogeyed two of the first three holes and led to his decision to play conservatively.

He opened up with a bad tee shot and followed by putting his 5-iron approach in a trap as he bogeyed No. 1.

Bert bounced back to birdie the second hole after almost holing out a brilliant pitch. The ball stopped just two inches from the cup.

But he bogeyed No. 3 when he overshot the green. It took another spectacular effort by Bert to get him back even with par — a 75-foot putt from the far edge of the green on the 9th hole.

"I'm real happy to get a 72," he said. "I played much too conservatively. But I didn't quite feel right. I wasn't swinging too smoothly at the beginning, so I decided to play it a little on the safe side.

"As most everyone knows, the mark of this Pebble Beach course is that you can make a six or seven on virtually every hole . . . and I wanted to stay out of trouble."

Goalby, usually one of the better putters on the tour, had a hectic time on the bumpy greens at Pebble Beach, costing himself no less than five strokes by missing short putts — a pair of three-footers and three from four feet. Three of the misses cost him birdies while the other three led to bogeys.

But he still was pleased with his 71 at Pebble, "which has eaten me alive in previous years. I've never played the course very well in all the years I've competed in this tournament. I had a chance to win it one time until I took a seven in the last hole."

Massengale, who recorded his first PGA tour triumph in the '66 Crosby and then notched his only other win a few weeks later in the Canadian Open, is on the comeback trail after taking some time off last fall to work out the problems in his swing.

After making two bogeys in the first six holes, he recovered with birdies on No. 7 and No. 9, sinking a 30-foot putt on the latter hole. Don then posted back-to-back birdies on 14 and 15 — dropping in a 15-foot putt on the 14th — for his third sub-par round.

Funseth, the 36-year-old San Jose veteran whose only tour victory came in the 1965 Phoenix Open, had his second 68 in a row following a costly 74 on the opening round at Cypress Thursday.

Bobby Rosburg and 49er quarterback John Brodie are ahead in the pro-am division with a best-ball score of 188.

WYOMING PRESSED, CLEANED

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

Wyoming coach Bill Strannigan had been there before — that is, in the jaws of the UCLA meat grinder.

"I knew before the game that we should be in an airliner headed back to Wyoming," said the graying Cowboy coach after his team had taken a 115-77 beating Saturday night before 12,486 fans at Pauley Pavilion.

Strannigan's Wyoming team came into Pauley with visions of sugar plums after a 10-point win over Stanford Friday night that boosted the Cowboys' record to 12-2.

But Wyoming was blown out of contention in the first 3 minutes and 41 seconds by a Bruin full-court press that cut off all avenues of escape. The score at that point was 12-2.

"It was just like at Corvallis three years ago," said Strannigan, recalling the 109-60 licking the Cowboys were given by the Bruins in the NCAA Far West regional tournament.

"The press did it," added the Wyoming coach, whose team was guilty of 18 turnovers on the press and seven others as a result of strong UCLA defense.

UCLA, preparing for a return to Pacific-8 action Friday night at Cal, remained undefeated in 14 games this season and 18 in a period extending back to last year.

Strannigan had been awed by the Bruins three years ago at Corvallis, but he accepted this humiliation philosophically.

"We shuffled hell out of them, didn't we?" he grinned, referring to the Cowboys' style of attack. "The Bruins have great quickness. I'm not so sure they aren't better than the Alcindor teams."

It was not much of a contest after UCLA had taken that early 10-point lead. The margin grew to 60-37 by halftime and kept growing steadily until Bruin coach John Wooden began substituting liberally.

UCLA's 115 points marked the fifth time it had scored more than 100 points. Forward Sidney Wicks, never more devastating, shot and passed sensationally in addition to making several interceptions as the deep man on the full-court press.

All five UCLA starters again were in double figures, adding evidence that the team has excellent balance. Forward Curtis Rowe had 25, making 10 of 14 shots, Wicks had 24, guard John Vallely 20, guard Henry Bibby 15 and center Steve Patterson 11.

Wooden credited "alertness" for the resurgence to form of the top-ranked Bruins, who had to struggle for an 89-80 victory over UC Santa Barbara Friday.

Wooden, however, was totally happy.

"Patterson isn't in condition and he never will be," said the Bruin coach. "He doesn't eat right, he doesn't sleep right and he doesn't practice right. He's always the last man to practice."

It had been noted by observers that Patterson's best performances had been recorded in the first half of most games. Saturday night, for instance, he had eight points at halftime and made only three in the second half.

Wooden expressed pleasure with the Bruins' pressing defense.

"We were able to make some adjustments but Wyoming didn't play as well against us as Santa Barbara," he commented.

The UCLA coach hinted after Friday night's game that his team performs better against teams with good reputations.

The Bruins' romp Saturday night added to the evidence of his case.

UCLA shot at a blazing 56 per cent and outrebounded the Cowboys, 53-36.

Wyoming made .451 per cent of its shots, mostly from medium to long range. Three of the Cowboys showed major-college class, Stan Dodds getting 21 points, Carl Ashley 18 and Steve Popovich, from Warren High in Downey, 14.

"The shots we got were high-percentage tries against most teams," said Strannigan, shaking his head. "But not against this club. I'm surprised our percentage was that high."

Happy Leaves Lakers Smiling, Beats Sonics

SEATTLE (AP) — Happy Hairston's layup with one second left gave the Lakers a 122-121 overtime victory over the Seattle SuperSonics Saturday night in a National Basketball Assn. game.

Hairston, who had 20 points, took a lob pass from John Egan under the bucket, and jumped over Barry Clemens to score as time ran out.

Seattle had led by five points in the overtime, 116-11, with 2:53 to play. But the Sonics lost momentum when Bob Rule, who had 22 points, fouled out and the Sonics were ahead by only three points. Rule had scored the first seven points of the overtime before fouling out.

Keith Erickson sent the game into overtime when he hit a jumper with four seconds left in regulation play, tying the game 107-all. The Sonics appeared to have the game won, despite Jerry West's 39 points, when Lenny Wilkens sank a free throw for a two-point lead. After a time out, the Lakers hit Erickson for the tying basket.

Willie McCarter, the Lakers' No. 1 draft choice from Drake, will be out six weeks with torn ligaments in his right ankle.

The rookie guard was injured in the final minute of the Lakers' 128-100 victory over Seattle Friday night.

With only eight weeks remaining in the regular season, it is doubtful the 6-foot-3 McCarter will play any more in his first pro year.

He was taken to Centinela Hospital where a cast was placed on his leg.

The Lakers have been hit by a severe injury jinx this season. Wilt Chamberlain and Elgin Baylor have been the club's two biggest losses.

SANTA ANITA FACTIONS MEET

With the management-labor strike at Santa Anita entering its fifth week, employees have set up a negotiation meeting Tuesday.

Unions involved are inviting the owners of Santa Anita and representatives of the California Federation of Racing Assns. to attend a meeting with the service employees unions locals 280, 399, 193, 102 and 9 at the Roman Room of the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles.

The unions present will be ready and prepared to negotiate continuously around the clock until an agreement can be reached "so racing can resume in California."

Not only is the meeting at Santa Anita harpooned but also the Northern California meeting at Bay Meadows.

All involved public officials as well as Southern California news media have been invited to attend and observe the negotiations.

The horsemen, particularly, are getting restless as the parties appear about as far apart as ever. With more Eastern tracks getting set to open, trainers and owners are ready to abandon their "wait and see" attitude.

The two feuding groups met two weeks ago in the grandstand to review the situation and listened as Santa Anita general manager Fred Ryan told them something would break in the next week or two.

ROOM AT THE TOP

Jerry Gibson, 25, of 255 Rafael Wlk, scrambles up a 70-foot ladder, an exercise he may later repeat under "combat" condition. Gibson was one of 180 prospective firemen going through a series of firefighting training exercises Saturday. The men climbed the ladder, jumped into nets and lugged sandbags in a test of their aptitude.

Hospital Goes to the Patient

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Firemen are taking the hospital to the heart-attack patient in the Torrance area.

They're putting into practice a new concept in salvaging lives — one that may save lives that would be lost under traditional emergency care.

The pilot project is being conducted by Fire Station 59 of the Los Angeles County Fire Department. Specially trained firemen there are working out of Harbor General Hospital.

They operate in a five-mile radius of the hospital, wearing white coats in place of the traditional Fire Department blues. With them in their special mobile unit — a station wagon — go stethoscopes, an electrocardiograph (heart-action monitoring device), and respiratory-assistance equipment. A registered nurse is also a part of the team.

THEIR MISSION: Salvage heart-attack patients who currently would not make it to the hospital.

Richard Houts, Los Angeles County fire chief, assigned six firemen, all with rescue squad experience, to a special course at Harbor General. They were given 100 hours of training.

Assigned in pairs, firefighters accompanied doctors on daily patient visits. They took blood pressures, read electrocardiograms.

There were classroom sessions, too, with doctor lecturers. They learned a vocabulary of 200 medical terms, for one thing. Finally they took a test, with questions such as this: "If the R wave in lead III is taller than the R wave in lead II, is left axis deviation present?"

Dr. J. Michael Criley, chief of cardiology at Harbor General, says firemen in the original training group did as well or better than registered nurses in the cardiac-care examination that followed the course.

When the special team arrives at the scene of a suspected heart attack, the firemen and the registered nurse immediately place small metal leads onto the patient and radio heart information to a doctor in the hospital's heart unit. The doctor radios back information and instructions to the scene.

The doctor may tell the special squad to increase oxygen, administer certain drugs, start closed-chest heart massage or "defibrillate" the heart. (Fibrillation is life-threatening abnormal heart action, and defibrillation is administration of electric shock to restore normal heart beat.)

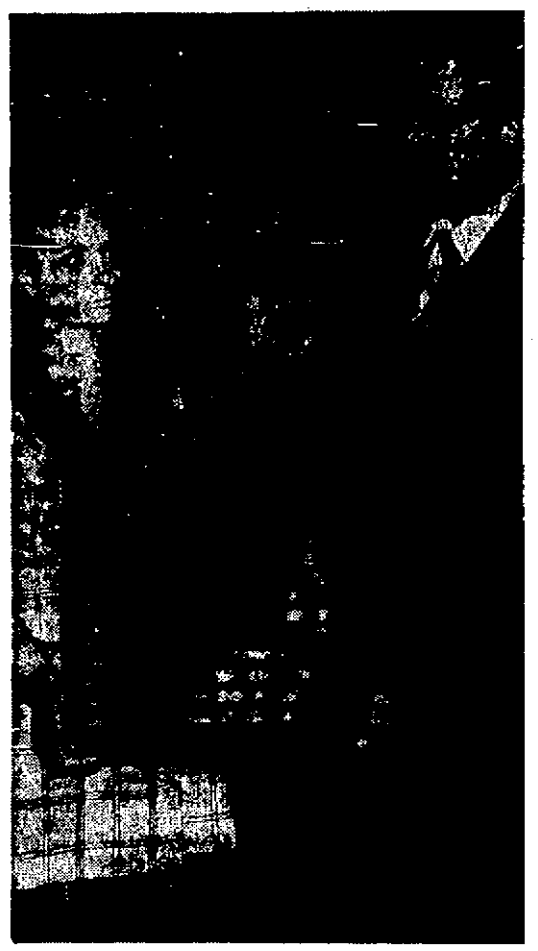

A CONVENTIONAL fire rescue squad goes on every call, and if it arrives prior to the heart care unit, it starts resuscitation or gives first aid.

If the patient is to be taken to the hospital, he is placed in an ambulance along with the specialized equipment. A fireman and nurse accompany the patient on the ambulance trip.

At the hospital, normal emergency admitting procedures are bypassed, and the patient is taken directly to the cardiac care unit.

Dr. Criley says that at least two heart-attack patients cared for by the special crew might not had lived had it not been for one-the-scene procedures.

So far, the special crew has been able to reach a patient's home on an average of 4.6 minutes. Sixty per cent of all deaths from heart attack occur within one hour of onset of the attack.

TRIBUTE TO FALLEN SOLDIERS

Torrance residents paused Saturday to pay tribute to their war dead, as with the assistance of lawmakers, units from Fort MacArthur and the Junior Woman's Club a memorial plaque was dedicated to those Torrance men killed in Vietnam. Accepting the plaque are Mrs. Aram Hovanisian, club Americanism co-chairman, and Carl Backlund, Torrance postmaster. —Staff Photo

3,000 See L.B. Rock Concert

A moderately-sized but highly-appreciative audience applauded, yelled and danced in the aisles as four rock groups played in concert at Long Beach Arena Saturday night.

Profits from the concert — small if realized — were scheduled to aid the Long Beach Free Clinic.

The concert featured Sweetwater, Taj Mahal, Eric Burdon and War, and Frantic.

The show marked the Long Beach debut for Burdon in his first group appearance here since leaving the Animals; War consists of seven instrumentalists and their backing of Burdon was one of the highlights of the show.

Box office count for the show was 3,062. No dollar count or profit statement was immediately available.

The crowd stayed late to hear the last selections by Sweetwater, the final act.

Long Beach police, mindful of the massive traffic jam which followed the Simon and Garfunkle concert here in December, were appreciative that the crowd wasn't larger.

3 Beacon Street Contracts Get OK

Three contracts for architectural design and engineering services in San Pedro's Beacon Street Redevelopment Project have been approved by the Los Angeles Community Redevelopment Agency

The contracts — totaling $88,500 — involve two private firms and the Los Angeles city engineering department.

PLANNERS HALT EXPANSION

Junkyard Plea Denied

The Planning Commission has refused to grant a special permit to cover expanded operations of a junkyard at 3710 E. Fountain St.

Commissioners cited city regulations adopted in 1949 which prohibit any new junkyards in the city, or the expansion of any existing yard.

The permit was sought by Jack Tankard, who established the junkyard on Fountain Street in 1937. At that time, it was a permitted use in the M-2 industrial zone.

In 1950, following a major fire at the yard, Tankard was issued a special permit to continue operations on the same scale.

Last Oct. 24, the Building Department revoked the special permit, contending Tankard had not complied with conditions established in the permit.

Tankard appealed to the City Council. He was granted "a reasonable time" to comply, and also told to seek a special permit from the Planning Commission to cover property being used by the yard in excess of his original permit.

Attorney Robert M. Devitt, representing Tankard, told the Planning Commission Thursday the refusal to approve the expanded use would be an "unreasonable abridgement" of his property right.

Commission Chairman W. Robert Pierce noted that Devitt had not made reference to the 1949 law prohibiting junkyards, and asked him to "speak directly to this point."

Devitt contended there had been "no true expansion" of the yard. He said the volume of business actually had declined, but that Tankard was using the added land to provide better storage of his materials.

Several property owners in the area filed written protests, and Thomas B. Coleman, 1361 Euclid Ave., appeared to object to the permit.

Coleman said old homes are being removed and the area upgraded.

"He's had 21 years to change that location," commented Commissioner Arnold B. Berg. "He knew it was a prohibitied use, but he has expanded it."

Commissioner Weckford Morgan noted that Tankard has "doubled the size of the yard" since his original permit.

Knott's pet project was Ghost Town, which they started on a modest scale in 1940. It now dominates the place — and is as well known as the Berry Farm itself.

When Disneyland came along, Knott remembered, "our complacency was gone."

"He built more in one year than we did in 15," Knott explained.

The Knotts were special guests of the late Walt Disney when the Anaheim Magic Kingdom opened in 1957. And they were as bug-eyed about it as any other tourist.

With so many people at Disneyland, they hurried back to Buena Park to look after their own place —and found it crowded.

"Didneyland didn't hurt us," Knott explained. "It has been a big help; we hope we've helped them, too."

"That place showed us that people want more entertainment. That's what we decided to do; we've been at it ever since."

locked to take away our freedom. But we can stop them if we can get the message out."

His comments came at the end of a daylong seminar on "Americanism" during which he rambled over a wide range of topics from schools to government to economics.

His audience, including both students and elderly persons, was generally enthusiastic.

HE TRACED the upheavals in American society to "the conspiracy" — which he often referred to as "them."

He denounced President Richard M. Nixon as one more in a long line of presidents since Franklin D. Roosevelt who were either tools or members of the conspiracy.

"Politics is a waste of time today," he said. "What good is a choice of Tweedle Dick and Tweedle Humphrey?"

Wolff, who owns a business consulting service, said that "we have to get out political leaders to talk about total victory" in foreign affairs.

"If there were just an outside signal, 99 per cent of the people in Communist countries would rise up and kill the 1 per cent that oppress them," he said. He said such a signal would be given if "the U.S. ever took an anti-Communist stand."

Striking Pari-Mutuel Clerk Has His Say

Santa Anita remains idle and some bookmakers are starting to work for a living because of the strike by pari-mutuel clerks. One of the latter — a perceptive Long Beach chap who prefers anonymity but is known for his veracity and sagacity — contends track management has received much undeserved public sympathy.

He claims that figures given out by Santa Anita on clerks' wages are misleading, that the sellers and cashiers fouled up on their last contract and are not about to pull a repeat performance — and that a mediator or arbitrator should be called onto the scene.

"The association (Federation of California Racing Assn., a group formed by all tracks in California) has turned down the services of a state conciliator and Joseph Alioto (San Francisco mayor), who is considered a fair and impartial arbiter in labor decisions," the clerk said.

"It has refused to consider arbitration, is adamant in that one-and-only offer and is bombarding clerks with 'dear employe' letters, calling wage demands unrealistic and even making odious comparisons on wages received between 1966 — when clerks were able to work only a total of 207 days — and 1969, when 270 days were available.

"The facts are that California paid clerks more in 1968 than did New York. But New York passed California clearly in 1969 in all categories except sellers (the difference was 30 cents) and will pass that in 1970. Fringe benefits are much better in New York, too.

"FOR MANY YEARS the pari-mutuel clerks enjoyed wages that were very fair in comparison to industry but, as wages rose, the clerks found themselves tied to a three-year contract giving them 50 cents per day per year, which finally resulted in their wages not rising in comparison to industry but being surpassed by pari-mutuel clerks in New York. For years California had paid much better.

"To our dismay, the association has hired Eastern labor negitiators of its own. They walked into what was believed to be a meeting and bluntly stated the association had decided to give the clerks $2 per day, to be used either as a pay increase or to apply on benefits. They then walked out and stated, as far as they were concerned, the meeting was over.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

"Many press releases have been put out, claiming wages of $51.85 per day for a cashier and $47.85 for a seller.

"BUT THE RELEASES FAILED TO SAY THIS MEANT WAGES PLUS BENEFITS WHICH INCLUDED MEDICAL CARE, HOSPITALIZATION, VACATION PAY, PENSION PAYMENTS, SOCIAL SECURITY, STATE DISABILITY, ETC."

The latter is the major reason for the race track clerks' strike.

"I KNOW OF NO OTHER GROUPS that publicly add all fringe benefits or legal payments to the employes wages and contend this is their 'wage.' Working people are interested in take-home pay.

"Normally, eight races constitute what was called for years a 'racing day' and it is on eight races that our expired contract was based and, for the record, the present rate is $37.10 per day for cashiers and $34.10 for sellers. (Ed. note: That fact is correct.)

"The tracks requested permission from the state to run a ninth race a few years and the state, ever eager to get its percentage, acquiesced but the clerks, instead of dividing their daily rate by eight races and arriving at a race rate, were paid a flat sum of $2.50 — almost one-half as much for overtime as they received on regular time, and a far cry from the normal time-and-a-half punitive pay enjoyed by nearly all workers in the United States."

"THE $2.50 WAS ARRIVED AT by going back many years historically when $2.50 was the acutal race rate. Selling or cashing daily doubles — a special feature that was put in racing about the time the $2.50 race rate was being enjoyed by the clerks — was kept the same and the $2.50 is paid for the ninth race and selling or cashing daily doubles."

The next point also is an important one to the mutuel clerks and doesn't involve Santa Anita but in the contract would concern other California tracks.

"The case of the clerks' plight is intensified when one thinks of the fairs which, in most cases, card 12 races. The regular rate prevails for the first eight. Then comes $2.50 for the ninth and, to add insult to injury, only $2 is paid for the 10th, 11th and 12th races — also the 13th when it is run as happened in 1968.

"The $2 was arrived at by being kind-hearted to the 'poor' fans who claimed they were 'struggling' to carry racing. And the clerks were foolish enough to agree to this fatuous thinking."

"AS YOU REALIZE, it will not be long before the entire State of California will have, besides the daily double, the 'predicta' or 'exacta' . . . and the association desires to pay substantial wages of $2.50 for these gimmicks, too. Confronted with these facts, a professional mediator or conciliator would probably hand down a decision in favor of the clerks.

"It seems strange that, with the state losing $300,000 per day for each race lost, the administration doesn't demand an arbitrator from the federal government to bring this intolerable situation to a halt."

It does seem strange, I must agree.

Kings Keep Road Mark Intact, Bow Again, 4-2

Combined News Services

PITTSBURGH — About the only thing one can say about the Kings on the road this season is that they are consistent — they always lose.

The sad pattern continued at Pittsburgh Saturday night as the Penguins, fighting to reach the Stanley Cup playoffs for the first time in their three-year history, used third period goals by rookies Nick Harbaruk and Bryan Hextall for a 4-2 triumph over the downtrodden tourists.

Pittsburgh's victory shunted them three points ahead of Oakland in the battle for the fourth and final playoff berth in the West Division of the NHL while the loss left the Kings mired in the cellar, a distant 12 points behind the Penguins.

Harbaruk's game-winner came early in the period. Kings' goalie Wayne Rutledge kicked out a hard drive by Wally Boyer only to have Harbaruk pounce on the rebound and slam in a 10-footer for his third goal of the season.

Hextall clinched it for the Penguins, converting passes from Dean Prentice and Joe Watson midway through the period and sending the Kings down to their 20th road loss this season. They have won only twice on foreign ice.

Rookie Butch Goring gave the Kings an early lead, poking home Ted Irvine's rebound three minutes into the game. But Prentice's 16th goal of the year and 312th of his career and another tally by Boyer sent the Penguins out in front in the second period.

Goring's second goal of the night and eighth of the season created a 2-2 tie heading into the final period.

The Kings tackle the New York Rangers in New York tonight.

Little St. Mary's Stings Houston

Combined News Services

Little St. Mary's of San Antonio, Texas, proved that on a given night a college division team can always stay on the court with a university division powerhouse.

The Rattlers were ferocious Saturday night, stinging Houston's 7th-ranked Cougars, 76-66. St. Mary's, rated 13th among college teams, took the lead at 44-43 and never trailed after that.

Ollie Taylor scored 21 points for the losers, who trailed by as many as 12 markers the second half.

The remaining top 10 teams seeing action found the going a bit easier. Kentucky, rated second, rocked LSU, 109-96, despite Pete Maravich's 55-point effort — moving him to No. 2 on the all-time scoring list with 2,905 points.

Fourth-ranked St. Bonaventure rode Bob Lanier's 32 points and 18 rebounds to a 62-49 nod over stalling Canisius while No. 5 New Mexico State fought off stubborn arch-rival Texas-El Paso, 90-77.

North Carolina State and Davidson were both severely tested. State needed many of Van Williford's 25 points to erase an 11-point first-half deficit and gain a tense, 77-76 win at Duke. Randy Denton scored 32 for the losers.

Doug Cook and Jerry Kroll tallied all 11 overtime points for Davison in its rallying, 71-64 decision over Princeton. Ohio U. notched its 12th win, 77-68, at Kent State while Penn nipped St. Joseph's, 63-56, in overtime.

Nevada - Las Vegas scored a decisive, 107-91 WCAC win over Nevada-Reno with former Orange Coast College star Bruce Chapman scoring 27. Oregon's zone dumped Oregon State, 79-64.

Layton's 41 Spark Trojans

Combined News Services

TEMPE, Ariz. — Dennis Layton returned to Arizona Saturday night and poured in 41 points as the Southern California Trojans scored a come-from-behind 108-95 victory over Arizona State.

Layton, who played his junior college ball at nearby Phoenix College, connected on 18 of 25 shots from the floor and converted all five of his free throw attempts as the Trojans claimed their sixth successive victory and ran their season record to 12-3.

"We're as good right now as we've been all year," said Trojan coach Bob Boyd. "Layton was anxious to do a good job for obvious reasons. He's been in a slump but he did a heck of a job tonight."

BING CONTINUES POINT SPREE

Davis 76er FT Hero

Combined News Services

Rookie Guard Mike Davis sank a game-winning free throw with 19 seconds to play as Baltimore edged Philadelphia, 112-111, Saturday night.

The 76ers overcame an 18-point Baltimore lead in the first half, scored 11 consecutive points to go ahead 111-107 with 1:02 remaining.

But Earl Monroe sank a field goal for the Bullets and then fed Wes Unseld for the tying basket with 33 seconds remaining.

After Gus Johnson rebounded an Archie Clark shot, Davis was fouled and made good on one of his two attempts.

Dave Bing and Jimmy Walker combined for 51 points and five other Detroit players scored in double figures as the Pistons handed Chicago a 128-122 loss.

Bing, who was plagued during the first half of the season by knee and foot injuries which required surgery, drilled in 30 points, marking the ninth successive game in which he has scored 20 or more points.

Flynn Robinson scored 33 points and Lew Alcindor added 28 as Milwaukee crushed Cincinnati, 125-109.

Walt Frazier poured in 32 points and combined with hot-shooting Bill Bradley to open a third period lead that helped New York defeat San Diego Rockets 127-114.

BROKERAGE HOUSE DILEMMA

Small Wall Street Investor Vanishing

By TERRY ROBARDS
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — For nearly a decade the small investor has been vanishing from Wall Street and the forces of change that are causing tumult in the securities industry now threaten him with virtual extinction.

Wall Street is in a dilemma. The feeling is nearly unanimous that the small investor is necessary, even vital. But there is doubt about how best to keep him in the stock market. One thing appears certain: It will cost him more to do business.

A New York Times survey of some of the United States largest brokerage houses doing public business shows that they generally do not want small transactions. Some of them will accept them, grudgingly, but most say they are not worth the trouble.

MOST FIRMS appear to feel that the bulk of their paperwork difficulties stem from handling small trades. They also know that commissions of $20, $25 or even $30 tickets resulting from relatively small trades — often are profitless.

Alfred M. Seaber, a partner in Goodbody & Co., estimates that the cost of an individual transaction, regardless of size, is $20 to $25. With the broker's commission added in, it takes a ticket of close to $40 for the firm to make a profit.

This is why Goodbody is one of a number of firms that have started imposing a minimum commission to customers — in this case $15 — regardless of transaction size. This means that an investor who buys two shares of American Telephone and Telegraph at about $49 a share must pay over 15 per cent in commissions at Goodbody.

THIS WEEK Eastman Dillon, Union Securities & Co. joined the trend sweeping the industry and changed its internal compensation structure. One ingredient was a $20 minimum commission on all trades, meaning that the investor who buys two shares of AT&T through the firm pays over 20 per cent.

This also means that any investor who makes a transaction involving less than $1,300 worth of stock will be paying more in commissions than the minimums set by the New York Stock Exchange. In other words, the $20 minimum starts becoming a larger percentage of the trade at about $1,300.

Only Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., among the largest houses has stood its ground in the face of rising costs and continued to maintain that it will accept any trade, no matter how small it may be.

This should not imply that any Merrill Lynch broker will happily accept any trade that comes in. Practically speaking, the brokers at almost any firm eschew the small tickets in favor of concentrating on developing large accounts.

MUCH MORE typical is the attitude at Herzfeld & Stern, where a partner said this week, "If someone comes in with a small ticket, we grumble, mumble and make it known we're not too happy about it, but we take it." He said the firm's internal commission structure would probably be changed in coming months.

At A. G. Becker & Co., a large Chicago-based firm, John F. Connor, a vice president, said, "We have never leased a street-floor location, because this type of location attracts people we couldn't serve properly."

Connor said inquiries from investors with less than $3,600 to $5,000 to invest generally have been referred to firms that are "better geared to handle this type of retail business." He added: "We are definitely a retail house, but our thrust is toward the bigger individual accounts."

In San Francisco, Herman T. Birr 3d, president of Birr, Wilson & Co., said: "We are right in the middle of a study of our whole commission structure. We are considering a minimum commission of $10, which would make very small trades, in effect, unprofitable for the investor."

Similar studies are under way at Hirsch & Co.; Harris, Upham & Co.; Glore, Forgan, William R. Staats, Inc.; Butcher & Sherrerd; Mitchum, Jones & Templeton, and Hayden, Stone, Inc. All of these concerns have numerous examples to follow.

REVISED commission schedules already have been announced by most of the U.S. largest brokerage houses, including Bache & Co., Inc.; Francis I. DuPont & Co.; Goodbody; E. F. Hutton & Co., Inc.; Shearson Hammill & Co., Inc.; Paine, Webber Jackson & Curtis, and Eastman Dillon.

Most of them have one thing in common: they encourage their registered representatives to do business with customers who deal in large amounts. And they discourage dealing with the little guy.

For example, brokers at Walston & Co., Inc., do not receive any portion of the commission if the total commission, or ticket is under $12. This obviously militates against handling small trades. The minimum at Fahnestock & Co. is $10 and at Mitchum Jones & Templeton it is $15.

GRUEN REPORT

Mayer explained that, ultimately, the Planning Commission will have to conduct public hearings with the intent of amending the city's master plan to include all or part of the Gruen recommendations. The final decision would be by the City Council.

Prior to the Planning Commission's official hearings, however, a number of public meetings are planned in which details of the proposals will be presented and questions from the audience will be answered, Mayer said.

Tuesday's meeting is the first aimed at the public at large, Mayer explained. The prior presentation, on Dec. 16, was primarily for the City Council, Planning Commission and some key city officials and civic leaders.

Museum Tops Chamber Goals

Establishment of a city museum tops the list of 1970 objectives of the Seal Beach Chamber of Commerce, its president, Keith E. Houdyshell, said Saturday.

He has appointed James W. Dunn Jr. to direct efforts toward purchase of the Stanton Home, First Street and Ocean Avenue, for the museum.

Dunn also will direct the obtaining of a large bronze statue of a seal for Eisenhower Park and the securing of a renovated trolley car from the Pacific Electric Co.

Radio Taken

Burglars who slipped the door lock on the auto of Jim North of Los Angeles, while it was parked in the 4500 block of Atlantic Avenue, fled with a citizen band radio valued at $159, Long Beach police said Saturday.

L.B. Man Gets County Promotion

From Our L.A. Bureau

A Long Beach resident who works in the County Counsel's office, Richard L. Landes, is about to move up from beginner's status to grade II.

County Counsel John Maharg said Landes will continue serving in the department's trial division. He lives at 232-A Belmont Ave.

BREWMASTER INTERNATIONAL

You read about it in NEWSWEEK'S "NEW PRODUCTS."

DRAW ONE: Electronics has taken over the drawing of draft beer in taverns. BREWMASTER INTERNATIONAL of Albuquerque, New Mexico, is marketing a beer tap that looks exactly like the conventional tap, except that the pull handle is inoperative. The bartender instead touches a button and a "perfect" glass of beer pours forth. The Brewmaster unit features easy, quick connection, trouble free operation, accurate booking and unusually high profits for distributors. For the tavern owner, this does away with waste, unauthorized give-away, over-pulls and spillage.

Investment required $5,250 and up, completely secure by equipment. For complete details regarding a distributorship available in your area, write, wire or phone:

1st Long Beach Showing.

To introduce our new Victor Series 800 Billing Computer, we're demonstrating it at a premiere showing, January 27-29.

In case you haven't heard, the new Series 800 costs the same as a conventional accounting machine but doesn't have the limitations that usually go along with the price.

It may be the first computer you can really afford. The Series 800 does more things automatically and with less operator error than any other billing system. So check the date, time and place and make it a point to stop by for an hour.

And let the Victor 800 computer give you a run for your money.

VICTOR
The Computer you can afford.

ABA STARS AVERT STRIKE

11,932 See West's Victory

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — The West, behind Larry Jones' 30 points and a devastating fast breaking attack, overpowered the East Saturday, 128-98, in the third American Basketball Assn. All-Star game, before 11,932 fans, an All-Star game record.

The West, winning this extravaganza for the second year in a row, also grabbed the No. 1 individual prize when rookie Spencer Haywood of Denver won the "most valuable player" award.

The nationally televised game itself was in doubt until only an hour before the scheduled 11 a.m. PST tipoff when the ABA's players association balked, seeking recognition.

Three hours before the tipoff, ABA commissioner Jack Dolph said he had notified CBS "there may not be a game."

Only after Dolph agreed to determine whether the association actually has signed a majority of the league players, did the game get the green light. The association claimed to have signed 80 to 85 per cent of the players.

Jones, a slick 6-3 guard from Denver, who played his college ball at Toledo, pumped in 20 points in the first half and saw only limited action in the second.

The East never could catch up after falling behind in the first couple of minutes, 9-1. The West led 34-18 at the first stop and 61-41 at the half.

The East closed the gap to five points three times in the second half, but then the West spurted away and put the game on ice.

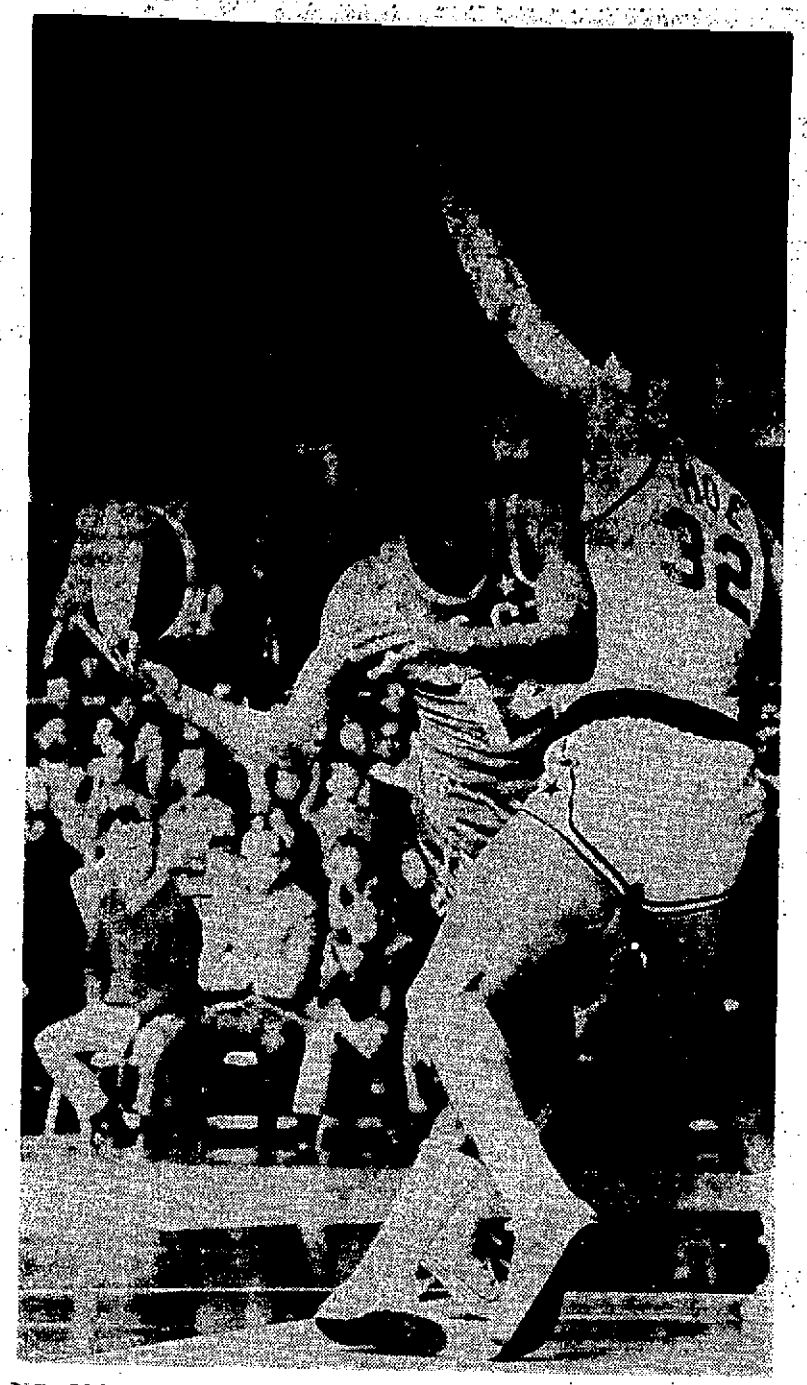

Seven players scored in double figures for the West, Haywood getting 23 and Rick Barry of Washington, recently recovered from a knee injury, 16, and Steve Jones of New Orleans 14.

Larry Jones' 30 points established an all-star record, eclipsing the 22 by Daniels, then of Minnesota, in the first game here two years ago. Haywood and Larry Jones also eclipsed Daniels' mark of nine field goals by cashing in 10 apiece.

Jones set another game record with 10 free throws, bettering the eight by Darel Carrier of Kentucky last year.

Flood Admits 2nd Thoughts

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Curt Flood, admitting he is having second thoughts about his civil suit against baseball's reserve clause, said Saturday his attorney, Arthur Goldberg, has told him he probably won't play ball next season.

Flood said Goldberg, a former U.S. Supreme Court justice, had told him the suit might take two years.

"Yeah, I've had second thoughts about my suit," Flood said. "But I think I'm on the right track."

He said he had received a flood of letters, of which 90 per cent are favorable. But he confessed the other 10 per cent is causing him to lose sleep.

"I'll toss and turn and try to evaluate what I've done," he said. "In my mind I'm doing the right thing."

One letter said to the former Cardinal centerfielder, "once you were compared with Willie Mays. Now you will be compared with Benedict Arnold."

Another called him "a jerk."

But he thinks the other letters more than balance out that kind of criticism. One praised him for his "vision, courage and determination. Keep punching."

After the Cards traded Flood to Philadelphia Oct. 7 he decided to go to court to challenge the clause that binds a player to a club until he is traded, sold or released. He says it is treating people like pieces of property.

"Some of the owners contend it will end baseball," Flood said, "but the 600 players say we'll have a chance to make more money."

"I'm not trying to create chaos or end baseball," the 32-year-old Flood added. "I just want to stand up like a human being. I want something we can live with."

Big Payoff for Soutar in Showboat

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Dave Soutar of Gilroy won the biggest purse of his career Saturday when he took the $11,111.11 first place prize in the $77,777.77 Showboat Invitational bowling tournament.

Soutar, 28, whose first title was the national championship nine years ago, threw seven successive strikes in the nationally-televised championship game to crush Don Glover, a Bakersfield lefthander, by a 257-214 score.

Soutar finished in fifth place in the 40-game qualifier that preceded Saturday's final matches. He had to defeat three opponents before facing Glover, whose average of 220 plus in the elimination phase earned him the right to be seeded into the final games.

PORTLAND CAN'T ACCEPT NBA TERMS

PORTLAND (AP) — A Portland group trying for a National Basketball Assn. franchise said Saturday it would not accept new terms proposed by an NBA expansion committee earlier in the week.

Harry Glickman, Portland sports promoter and spokesman for the group, said that the increased price of the franchise and other changes in the ground rules made it impossible for the group to submit a bid.

"Our people were upset as much by the apparent lack of integrity on part of a minority of owners in the NBA as they were by the changes in the terms," Glickman said.

It had been reported that backers of the Portland bid were planning a regional team called Oregon.

Rockets Tackle Phillies at Blair

The Long Beach Rockets resume action today hosting the L.A. Phillies in an exhibition baseball game at 1:30 p.m. at Blair Field.

Due to the beginning of practice for collegiate players, the Pasadena Yankees, who won the championship of the league's traveling division, have been forced to withdraw making the Rockets the champions of the American Winter Semipro baseball league.

An attempt is now being made to arrange a playoff with the National League but this may not be possible as that league's champion has not been determined.

Worst Seattle Loss--Money

Combined News Services

The city of Seattle has its back up and is clawing at the fading Seattle Pilots. Whether the American League franchise is a business, a sport, or a state of mind, it's one thing for sure — money.

"I think a major league ball club has an initial impact of about $10 million a year from the indications I've seen, said James G. McCurdy, president of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. "That's just in sales, payroll, concessions and the like.

"And that impact is multiplied three or four times to businesses like hotels and restaurants because of the tourists and visitors attracted because of baseball. I'm told 35 to 40 per cent of the people who attended Pilots' games last year were from out of town."

"I cannot overemphasize the fact that Seattle has too much invested in the Pilots to permit them to leave now," Mayor Wes Uhlman said. "After a $3 million taxpayer expense, Seattle deserves more than a one-year turn at bat."

Dallas-Fort Worth's bidding for the Seattle franchise moved along on millionaire Lamar Hunt's soft-sell approach, but civic leaders remained poised to join the battle if Hunt beckons.

Hunt and Tommy Mercer, his Fort Worth partner in operation of a minor league baseball franchise midway between the two cities, have refrained from asking for any help from the civic "wheels" in either city in all of their previous dealings with the major leagues.

Hunt and Mercer have the machinery ready to start moving immediately to enlarge Turnpike Stadium's 10,600-seat capacity to between 22,0000 and 25,000 by the opening of the 1970 season — if the pendulum finally swings this way after three previous failures.

The temporary enlargement presents no particular structural problem since the stadium originally was designed for quick expansion. It could be permanently enlarged to near 50,000 by the 1971 season with equal ease.

Milwaukee hasn't given up hope. Radio station WOKY sent telegrams to all American League club owners and president Joe Cronin Saturday asking the Pilots be moved to Milwaukee.

"The world's greatest baseball fans urge you to put the Pilots in Milwaukee," the telegram said. "Remember the miracle of Milwaukee. It can happen again."

Davis New Coach

RIVERSIDE (AP) — Mike Davis, former University of Utah running back, was selected Saturday as assistant to football coach Pete Kettela at the University of California at Riverside.

SAYS STOMACH CRAMPS STOPPED FIGHT

'Not to Blame'--Little

An apologetic Freddie Little Saturday blamed "excruciating" stomach cramps for his eight-round disqualification for "not fighting" in a non-title bout Friday night in Rome against Eddie Pace of Los Angeles.

The world junior middleweight champion from Las Vegas was waiting for his manager to try to retrieve a $6,000 purse that was confiscated by the boxing commissioner immediately after Pace was declared the winner.

"It was a lousy fight. But nonetheless I think the official was a little hasty in stopping it at that time."

SPORTS BEAT

EIGHTEEN - year - old Jesse Stuart of Glasgow, Ky., Saturday set a new national high school indoor shotput record with a toss of 71 feet, 11 inches at the USTFF Midwest indoor championships.

Stuart, a 6-foot-2, 250-pound senior, broke the old record of 67-2½ set in 1968 by Doug Lyon of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

A NATIONAL high school swimming record fell Saturday when John Kinsella, 17, swam the 400-yard freestyle in 3:36.5.

Kinsella, of Hinsdale, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, broke the old mark of 3:38.0 held by Mark Spitz two years ago.

SCHOLASTIC Magazine announced its 19th all-America high school football team Saturday with six California players on the 100-man squad.

Quarterback Mike Sullivan and lineman Rich Prigge of Concord, running back Jim McAlister of Pasadena's Blair High, and ends Art Parker of Sacramento, Greg Hudson of Los Angeles and Lynn Swann of San Mateo are on the squad.

CHICAGO Bears' running back Gale Sayers has been selected to receive the 1969 George Halas Award by the Professional Football Writers of America.

THE WEST German team of Horst Floth and Pepi Bader took a commanding lead at the halfway point Saturday of the world two-man bobsled championships at St. Moritz with the United States in fourth place.

JOHN BARNHILL will retire July 1 as the athletic director at the University of Arkansas after serving the school 24 years in that capacity.

FORMER Seton Hall star Bob Davies and Navy coach Ben Carnevale have been elected to the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame.

Training Center for L.B. Rowing Assn.

The U.S. Olympic Rowing Committee announced plans to establish rowing training programs at nine rowing clubs, including the Long Beach Rowing Assn., across the nation to help oarsmen seeking places on the 1970 World championship team.

The announcement came from Victor H. Michalson, chairman of the Olympic Rowing Committee.

THE PRICE OF BEING BRUIN STAR

Vallely Sits, Suffers and Sweats, Too

"Whatever anybody writes or thinks about you is all fine, but you have to prove it every day. You have to say to yourself, 'You know, you're not that much.'" — John Vallely.

A person can learn a lot about himself by watching somebody take his place.

"This is what happened against Oregon State," says John Vallely, the No. 1 scorer on the No. 1 college basketball team in the country. "I fouled out of the game and had to sit on the bench and watch the rest of the guys play. That really takes a lot out of you."

It was two weeks ago that UCLA trailed Oregon State by four points with 2½ minutes to play, and all Vallely could do about it was sit, suffer and sweat as the Bruins pulled it out, 72-71, on a shot by sub John Ecker.

Vallely has finished many other games on the bench, but under different circumstances.

"I sit out half the game, usually," he says. "So does every other starter when we have a rout 'cause (coach John) Wooden is going to play the rest of the kids, and that's only fair."

VALLELY ADDS that "they all want a chance to play, so you can't really be upset," but this modest 17.5-point scoring average doesn't truly measure his ability when stacked against the averages of the one-man run-and-gun shows.

"It's a funny thing about most of these big scorers," John says, "like (LSU's Pete) Maravich and (Notre Dame's Austin) Carr. They all stay in there until the last second and they get maybe 10 or 15 points during the garbage time.

"I mean, anybody could do that. You take any kid off our team, put him on one of those teams and he'd score 40 points a game. Carr was getting something like 34 a game and we both scored 24 that night. But he scored 15 against me and I scored my 24 while he was in there."

Likewise, Maravich totaled 38 points to Vallely's 14, but it was a Bruin runaway all the way and ol' droopy socks was sheer futility until the UCLA regulars departed at halftime.

That's the price Vallely pays for being a star among stars, but there is a deep personal conviction to the Bruins' current season coming off three consecutive national championships with Lew Alcindor.

"My goal is to win another one," John says, "Without Lew. I never dreamed of being on a national championship team but I think we have a better team this year in that all five players are working together. We relied so much on Lew that it took a lot from the game."

It also took a lot of credit away from Alcindor's teammates.

"It has to take something away," Vallely says. "You know that he couldn't have done it by himself. He had to have us out there. But I had no idea we would be playing as strong as we are right now. Everybody stuck together instead of thinking, 'Well, we can't do it without Lew.' This year we're proving that we had great talent on last year's team, besides Lew."

RICH ROBERTS

VALLELY, A 6-FOOT-3 senior guard, came to UCLA as a junior from Orange Coast College and Corona del Mar High, collecting enough all-thises and all-thats to paper Pauley Pavilion. He was almost beginning to believe he was invincible when he tried out for the United States Olympic team, prior to enrolling at UCLA.

John was working with the national junior college team at Hutchinson, Kan., under Jerry Tarkanian, now the Cal State Long Beach coach, when he became ill.

"It was a combination of things," he says. "I had the flu and diarrhea and the doctor said either the red or white blood cells were eating the other ones. I can't remember which, but my body was just deteriorating. I lost 12 pounds in about a week-and-a-half.

"Then they stopped me eating completely. I'd just take shots in my arms and I was trying to play basketball with these guys that were really great athletes. I hung in there for awhile but then the coach said, 'You'd better go home before you die.'"

The experience taught Vallely one thing: He wouldn't want to live in the Midwest.

"Kansas just turned me off. I couldn't stand that place. All I did was dream about home. I've always lived by the water and I couldn't see any pretty trees."

Vallely spent last weekend in Chicago for two games, adding, "I didn't like Chicago at all. Everything's black and dirty and there's trash everywhere. Plus, I don't like the cold that much, except to go skiing."

New York, where the Bruins won the Holiday Festival last season, appealed to Vallely for its "great night life" and he also liked Louisville, Ky., where UCLA won the national title and he earned all-NCAA tournament distinction.

"That was one of my better trips," he smiles.

OTHERWISE, HE WOULD be content to sun and surf and play volleyball on the beach, where you'll always find him in the off-season.

"Last summer I started playing a lot better so I knew how to play with guys that are good. We play all the beaches up and down the coast from San Diego to Santa Barbara. Tournaments are always on Saturday and Sunday. You pay your $2 and maybe it's a 64-team bracket."

The teams are two men each (doubles) and Vallely claims, "There's just as much pressure as there is in a basketball game."

It doesn't matter that there are no national rankings, little publicity and no 12,000 people in the stands.

"When I play basketball," John says, "there might as well be 10 people as 12,000."

Y Kicks Off Drive for 5,000 Recruits

The YMCA of Greater Long Beach today kicks off its 1970 campaign to recruit 5,000 new members and raise $102,000 in contributions.

The kick-off was scheduled to coincide with YMCA Sunday, which is being observed in most Long Beach churches along with the rest of the country, and the opening of National YMCA Week.

More than 750 volunteer Y workers will canvass the city for memberships and contributions from now until the drive closes March 1, said Bill George, citywide chairman.

Weekly progress reports for all six of the YMCA branches in Greater Long Beach will be made during the campaign.

"We expect this year's drive to top everything we have done in the past," George said last week.

"All YMCA activities in the Long Beach area have been expanding in the past few years, and we expect to expand our membership to the same degree."

Last year's drive netted more than 3,000 new members and brought in approximately $86,000 in contributions.

Assisting George will be Long Beacy attorney Clyde Bronn, a former president of the YMCA of Greater Long Beach, and a long-time active worker in YMCA affairs.

BILL GEORGE
Y Membership Chairman

Branch chairmen for the drive are: Bronn, Metropolitan; Wendy Melton, Camp; James Edson, Downtown; John Overmeyer, Lakewood; 'Speed' Handeland, Los Altos; Henry Moffett, Los Cerritos, and James Warren, North Community.

Goals are: Metropolitan, 100 members and $5,000; Camp, 100 members and $4,000; Lakewood, 300 members and $19,000; Downtown, 700 members and $21,000; Los Altos, 1,500 members and $34,000; Los Cerritos, 1,300 members and $27,000, and North Community, 300 members and $16,000.

Safe Looter Pleads Guilty

A plea of guilty to grand theft put one man in jail for a year —and changed the trial date for two other men charged with him in looting a restaurant safe of $4,700.

John G. Filozzola, 46, of Las Vegas, who police said had "Mafia connections," withdrew his plea of not guilty and was ordered to jail for a year as condition to five years of probation.

A conviction could have meant a prison term.

Anthony U. Rossi, 33, of Santa Ana, and Henry W. Willming, 30, of Costa Mesa, won continuance of their trial until Feb. 9.

The three men had been charged with "setting up" an alleged burglary at Berkshire's Restaurant at Newport Beach, where Willming was a bartender.

Rossi, meanwhile, was arrested by Tustin police on a charge of conspiring to rob a bank messenger. Jailed with him was Dean B. Lohman, 20, of Tustin, who police said teamed with Rossi in an alleged scheme to hijack cash consigned to a check-cashing stand in Tustin.

At the time of his arrest on the conspiracy count, Rossi was at liberty under $62,500 bail. On his new arrest, bail of $100,000 was set by Municipal Court Presiding Judge Paul G. Mast, who set Jan. 26 as hearing date. Lohman is held under $25,000 bail.

Apartment Block Change Upheld

The City Council was within its legal rights in modifying the special permit issued by the Planning Commission for an apartment complex in Alamitos Heights, City Attorney Leonard Putnam said last week.

Ralph W. Schuhart, 535 Manila Ave., had questioned whether a council-approved change, moving a proposed entrance-exit to the complex from Colorado Street to Bellflower Boulevard, was legal.

Lincoln Properties, Inc., proposed to erect 525 apartment units in the area north of Colorado Street between Pacific Coast Highway and the southerly extension of Bellflower Boulevard.

When approved originally by the Planning Commission, the project was to have an exit-entrance on Colorado Street.

The commission action was appealed to the City Council by Everett H. York, one of the opponents of the apartment complex. At the council hearing, it was pointed out the Pacific Coast Freeway might make a Colorado Street exit impossible, and the plan was modified to permit an exit onto the extended Bellflower Boulevard.

Variety of Courses Offered at LBCC

A variety of courses and programs are being offered this Spring for regular college students and adults of the community at the Liberal Arts Campus and Business and Technology Campus of Long Beach City College. Most courses will be offered both day and evening. Among course offerings are several new programs of interest.

Developed jointly by an advisory consisting of industry and college personnel, the LBCC Quality Control program includes 16 transferable college-credit courses and has individual curriculums for certificate and associate degrees.

A COURSE IN custodial training is being offered this spring at BTC. The class, covers techniques of building care and maintenance, proper use of supplies and equipment, and cleaning materials and methods.

The Foreign Language Department is offering two new foreign language and culture courses for study and travel: "Languages and Cultures of Spanish-Speaking Countries" and "Languages and Cultures of Western Europe".

A complete electronics program is now being offered at the Business and Technology Campus, including sections in electronics, electro-mechanical technology and industrial electricity. Courses included in these groups are Electrical Codes and Ordinances, Pulse-Digital Circuits and UHF, Microwave Theory and Measurements and Electronic and Microelectronics Fabrication Practices.

Engineer - in - Training courses will be offered by the Mathematics and Engineering Department at the Liberal Arts Campus. The course, designed to prepare qualified engineers to take the California State Board of Registration Exam for civil and professional engineers, will employ the sources of qualified engineers, instructors and guest lecturers.

A NEW OFFERING AT the evening Business and Technology Campus is Essentials of Auto Care and Maintenance for adults who wish a general background on all aspects of automobile operation. The practical rather than technical aspects of auto care and maintenance are emphasized in this course open to both men and women.

The Child Development Center at BTC will offer morning and afternoon sessions this spring. Through group participation and class discussion, parents study current concepts in early childhood and parent education. Parents are eligible for participation when their child is between the age of 30 months and the time of Kindergarten enrollment.

Training and refresher courses for office occupations are being offered at the Business and Technology Campus. The training program covers accounting, office machines, secretarial training, shorthand and typing, stenotypy, PBX training, office occupation testing and interviewing, bookkeeping and shorthand. The refresher courses are general and open-ended so that students may enroll at anytime and stay only until they feel they are ready for employment.

SPRING CLASSES at LAC (4901 East Carson Street) and BTC (1305 East Pacific Coast Highway) will begin on February 5. New part-time day students at LAC will be registered by appointment the morning of February 4 and without appointment that afternoon. Part-time day students at BTC will be registered by appointment only.

Evening registration for new students at LAC will be by appointment only from 6:00 - 8:30 p.m. on February 4, 5 & 9 and at BTC on February 2, 3, 4, 5 & 9.

Los Altos Association Elects Hosking Leader

Everett W. (Ev) Hosking has been elected president of the Los Altos Association for the current year, it has been announced by the organization's board of directors.

He succeeds Wayne Roy, who will remain on the board. George E. Riggins, Jr. will serve as vice president, the position held last year by Hosking.

With a background of 44 years in the newspaper business, Hosking is an integral part of Long Beach history.

E. W. HOSKING
Heads Association

HE IS THE SON of the late W. H. Hosking who was vice president of the old Press-Telegram Publishing Company, and he started his newspaper career while in high school.

Hosking has worked as a reporter, aviation editor, assistant city editor and city editor of the Press-Telegram. Several years ago he has promoted to the position of editor of the Sunday Department for the Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram, a position he now holds.

He has been a close observer of community affairs for many years and has served nine years as a director of the Los Altos Association, which is comprised of more than 5,200 property owners in the eastern and northern sections of Long Beach. It is the largest of nearly 200 associations of its type in Southern California.

Hosking is a veteran of 24 years active and reserve service with the United States Air Force with duties primarily centered in the area of staff information officer.

HE HAS BEEN interested in aviation since 1928 when he began to take flying lessons from Earl S. Daugherty. After Daugherty's death he continued his flying with Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon of around-the-world fame and later under the tutelage of Clyde Schlieper.

In the 1930's Hosking was cochairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce aviation committee which was largely responsible for the development of Long Beach Airport.

His published works include coauthorship of the book "History of Aviation."

Hosking and his wife Harriet live in the Park Estates area of Long Beach and have one son, Lt. William J. Hosking, a career Naval officer.

Lighting Additions Public Hearing Set

The proposed improvement of Long Beach Street Lighting District No. 9 was set for public hearing on March 10 by action of the City Council this week.

The district covers the area bounded by the Union Pacific right-of-way on the south, Market Street on the north, the Los Angeles River on the west, and Long Beach Boulevard on the east.

Plans call for installation of 226 street lights at an estimated cost of $138,400, of which the city would pay half, and the balance would be assessed against property benefited by the improvement.

Twenty-eight 400-watt mercury vapor lamps would be installed along main thoroughfares, and 198 standards with 175-watt mercury vapor lamps would be installed along residential streets, according to City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson.

Minority Housing Rulings

Four lawsuits brought by minority homeseekers against apartment owners and managers within the last three months in the Long Beach area have ended in judgments against the defendants, a Fair Housing Foundation official has announced.

In all four cases, apartment owners or managers admitted they had discriminated against the homeseekers "on account of color or race," said Curt Moody, Long Beach Foundation Executive Director.

The lawsuit defendants also admitted they had "denied the right to full and equal accommodations, advantages, services and privileges" in their respective apartments, Moody added.

ALL CASES, Moody stated, involved the Fair Housing Foundation.

"Our function is that of impartial investigator of complaints of racial discrimination in housing," said Moody. "When the investigation is completed, our findings are turned over to the minority homeseeker.

"He is then informed of his rights under the law, and determines his own course of action," he added.

Moody noted that the Foundation has also undertaken investigations for landlords who feel "they have been unjustly accused of discriminatory practices."

Fire Unit Not Linked to Magazine

Long Beach firemen members of Local 372, International Association of Fire Fighters today warned local merchants and residents that they do not have any affiliation with the Fraternal Order of Fire Fighters Inc., publishers of a magazine called National Fire Chief.

The FOFF Inc. is soliciting advertisements for its magazine and solicitors are usually dressed in khaki work clothes and fire service uniform caps, the IAFF stated.

The FOFF is not associated with organized labor or the IAFF.

Sister Helps Trap Suspect

STOCKTON (UPI) — A San Jose man suspected of rape and murder was arrested near here after his sister led him into a police trap.

Sheriff's detectives lying in wait at a truck stop Friday night arrested Floyd Wayne Ward, 25, and charged him with the rape-murder of Mrs. Maria Rose Long, 53, in San Jose.

Ward, a Vietnam veteran recently employed as a shoe salesman in San Mateo, was apprehended after his sister, Mrs. Crystal Conner of San Jose, arranged to meet him at the truck stop.

Ernie Nevers: Unforgettable

PEBBLE BEACH — Ernie Nevers is a product of the golden era of sports — the 1920's — which gave us so many of our legendary athletic heroes.

In fact, no other man had the unique distinction of competing against Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Harry Heilmann, Eddie Collins and other hall of famers in Baseball as well as the likes of Jim Thorpe, Red Grange, Bronko Nagurski and other immortals of pro football.

A concensus all-America at Stanford in the mid-1920s. Nevers has been listed on most all-time teams and was among the first to be admitted to the College Hall of Fame as well as its pro counterpart, the NFL shrine in Canton, Ohio.

Pop Warner, his coach at Stanford, often said that Ernie was the greatest all-around athlete he ever coached, including Jim Thorpe.

Today, at the age of 66, Ernie still looks like he could give a good account of himself on the playing field.

Now a partner in a thriving food service in the Bay Area, he is making his annual appearance in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am tournament here. Ernie is a nine-handicapper.

TWO NEGATIVE aspects of his career often creep into his recollection of the old days. Against USC, for instance, he punted five times and all five kicks were blocked by the Trojans.

And two of Ruth's home runs in 1927, the year the Babe walloped 60, were off Nevers at old Sportsman's Park in St. Louis. The first was the Bambino's eighth of the season on May 11, and the other was the 42st on August 27.

Nevers, of course, pitched several seasons for the St. Louis Browns and says "I think I could have become a real good pitcher or outfielder if I had given up football. My baseball days ended after I injured my back in football."

Ernie reveals that the three college games he most remembers were Stanford's Rose Bowl meeting with Notre Dame in 1925, and the '25 California and USC games.

The Rose Bowl game climaxing the '24 season is singled out as Nevers' greatest collegiate performance. He played the entire game on two injured ankles — fractures which barely had healed.

Until the bowl game, Ernie had played only three minutes of the '24 season after his left ankle was broken in a September scrimmage.

In the next-to-last game of the season against Montana in November, Ernie was in the lineup for the first time. Three minutes after the contest started, he was carried off the field with a broken right ankle.

When Stanford was chosen to play in the Rose Bowl against the Irish and the immortal Four Horsemen, Nevers walked through plays in practice on crutches.

WHEN THE CAST finally was taken off, Ernie had only four days of active practice before the game. He went into the Rose Bowl battle with his legs taped up to his knees.

Warner figured Ernie would last about 10 minutes, but Nevers played the entire game and at the end, the crowd gave him a standing ovation.

He carried the ball 34 times — a record in those days — and gained almost as much yardage as the victorious Notre Dame team.

On defense, he was in on nearly four out of five tackles and intercepted a pass to start the Indians on the way to a third-period TD.

Nevers still thinks Stanford would have won the game, but for a questionable call by the referee. The late Walter Eckersall was head linesman and he threw up his hands and put the ball on the one-inch line where Notre Dame held for downs.

"If we had made that touchdown, the score would have been 20-17 and being only three points behind, we would not have had to game so much with our passing," Ernie says. Notre Dame finally won, 27-10.

In his first pro appearance, Ernie got $25,000 for one post-season game against Grange's All-Stars in Jacksonville. That was late in '25 after his senior year at Stanford.

THE FOLLOWING YEAR, 1926, he signed to play football with the Duluth Eskimos for $20,000 and baseball with the Browns.

The football season, Ernie played 29 games, an average of one every four days. In one stretch, he performed in five contests in eight days, going the full 60 minutes in each. In fact, he missed only 27 minutes of action all season.

He was stricken with appendicitis two days before the Eskimos' key game with Green Bay. The doctors told him not to play, but he went ahead anyway and threw a record 62-yard touchdown pass to Joe Rooney, longest ever thrown in pro football up to then.

In 1927, Nevers set a new pro record by completing all 17 passes he threw against Pottsville. In another game, he kicked a record five field goals in as many attempts against Hartford.

But it was on an icy field in Chicago in 1929 that Nevers set the record of which he is the most proud.

Then with the Chicago Cardinals, he led his team to a stunning 40-6 victory over the champion Bears, scoring all of his team's 40 points — a mark never equalled — on six touchdowns and four extra points.

Quite an athlete was Ernie Nevers.

Rangers Bury Bruins

New York Romps, 8-1, Boosts Lead

Combined News Services

The New York Rangers scored four power play goals, three of them while Boston's John Bucyk was serving a five-minute majority penalty midway through the second period Saturday and went on to rout the Bruins 8-1 in a National Hockey League game.

The victory moved New York four points ahead of Boston in the NHL's Eastern Division race.

In other games, Andre LaCroix scored one goal and got two assists and reserve goalie Doug Favell got his first shutout as the Philadelphia Flyers blanked the Minnesota North Stars, 6-0; Gary Unger scored his 20th and 21st goals of the season to lead the Detroit Red Wings to a 5-2 win over the Western Division-leading St. Louis Blues and Bobby Rousseau's 25-foot drive in the first period stood up the rest of the way and proved to be the winner as the Montreal Canadiens defeated the Chicago Black Hawks, 4-1.

Bucyk was sent to the penalty box at 6:21 of the second period for drawing blood while high sticking Ranger Brad Park. At 8:32, Vic Hadfield took a lead pass from Jean Ratelle and scored the first of three Ranger goals within a 3:21 span which blew the game open.

At 10:41 Ratelle scored on a 15-foot slap shot, and eight seconds later Ratelle knocked in a rebound to give New York a commanding 5-1 lead.

Crosby Leader Bert Yancey Protects Elbow With Bracelet

PEBBLE BEACH — It seems Bert Yancey, who earlier in the week revealed that one of the reasons for his fast start in the Crosby clambake was due to his new "image" of having fun while playing golf, also has another gimmick going for him.

He's wearing a bracelet on his left wrist . . . but it's not from superstition, nor does it carry any sentimental value, and it doesn't signify an old love such as the tattoo on Lee Trevino's arm which the El Paso Mexican star now keeps covered with a Band-Aid.

It's made of pure copper and Bert wears it because of a "tennis elbow."

"It is designed to absorb the calcium from the deposit on the elbow," Bert explained. "It's also good for arthritis, they tell me. Anyway, I'll sure endorse it because it works for me. I believe in it."

Yancey revealed he learned of the copper bracelets "when I first went to work at Whitemarsh Valley Country Club in Philadelphia several years ago. I noticed several members wore them. One close friend, a real good golfer, got so he couldn't swing a club, but the copper somehow cured him and he was able to play as good as ever.

"After I saw the two Australians — Roche and Newcombe — wearing the bracelets in the U.S. National Tennis Championships at Forest Hills, I asked them about it and they also swore by it.

"So," Bert went on, "when I played in the Kaiser tournament last October in Napa, I asked the tennis pro if he could get me one. He ordered it and sent it to me and I've been wearing it ever-since the Heritage the last week in November and it sure has worked.

"Yes," he admitted with a grin, "they call it a voodoo bracelet on the box, but I understand they're going to change the name of it to 'Absorba' or something like that."

Attendance records continue to fall in the Crosby. Thursday's crowd of 11,600 was the largest opening-day turnout in the history of the event; 12,000 more showed up Friday despite the miserable weather, while a record 17,500 checked in Saturday resulting in one of the worst traffic jams ever seen here.

Gross gate receipts for the first three days hit $146,500 and the all-time record of $171,000 is sure to be surpassed today.

Jack Nicklaus, tied for 17th at 214, five strokes off the pace, needs to pass 10 players ahead of him today to become the third man to push his all-time money winnings over the $1 million mark.

Jack's total right now is $996,524.

Arnie Palmer was the first to go over a million late in 1968, and Billy Casper went over the top two weeks ago when he captured $20,000 first money in the Los Angeles Open.

There were several "name" casualties who failed to make the cut in the Crosby.

It took 219, four over par, to make the field for today's final 18 holes.

Among those who barely missed at 220 were Gene Littler, Gay Brewer and Johnny Pott, who won the 1968 Crosby from Casper in a sudden death playoff when he holed out a 20-foot chip shot from off the green.

Among those at 221 were Julius Bores, Al Geiberger and Hale Irwin, while at 222 were Frank Beard, leading money winner of 1969, and Dave Douglass, winner of last week's Phoenix Open.

Two others who failed to make it were Don January and Dan Sikes at 272

Kathy Schmidt Paces L.B. Track Club

Kathy Schmidt finished first in the discus and in the shotput to lead the Long Beach Track Club in the SPAAAU sponsored Inland Empire meet at Edgemont High Saturday.

Miss Schmidt, of Wilson High, threw the discus 129-10. Debbie Nolan was second in the discus. Sue Bruning, in her first track meet, finished fourth in the mile and fourth in the 880.

Keino Shakes Liquori

Carlos Remains Undefeated in 50

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kipchoge Keino, the popular Kenya Olympic champion, made a shambles of the field Saturday night, capturing the mile run in 4:00.6 at the third Philadelphia Track Classic.

The much-heralded duel between Villanova's Olympian Marty Liquori, and the 1,500-meter Olympic champion never materialized as the flashy Kenyan, took the lead after the half-mile mark and opened up a 50-yard edge on his nearest competitor, John Baker of Maryland.

Liquori, America's premier miler, was a well-beaten third, 80 yards back. Keino, leading a parade of meet and Civic Center marks that went crumbling, raced around the 12-lap boards to the approval of a standing crowd of 7,150.

Keino's time was the second fastest ever on a 12-lap track and was one of 10 meet marks that went tumbling.

Earlier John Carlos, the United States' top sprinter broke the meet mark in the 50-yard dash with a 5.2 clocking. The Olympic medalist, winning his fifth successive race of 1970, nipped fellow Olympian Charlie Greene of the U.S. Army at the tape.

Other marks falling were the 50-yard high hurdles, when Olympic runnerup Erv Hall of the Philadelphia Pioneers nipped Leon Coleman of the Southern California Striders and Bill High of Tennessee in 6.0.

Juris Luzins, formerly of William & Mary, also ran the fastest 880 yards ever over 12 laps en route to his record 1:50.9 victory.

Martin McGrady of Sports International romped to a five-yard victory over Villanova's Larry James in the 600-yard run in 1:11.7 as the indoor record holder at this distance broke the meet record.

Angels Chart Early Workouts

Manager Lefty Phillips announced Saturday the Angels, beginning Feb. 9, will start Monday, Wednesday and Friday preliminary workouts. Spring training for the full Angel squad will begin at Holtville Feb. 23.

General manager Dick Walsh has signed 12 players. The latest to ink contracts were pitchers Lloyd Allen, Bob Foderaro, Joe Henderson and Greg Washburn, outfielder Roger Repoz and infielder Doug Griffin.

Awards Await the Absentees

Those award winners who were unable to accept their trophies at the Long Beach Century Club's Awards Banquet Thursday night may pick them up at the Pacific Coast Club, 850 E. Ocean Blvd.

Exhausted Ralston Tackles Ashe

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Dennis Ralston, who outlasted John Newcombe in a 93-game match, the longest in Australian big-time tennis, will meet Arthur Ashe in an all-American semifinal which boosted the United States' chance to win the Australian crown for the first time in 11 years.

Ralston, coach of the U.S. Davis Cup team, defeated Newcombe, Australia's No. 2 rated player, 19-17, 20-18, 4-6, 6-3, in a marathon which lasted four hours, 41 minutes. The match, which began under lights Friday night at the White City Club, was interrupted after the third set because of heavy midnight dew on the turf.

The sixth-seeded professional from Bakersfield took only 21 minutes to win the fourth set when play was resumed Saturday afternoon in the combined New South Wales and Australian Open championships.

Ashe, from Richmond, Va., lost the first set but he had a much easier time in eliminating Australian Davis Cupper Ray Ruffels 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Richard Crealy, the promising Australian Davis Cup hopeful, plays the winner of the Tony Roche-Roger Taylor match in the other semifinal.

Dodgers' Mound Trio to Appear

Dodger pitchers Joe Moeller, Alan Foster and Ray Lamb will appear in Long Beach next Sunday when the National Leaguers play the Major League All-Stars in a benefit game at Blair Field. All three Dodger players are products of Southern California high schools.

Moeller, who was called on 23 times by manager Walt Alston in 1969, will be pitching his seventh year with the Dodgers. The 6-6, 225-pound righthander attended Mira Costa High.

Foster, who graduated from Los Altos High, figures to be the Dodgers' fourth starter this season. Alan replaced Don Drysdale in the starting rotation last year and registered back-to-back shutouts against the Mets and Padres while compiling a 3-9 record.

Lamb appeared in 10 games in relief while posting a 1.80 ERA. Ray attended Glendale High.

Proceeds go to the medical fund of the Southern California Baseball Assn. Tickets for the season's first exhibition game will be on sale today at the Blair Field box office from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. All grandstand tickets are priced at $2. Youngsters under 12 will be admitted for $1. Tickets also will be sold next Friday and Saturday at Blair Field.

'BANK THEFT' CAPER

Vicious Swindle Is Worked in L.B.

By CHUCK CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

A vicious swindle — the bank examiner bunco — is being worked in Long Beach with elderly persons as the victims, the Long Beach bunco detail warned today.

Sgts. Wesley W. Bertz, Ralph W. Abraham and Carthel S. Roberson said the latest victim, an 88-year-old retired man was robbed of $2,500 Jan. 16.

The scheme is so basically simple that it sounds impossible that it works, the officers said.

HOWEVER, the latest victim did not become suspicious until two days after he was buncoed, the officers reported.

The elderly man said he received a telephone call at 10:30 a.m. from a man who represented himself as an official of the bank where he maintained a $2,500 saving account.

The man said he believed the victim was being cheated by a dishonest bank employee and asked how much money he had on deposit.

The victim told the plausible talking con man his exact balance and the man asked him if he would assist in capturing the dishonest employee.

THE VICTIM readily agreed and the thief said he would call him later and tell him exactly what to do.

At 11 a.m. the con artist called again and said he had found a discrepancy in the victim's account and that if the victim would cooperate he would have his loss restored and in addition would receive a reward for his cooperation.

The victim was told to withdraw $2,500 from his account and to turn it over to a bank representative who would meet him in front of the bank.

The victim followed instructions and gave the money to a man who showed him a bronze badge at 12:30 p.m.

THE THIEF told the victim the money would be returned to his account and that he would hear from the "chief" the next day when the dishonest employee was arrested.

Sgts. Abraham, Bertz and Roberson said another elderly man was swindled out of $1,500 by another bunco man two weeks before the last victim was taken.

"In this instance the victim was able to identify a picture of the thief but the district attorney failed to issue a complaint when he learned the man was a prison escapee, theorizing the adult authority would punish him when and if he was captured," the sergeants said.

THE BUNCO detail mentioned three ways in which the con man learns his victims have money in a particular bank.

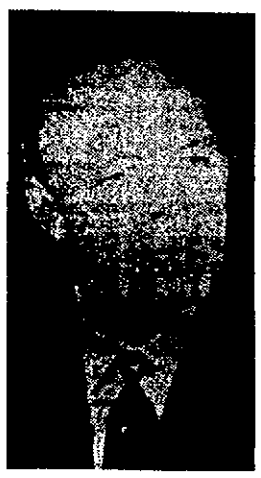

In one instance a victim recalled receiving a telephone call from a person who claimed he represented a credit bureau and he furnished the information.

In other instances the con man consults a city directory and copies down the names of retired persons living in high rent districts.

Being glib tongued and claiming to be a bank representative, they succeed in getting the elderly, slow thinking victims to tell them what bank before they go into the dishonest employee bit, the officers said.

IN STILL another instance, the woman victim remembered a man leaning over her shoulder and looking at her opened deposit book and thus finding out her name and the amount of her deposit.

"Call the police when anyone calls you and pretends to be a bank representative, or call your bank and talk to the manager," Sgts. Bertz, Abraham and Robersons urged.

Phony GI Reveals His Masquerade

AUGSBURG, Germany (UPI) — An American civilian masqueraded for months under a soldier's name to serve with the Army in Germany, the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes said Saturday.

A spokesman for the 24th Infantry Division in Augsburg confirmed the basic facts of the case but declined to give further details.

The civilian went to his company commander's office Nov. 25 and said he was not PFC Bob Addison, as his identity papers indicated, but David Major of Gary, Ind., a civilian, the newspaper said.

He said he agreed to switch with Addison to complete Addison's three-year stint of Army service early in 1969, when Addison was home on leave from his unit at Fuerth, Germany, Stars and Stripes reported.

The newspaper said Major wanted to leave the United States for some reason, and Addison wanted to get out of the Army.

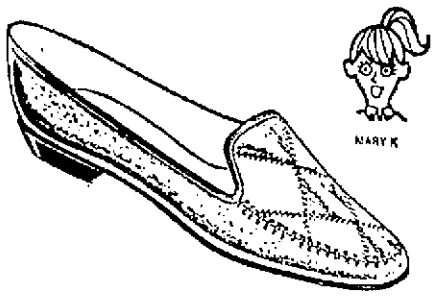

The civilian who called himself Major had served a stint with the Army in Germany in 1967, so he knew the ropes. On his return to Germany as PFC.

Titans Stun Morningside

Morningside is the No. 2-rated team in the CIF, yet today it is only No. 4 in the Sky League.

Unsung Rolling Hills knocked off the Monarches, 51-50, Friday night, to move into a first-place tie with Palos Verdes, each with 3-0 marks.

Morningside has a 16-3 season record, but it is 1-2 in league play.

A three-point play by Pat Boyer with four seconds left gave coach Dan Clayton's team its upset victory.

Palos Verdes, the No. 3-ranked team, survived a stall by Culver City to score a 25-17 win. Jan Van Breda Kolff led the Sea Kings with 12 points.

In Pioneer League play, Aviation and Miraleste ran their marks to 3-0 with easy wins — Aviation 74-56 over El Segundo, and Miraleste 72-43 over Lennox.

Dave Jackson (20) and Carl Peternell (19) pace Miraleste, while Jim Montague (20), Randy Johnson (16) and Jeff Holly (15) led Aviation.

In Camino Real League play, John Zorotovich's 33 points paced first-place Fermin Lasuen to an 87-58 win over Murphy, while Steve Koziol netted 25 as Bishop Montgomery routed St. Monica, 64-46.

Saxons' Streak Hits 45

There are not many leagues in the CIF with more outstanding teams than the Bay circuit, but so far North Torrance has whipped all-comers.

The Saxons ran their record to 6-0 Friday night with an 88-57 romp over Inglewood, and it hiked their win skein to 45 over a four-year period.

Eleven players scored for the Saxons, who led 53-23 at halftime.

Santa Monica remained in the runnerup spot by routing South Torrance, 66-50, while third-place West Torrance beat Mira Costa's fourth-place Mustangs, 69-55.

Led by Jack Blea's scoring (22) and Bill Irwin's rebounding, St. John Bosco squared its Santa Fe League record at 3-3 Friday night with a 70-55 win over Cantwell.

Brethren 5-0

Dan Swagerty scored 16 points Friday night as Brethren won its fifth Academy League game without a loss, 75-29 over Rio Hondo.

Pioneer Rules Whitmont Race

Pioneer High still rules the roost in the Whitmont League, boasting a 4-0 record after Alex Terrazas and Junior Garcia led the Titans to a 54-40 win over Sierra.

Deadlocks Prevail in Orange County; Griffins Scared

Four Orange County leagues have co-leaders today, a long Sunset streak is over, the Angelus is led by an upstart and Los Alamitos continues to face stall tactics in the Orange League.

With the third week of play coming up, here's how the races look:

Orange: Los Alamitos survived Saddleback's slowdown attack for a 38-36 win, its sixth without a loss. Katella, No. 2, ran its record to 5-1 as Rick Aberegg (39) and Mark Connolly (35) took apart third-place Sonora, 99-65.

Sunset: Marina ended Huntington Beach's 44-game win streak, 58-51, and tries for another upset against pacesetter Westminster Saturday night.

In other games, Dan Phillips scored 29 points as Anaheim (2-2) topped Santa Ana, 68-58.

Angelus: Ralph Chandos (31) and Tom Walker (22) led Mater Dei (2-1) to an 82-68 win over Servite while surprise league-leader St. Anthony (3-0) beat St. Paul, 57-44. St. Anthony lost 10 of 15 non-league games.

Crestview: Guard Mark Olson's basket with 17 seconds left gave Villa Park a 65-64 win over Orange and kept the Spartans in a first-place tie with Foothill, which its record to 4-1 with a 70-63 victory over El Modena.

Bill Boyd's 22 points and 15 rebounds led Foothill's win, while Don Swaim led Tustin to a 56-50 upset over San Clemente in the other game.

Garden Grove: Rancho Alamitos and Santiago headed for a showdown as each made their records 3-0 with easy wins — Rancho 84-63 over Bolsa Grande and Santiago 61-40 over Pacifica.

Jim Anderson's 30 points sparked Rancho, while Mark Dekker and Jim Kelch combined for 37 points. Jerry Maras had 21 points and as many rebounds for Pacifica.

Freeway: Troy upset Sunny Hills, 72-68, throwing the league into a two-way tie between the Lancers and Fullerton, which slipped past Buena Park 76-71.

Frank Dehn scored 31 for Sunny Hills, but it wasn't enough against Troy's (3-3) balanced attack. Sam Perales led Fullerton's win along with sub Mike Macorle.

Irvine: Loara and Corona ran their records to 5-1. The Saxons used Denny Nicholas' 21 points to beat Fountain Valley, 56-50, while the Sea Kings ripped Santa Ana Valley as Don Killian netted 25.

Crusaders Fall

Valley Christian received 14 points and 11 rebounds from Jim Hofstee, but it wasn't enough to overcome Chaminade, which beat the Crusaders Friday night, 74-65.

Apaches Threaten Compton

Compton High hasn't lost a Coast League game in three years, but Centennial thinks this may be the year the Tarbabes finally fall.

The Apaches kept pace with Compton, each with 3-0 records, Friday by stunning Warren, 75-68, while the Tarbabes easily topped Downey, 72-54.

The leaders meet Friday and the way Centennial guards Mike Plunket and Tyrone Stitch are moving, the Apaches may be ready for an upset. The pair combined for 40 points and numerous steals against favored Warren.

Balance was the keynote in Compton's win, while Horace Aubrey and Dean Bowser led Dominguez to a 79-71 victory over Paramount in the other game.

Elegance Keynotes Musical Dramas

By DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

To complement its exhibition, "The Middle Ages: Treasures from The Cloisters and The Metropolitan Museum of Art," the Los Angeles County Museum of Art is presenting, this weekend through February 1, the New York Pro Musica in two musical dramas from the 12th Century, "The Play of Daniel," and "The Play of Herod."

Friday night in Bing Auditorium, a benefit premiere opened the ten-performance visit in a fittingly elegant (black ties and $100 seats are elegant, Eliza) manner.

For once, there was truly rich costuming in the audience as well as on the stage.

"THE PLAY OF DANIEL" certainly fills the eye. Robert Fletcher's and Henry Heymann's costumes seem to be the real thing; they stand the scrutiny of very close viewing with no loss in lavish effect. And John Conklin's sets, together with the lighting of Peter Hunt, first produced at The Cloisters in 1963, have survived cross-country travel without apparent mishap.

Leo Bing Auditorium offers different sound values than the Pro Musica's New York base, of course. Its handsome interior gives off none of those churchly echoes which some people feel comprise an important part of "Daniel's" dramatic effect.

Still if you, like me, have not seen this production at The Cloisters, the loss of echo may not trouble you at all. Sound effects are nice, but what is truly dramatic and compelling here — the music — can come alive without great dependence on them.

With Charles Siebert's sonorous delivery of W.H. Auden's verse narration providing helpful comment, the play, enacted by Pro Musica's 30-member ensemble of singers and players, did certainly come alive. The ensemble's usual patina of authenticity could not surprise us, of course, but there was something unexpected in the consistently high level of the singing.

PROMINENT AMONG the performers were Anthony Tamburello (Belshazzar), Ray De Voll (Daniel), Elizabeth Humes (Belshazzar's Queen), Paul Dwyer (An Angel), and a boys choir from New York's Church of the Transfiguration.

To this listener, who usually chews his nails at the sound of boys choirs, this one was a calming and revelatory experience.

Among the instrumentalists were familiar Pro Musica names: LaNoue Davenport, Shelley Gruskin, Mary Springfels, and Genette Foster, as well as Robert Sirinek, who played the straight trumpet.

I hope the rumor we heard just before the performance began — that this series of performances represents this ensemble's valedictory as a touring unit — was only a rumor.

Lucky Sailor Will Escort TV Actress

Some lucky Long Beach-based sailor will win an all-expense-paid night on the town with Denise Nichols, star of the ABC television show Room 222.

That's first prize in the raffle at the second annual benefit show for the Long Beach Community Improvement League, to be held at 8 p.m., Feb. 7, in Long Beach Auditorium.

The Navy is selling 1,000 tickets.

FIRST PRIZE includes dinner and entertainment at Dino's restaurant on the Sunset Strip.

Miss Nichols will be met at Los Angeles International Airport by a chauffer-driven limousine upon her return from Tokyo.

She will be driven to the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium and introduced on stage.

The 500th woman through the door at the benefit will be escorted for an evening of dinner and entertainment by Lincoln Kilpatrick of the Leslie Uggams Show and Lloyd Haines, co-star of ABC's Room 22."

The 500th man through the door gets an all-expense-paid evening with Miss Edna Hartman at a famous Hollywood nightspot.

Stars who have agreed to appear include Brock Peters, Erik Braden, Joe Campanella, Lola Falania, Maxwell Julian and Letta Mubulu.

Tickets are available at the Bank of America, 4th Street and Pine Avenue, and Norse Way branches; and the Community Improvement League Benefit Headquarters, 555, E. Pacific Coast Hwy.

The Pan American Queen selected will reign over the city's Pan American Festival April 13-19.

Twenty girls will be selected as semi-finalists on March 3-4 and will compete in the finals on April 9. All competition — which includes each contestant deliverying a short speech on fostering Pan American Goodwill — will be held at Bullocks, Lakewood.

Applications will be available at schools or at the Pan American office, 5787 South St., Lakewood. Completed applications must be returned by Feb. 24.

AT CHAPEL THEATER

Sex Has Message

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

Sex IS saleable, as nightly overflow crowds at Chapel Theater's current mounting of "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running" demonstrates again.

But it would be a sad mistake, I think, to charge off this vehicle's enormous popularity to its frankly uninhibited examination of human sexuality.

In other words: it is good theater — particularly in the discerning hands of director Billy Creamer, who consistently sustains a never-too-frothy, never-too-ponderous approach.

The language, the ideas in four only tenuously connected playlets comprising the whole no longer is startling to an audience conditioned, through hearsay at least, by "Hair" and "Oh, Calcutta."

Beyond this, there are areas explored which hold deep, significant meaning to the more-or-less affluent, middle-aged, middleclass citizens: where is he going, where has he been, what's this life all about?

In the first vignette, the state of contemporary theater is probed. Specifically, will on-stage nudity ever be accepted by general audiences? (The show predates "Hair," of course.) Parker Babbidge turns in a superlative job as a hammy actor who really doesn't mind at all appearing in the skinny.

Number two deals with those tensions and apprehensions that develop during a lasting, "happy" marriage. Whether or not George and Harriet will trade in their old double bed for a pair of twins provide the entree for Darlene Chafee and Babbidge to make points worthy of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

I was most taken with the third offering, perhaps through identification with its "hero." Austin Rheingold reaches his finest moment as this middle-aged husband and father unwillingly confronted with his childrens' sex education at a time when he's going through the well-known identity crisis experienced by many during their fourth fifth decade.

Finally, there is a pointed spoof between two elders who have difficulty in remembering on occasion their husband-wife's name. Each has been married several times and it's not always easy for Mrs. Chaffee and Andrew Hawkes to remember which partner was involved in what amorous event from the past.

Overall, on balance, a strong three-star rating; mature viewers only — and they should make reservations well in advance.

Armour Girds for 'Safari'

College professor Richard Armour, perhaps best known as a humorist and author of rib-tickling stories, will take a "Safari into Satire" at University of California Irvine's science lecture hall Feb. 1 at 8 p.m.

The event is the annual free-to-the-public lecture offered by UCI Town and Gown.

Dr. Armour, who taught for years at Scripps College and Claremont Graduate School, is now lecturer emeritus there. His many books include "It All Started With Columbus" and "Light Armour," a collection of his wittiest works.

HOBBY SHOW OPENS WITH SNAKES, DOLLS

Hobbies ranging from wood whittling to snake collecting will be illustrated this weekend at the Gardena Recreation Department's annual hobby show in the Gardena Community Center, 1651 W. 162nd St.

The show, co-sponsored by the Gardena Friends of the Library, will open at noon on both days. It will run until 8 p.m. Saturday and 5 p.m. Sunday.

Among the hobbies to be shown are doll collections, handicrafts, postmarks, copper pitchers and pictures of old Gardena.

EDUCATOR TO ADDRESS BRETHREN

Professor G. B. Gordon, Pacific Christian College vice president and director of development, will speak at the third anniversary banquet of Long Beach Brethren Manor, at 6:45 p.m. Thursday.

Master of ceremonies in the Manor's dining room, 3333 Pacific Place, will be H. George Hanawalt, Southern California Edison Co. regional manager and president of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Gordons' topic will be "Life is Fun."

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Sportsmans Club Begins 34th Year

John Greenwood, the youngest man ever to take the office of president of the Long Beach Sportsmans Club, assumed that job Saturday night at an installation and dinner at the clubhouse, 3623 Santa Fe Ave. The occasion marked the start of the club's 34th year. He succeeded Bill Willborn.

Greenwood, who has been a member of the Sportsmans Club for six years, works for Allstate Insurance Company, with offices in Terrance, but he and his wife and family live at 10551 Ramblewood Dr., Stanton. He and his wife, Ava, have two teen-age daughters, Jo Ann, 14, and Karen, 13, and it seems that the entire family shares John's interest in the outdoors.

JOHN GREENWOOD
Adjusts to New Office

The Greenwoods do much camping and fishing, particularly along the Colorado River and on the lakes formed by that stream. John prefers fresh-water fishing, likes to hunt deer and all kinds of wild birds, but finds little time for ocean fishing.

John, born in Washington State, moved to California at an early date and went to school in the San Francisco Bay area. He spent four years in the U.S. Armed Services in Korea.

He became interested in insurance adjustment work nine years ago, worked as an adjuster, then became supervisor for a large area served by Allstate.

He wants the LBSC to give stronger support than ever to Ducks Unlimited and to the Ocean Fish Protective Assn. in 1970.

TAKING OFFICE WITH GREENWOOD were Bill Coleman Jr., vice president; Tom Skidmore, secretary; Bob Nehr, treasurer, and Herb Nau, sergeant-at-arms. Directors: Cliff Sewell, Bob Wright, Skip Buford and Hal Powell.

The club used most of the surplus in its bank account and much time of its members this year to add another room to the facility which fronts on Santa Fe Avenue. It is one of the most valuable pieces of property on the west side of long Beach.

The club members hope to recoup their funds this year with the third annual carnival, something that always has drawn big crowds and created fun and excitement in the summer period.

The Long Beach Sportsmans Club was formed as a nonprofit group to provide a meeting place for sportsmen of all walks of life, to assemble socially and exchange tales of their experiences with anybody who would listen.

One thing that can be said about the LBSC is that all its members have worked hard to make the club one of the best. In doing that, they have put their hands to the wheels, so to speak, not figuratively, but literally, to build walls, barbecue pits, fireplaces and even a casting pool. And the latest room has a pool table and can be classed as a recreational hall.

FRED AUSTIN, MASTER OF THE BARGE Islander, off Belmont Pier, must have a secret formula for baiting bonito. The Islander totals for that fighting fish have been soaring daily for more than a week. In addition, some small barracuda are showing.

Patrons of the barge have been coming ashore with sacks and sacks of bonito. Apparently the area where the Islander is anchored is ideally situated for bonito and the water has cleared since the recent rainstorm. Even so, other boats fishing surface water are not finding many bonito.

A "sand dab special" sounds a bit weird, but Pierpoint Landing's fleet manager, Cookie Cook, says that there has been such a demand for that type of fishing that the Pierpoint, stable old 65-footer of the landing's fleet, will make the run every Saturday and Sunday departing at 7 a.m. and returning at 3 p.m. Sand dabs are excellent fare for the table, but catching them is like pulling up pieces of paper.

Pierpoint also is starting a perch derby, with prizes each week. Fish can be caught anywhere, but the anglers must register at Pierpoint, then return there for the weigh-in of the fish. George Hart is in charge of that operation.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — Members of the Long Beach Spin-Fishing Club, taking a good, hard look at the anchovy situation as created by the silly decision of the Fish and Game Commission, has voted to double its donation to the Ocean Fish Protective Assn., the group that is carrying the ball for the sportsmen in the present fight to preserve anchovies for bait fish.

Gus Newman, Lake Havasu City publicist, finally has recovered from the aftermath of the Outboard World Championship to take a look at the fishing picture on that lake. Perhaps the outboards scared the fish so much that they still are hiding. Some anglers have hooked striped bass near Parker Dam in deep water, but no one has been able to land one. Weighted lures and waterdogs are getting the largemouths in water from 20 to 50 feet deep.

The California-Nevada chapters of the Wildlife Society and the American Fisheries Society will meet in Fresno Jan. 30-31 to study the impact of population pressures on fish and wildlife resources. Ray Arnett, director of the California Department of Fish and Game, will deliver the keynote address. Principal speaker at the annual banquet will be Charles H. Meacham, commissioner of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Possibly one of the most interesting features of the two-day meeting will be a panel on pesticides and wildlife.

FISHIN' FACTS

San Diego — 28 anglers on 2 boats caught 9 calico bass, 178 rockfish.

Belmont Pier — 92 anglers on 1 barge caught 35 barracuda, 19 calico bass, 100 bonito, 2 halibut, 75 perch.

Redondo — 114 anglers on 4 boats caught 87 calico bass, 36 bonito, 87 cow cod, 1,245 rock cod; 46 anglers on 1 barge caught 87 mackerel, 215 rock cod.

Norm's Landing — 72 anglers on 3 boats caught 10 calico bass, 4 sand bass, 4 halibut, 78 whitefish, 2 bonito, 5 cheephead, 24 cow cod, 2 ling cod, 656 rock cod.

Pierpoint Landing — 139 anglers on 6 boats caught 1 calico bass, 1,337 rock cod, 14 cow cod, 1 ling cod, 1 sole, 112 miscellaneous.

Oceanside — 30 anglers on 2 boats caught 1 barracuda, 49 calico bass, 1 bonito, 57 rock cod, 422 miscellaneous.

Pacific Limited — 153 anglers on 8 boats caught 1,270 rock cod, 22 cow cod, 1 ling cod, 38 bonito, 6 whitefish, 1 sheepshead, 2 sole, 6 sculpin.

Ari's Landing — 66 anglers on 3 boats caught 3 barracuda 181 bonito, 41 calico bass, 618 rock cod, 2 halibut, 1 ling cod, 18 whitefish, 17 perch.

Davey's Locker — 77 anglers on 3 boats caught 835 rock cod, 48 cow cod, 1 ling cod, 211 bonito, 19 calico bass, 2 barracuda, 1 halibut, 4 sculpin, 38 miscellaneous.

Seal Beach — 82 anglers on 2 boats caught 650 rockfish, 155 calico bass, 35 whitefish, 65 bonito, 5 halibut; 44 anglers on 1 barge caught 550 bonito, 45 barracuda, 29 calico bass, 2 halibut.

GEORGE TOUGHEST IN TIGHT GOING

Cal State Rivals Caught in a Trapp

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

The Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. scoring statistics rank Cal State Long Beach's lone representative—George Trapp—in a lowly tie for 10th.

It is a most unlikely position for a 6-foot-8 athlete who matriculated to Cal State after all-CIF honors at Monrovia High and all-State honors at Pasadena City College.

That 14.5 scoring mean, however, is of little concern to Trapp, or his current coach, Jerry Tarkanian.

"Scoring isn't everything," says Trapp, pointing out the obvious. "If I had to choose between winning and scoring, I'd take winning every time. That's what the game is really about—winning."

For Cal State Long Beach, Trapp's scoring and the 49ers winning usually has a direct correlation.

The two foremost examples are Trapp's 27-point effort in Cal State's 94-75 conquest of Pacific and his 22 points in last weekend's 83-77 decision over Cal State L. A.

"In those games," says Tarkanian, "George's real talents were on display. He dominated both those games, when he had to.

"Against Pacific, he scored 17 points in the second half although he played less than 10 minutes. It was an outstanding performance.

"Against L. A., he dominated the game for a four-minute period toward the end and it enabled us to stay close enough to win it."

Trapp's contributions to a 49er victory aren't always that noticeable.

Against Lamar Tech, for example, Trapp took only 10 shots, seven from the floor and three from the foul line. Yet he made them all and finished with 17 points in a 92-78 victory.

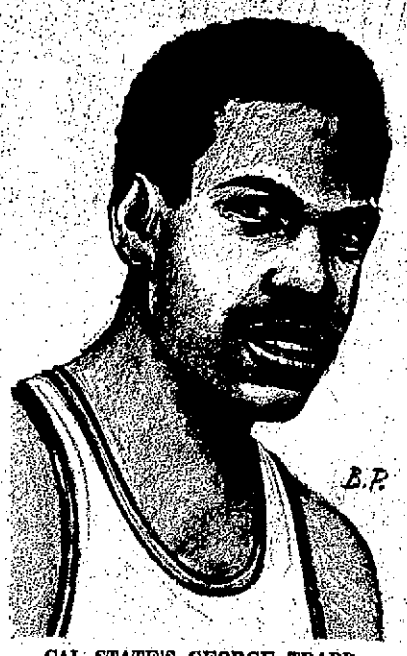

Last week against UC Santa Barbara, Trapp was 6 of 7 from the floor and finished with 14 points.

His contributions in the UC Santa Barbara and Cal State L. A. victories earned Trapp PCAA player of the week honors. He was similarly accorded by Southland basketball writers for his performance against Pacific.

Yet Trapp's timely ability to score isn't his only talent.

"George is actually one of our most consistent performers," reports Tarkanian. "George has played very well since the Houston game.

"He is also one of our more intelligent players on the court—he has good basketball sense."

CAL STATE'S GEORGE TRAPP
Figures Can Be Deceiving

Unlike most basketball players who prefer to shoot, Trapp even enjoys playing Tarkanian's zone defense.

"The zone has been good to us," admits Trapp. "It keeps other clubs from getting the good percentage shot against us."

Why is the zone tougher one time than the next?

"Because of the way we play it," Trapp admits with a slight smile. "It's hard to score on us when the game is late and close because that's when we play it the hardest.

"You have to work hard in a zone defense and there are times when we get lazy."

Did the pressure of two close games last weekend bother the 49ers?

"You feel the pressure some of the time," admits Trapp, "but you have to get used to it. You have to ignore it. In the end, the team that wants to win the most, the team that works hard to win, usually does."

Perhaps one of the main reasons the 49ers are 13-3 this season is that Trapp does most of his work when the game is still to be decided.

HARLEM HANDYMAN
Meadowlark Lemon, clown prince of famed Harlem Globetrotters, only uses two arms when he plays, but they are enough to create plenty of comedy. Trotters appear Wednesday night at Long Beach Arena. They played before sellout crowd in Anaheim last week.

Jacobsen the Recruiter Has Big Selling Point

By DAVE DANIEL
Staff Writer

Gary (Jake) Jacobsen has been head football coach for one month now and fortunately for Long Beach City College, it appears that he knows what he's doing.

Jacobsen, 31, took over Dec. 22 when Paul Chafe resignd to pursue administrative duties. Jake had been on Chafe's staff as defensive coach for four seasons.

He inherits a team that went 3-6 last year but still managed to finish in a respectable third-place tie in the rugged Metropolitan Conference.

His first month on the job has found him looking for replacements to a team hit hard by graduation on both offensive and defensive units and to help place his sophomores in four-year schools.

"We've been recruiting hard," he said. "We've been every place in the city and have seen almost every kid.

"Our challenge is to encourage the kids to come over here and play before they go on to a four-year school. We show them what advantages there are in playing 20 games in their freshman and sophomore years as opposed to maybe four games as a freshman in a four-year school.

"Also, the average sophomore in a university plays only 13 minutes a season, according to NCAA statistics."

But besides selling playing time, Jake is most proud of the fame LBCC graduates have gained after they've left the Carson Street campus.

"We've had more than 159 athletes go on to scholarships from here in the last 10 years," he says.

"For example, there were 17 players that made it good from last year's (1968) team. Look at Dennis Dummit and Rick Wilkes at UCLA. I don't have to say anything about them.

"There's Jeff Severson at Cal State Long Beach. How many interceptions did he get last year? 15?

Other starters for (Jim) Stangeland were John Kahler, Phil Dunaway and John Courdy.

"Jay Morrison was first team all-WAC at the University of New Mexico. Dale Didur was a starter at Nebraska and Denny Mayfield was the starting tight end at Texas-El Paso."

The sophomores that played last season will be announcing where they are heading as soon as the new semester gets under way. Then all Jacobsen has to worry about is when the high school seniors will be doing the same.

NORSE NOTES: Jacobsen also inherits a rugged pre-season schedule against state runner-up Fullerton, arch rival Cerritos, and Rio Hondo. The site of the Fullerton game is still undecided and it is possible that LBCC could have only three home games next year and six on the road. The Vikes had only four home games, and two of those on Friday nights, last season. Jake will soon announce the completion of his staff. "I have to find someone to replace me," he said.

COMPUTER CORNER

Knicks' Frazier Figures Charity Begins on Court

By BUD GOODE

The way he passes the ball around you could call the New York Knicks' Walt Frazier 'Mr. Lend-Lease.' Frazier leads the Knicks in assists, and the Knicks lead the league in the won-lost column.

What is the key to NBA leadership this year? According to the Sports Computer, total team assists this season make for championship play. New York and Atlanta are the NBA leaders in assists per game. Both teams lead their divisions.

The following table shows the teams in order of their standing plus the Univac sports computer figures on assists per game:

EASTERN DIVISION	Assists/Game	WESTERN DIVISION	Assists/Game
New York	27.4	Atlanta	26.0
Milwaukee	25.5	Chicago	24.3
Baltimore	23.6	Lakers	24.2
Philadelphia	23.4	San Francisco	22.1
Cincinnati	23.4	Phoenix	22.0
Boston	21.3	San Diego	21.9
Detroit	19.5	Seattle	25.8

The Knicks lead the league in assists per game. Frazier keeps the ball in circulation with 8.7 assists per contest. Walt Hazzard is the Care package man at Atlanta with 7.2 assists. Keep the melon in the family, men. It will make for a fat dessert at the end of the season.

Sizemore Joins L.B. Clinic

Ted. Sizemore of the Dodgers, voted National League Rookie of the Year in 1969, will be one of many speaker featured at the Long Beach Unified School District's ninth Baseball Coaches Clinic.

The all-day affair, Saturday, Jan. 31, in the men's gym of Long Beach City College, will also present speeches by manager Preston Gomez of the San Diego Padres, Padre first-base coach Dave Garcia, scout Harry Minor of the New York Mets, pitcher Paul Doyle of the Angels and Dodger trainer Bill Buhler.

The clinic is offered free and is open to all baseball coaches at any institutional level. More than 400 attended last year's coaching clinic and drew guests from California, Arizona and Nevada.

Registration starts at 8:30 a.m. with the first lecture scheduled for 9. There will also be free refreshments.

Hi-Hill Teacher Honored

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

Most Golden Apple honor teachers earn their accolades in normal-size classrooms, shops, labs or gyms.

But not Shirley Abercrombie, most recent recipient of an award made monthly by Teachers Association of Long Beach and The Independent, Press-Telegram in recognition of high-quality teaching.

Mrs. Abercrombie holds forth every day, "rain or shine," in an open-air classroom — Long Beach's Camp Hi-Hill, far up Mt. Wilson's north slope in Angeles National Forest.

OPENED in 1948 with joint school district-city ownership, Camp Hi-Hill provides a week's outdoor education every year for most local 6th-graders. During their week youngsters live in cabins scattered up and down the high hill, with supervision from their own home teacher, college student counsellors and a permanent camp educational staff.

Regular, "3R-style" classes meet, but there's additional emphasis placed on "outdoor education" — instruction in natural science, conservation and outdoor living.

Mrs. Abercrombie "has done an outstanding job" in this dual teaching role and "is a leader in the (larger) outdoor education program," declares a colleague's letter that put her name in nomination for an Apple.

"Recently she helped plan, setup and worked in a pilot program of developing outdoor techniques for use by classroom teachers in city school environments," the letter writer notes.

"She exemplifies the enthusiasm and drive signifying a devoted and dedicated teacher . . . whose students adore her," the fellow teacher concludes.

NOW IN HER 6th year at Camp Hi-Hill, Mrs. Abercrombie was educated in city schools, graduated from Poly High School, City College and Cal State, Long Beach, where she also earned a master's degree in educational administration. Before "going up the mountain," which now is her permanent home, the honoree taught in Addams, Burbank, Lowell and Longfellow Elementary Schools.

A son, Rod, serves in the Air Force, and a daughter, Gail, a UC-Santa Barbara graduate, expects to practice teaching next year in Long Beach.

RECEIVES AWARD

Latest Golden Apple honoree Shirley Abercrombie, left, and Charleen Evans, assistant executive director of the Teachers Association of Long Beach, examine the award given monthly by the association and the Independent, Press-Telegram.

Reserve Enlists '2 by 6ers'

The recruiting office at the Naval Reserve Training Center on Terminal Island is currently accepting applications for first enlistments in the "two-by-six" program of the Naval Reserve.

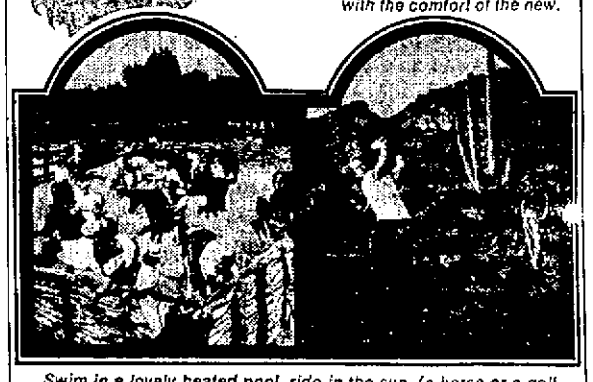

Chief Boatswain's Mate Edward K. Corder Jr., head recruiter, said there is no waiting list for the programs.

The two-by-six program requires a two-year active duty obligation during a six-year enlistment. Reporting for the active duty is delayed for one year, thus permitting enlistees advancement to higher pay grades before reporting for duty.

The program is open to single applicants, 18 to 21, with no dependents. Seventeen-year-olds are eligible if high school graduates.

In another program designed to provide manpower for reserve units, men discharged in the past four years can re-enlist as members of the Naval Reserve on their same pay levels. The pay grades are those from E-4 through E-9.

Att'n: Kelley

Dear Kelley:

After several fruitless searches in quest of a utility trailer, (there are very few advertised), it occurred to me to try running an ad in your "Wanted" column. I deduced there must be numerous people who bought them in the east for the express purpose of moving west, who now let them set idle and unused.

Well, the deduction was correct. I had over 20 calls in two days offering a broad variety of trailers in all parts of Long Beach as well as San Pedro, Gardena, Norwalk, Wilmington and you name it. I took an afternoon off, inspected them and bought the one in Norwalk.

Your ad created a "supermarket" of trailers from which I could take my choice.

Thanks for saving me time and miles.

Very truly yours,

Bill McConnel

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Personal and professional advantages are featured this year. Strive to make use of every opportunity for advancement and to put aside a tithe of your earnings in a sound investment. Your ideas of what is fun and what sort of individuals interest you are about to shift as success brings you into contact with a new set of people.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You now become aware that many around you have more or less psychic gifts and you cannot long hold much of a secret from them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emotional interests awaken suddenly. Take a good look at yourself: do something about any feature or quality that distresses you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business with official agencies goes more smoothly now. Be well ahead of time wherever you have appointments. Gather your best friends and compare notes, go shopping together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A great deal is gained from conversation with others in similar lines of business. Long trips should be in advanced stages of planning by now. Begin a campaign to expand business contacts and improve existing connections.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some long forgotten favor you extended comes back to you now. Get estimates on work related to your property or home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In an atmosphere of good humor, ask for whatever you really want and make the most of the answers you get.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Seek favors where needed for yourself and your friends. Impromptu arrangements come off more easily today; keep matters simple to permit greater freedom of movement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A pleasant surprise comes in the midst of your routines. Proceed with original plans, prudently but firmly. Social and romantic ventures thrive beyond expectations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The ventures you begin now may take three months to complete. Put enough thought into your plannings to take the time element into account.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Unpredictable friends are probably up to some delightful mischief. Catch up with correspondence; finish neglected projects, and balance your check stubs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's a long pull to September, but some scheme comes to a conclusion about that time. Get busy now to meet a worthwhile deadline — a course of study or a creative project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If official matters, legal concerns come up today, settle them promptly. Go shopping for clothing and perhaps a gift for someone you love.

"Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back"

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

Tammy's Voice—Bahston Plus Britain

NEW YORK — Tammy Grimes' voice has been likened to the sound of "a rusty key being turned in a boudoir lock" . . . "the seductive rustle of a silk negligee" . . . "the gurgle of rare brandy."

Tammy's fame is mounting again, she has her bright cat's eyes pinned on a Tony award for her Amanda role in the Noel Coward revival, "Private Lives" — and she was somewhat astonished when I told her that she was wonderful but that she caricaturized womanhood.

Miss Grimes, who's even a greater table actress than a stage actress, dropped her jaw almost to the floor.

"I don't think so!" She was having wine with dinner in Sardi's between shows. She slumped back against her seat and fixed her eyes on the ceiling. "The people in this show are the rich hippies of 1931. I do not lean so much on my personality because the part of Amanda is so good."

YES, IN SOME shows "you have to react vocally or facially," but according to her, she doesn't in this show. (According to her!)

The fact is that Tammy's known she was a comedienne since she was 13. She played a lady-in-waiting in "Victoria Regina," in Chestnut Hill, Mass.

"I got a tremendous laugh and all I did was bow to the queen. I could never figure out why." Her voice at this point became a shade — a slight shade only — Missourian. Tammy went to Stevens College in Missouri but she'll never be thought Middle Western.

"And can you make people cry as well as laugh?" . . . "Yes." . . . "When did you?" . . . "Today."

There's a hint of tears when she sings "Some Day I'll Find You" — but there was more when in "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" she swept down the grand balustrade to welcome the guest who had snubbed her and not come to the party.

It was in "Molly Brown," she confessed to me, that she frequently didn't like the audience and longed to tell them, "No matter what you paid, you're a bad audience. So please just do me one favor and leave — go see 'Spartacus.'"

Some readers thought she had actually said it — and she became known as "The Terrible Tempered Tammy Grimes."

TAMMY SAYS her voice is a "combination of Bahston with a little British thrown in" — she swears she doesn't practice it.

She picked up some from Noel Coward, who directed her in "Look Out for Lulu." He also told her "You were the greatest Elvira" in "High Spirits" — "but be sure to keep your tummy in." What did Noel mean by that? "Merely that he would have preferred a woman with a flatter tummy."

Married to Christopher Plummer and then to Jeremy Slate and now single, Tammy says actors and actresses while married can make a go of it even though very very famous.

"Who ever did it?"

"Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton!"

"And do you have any such plans?"

"When I do" — her dreamy eyes were again on the ceiling — "you'll be the fust to know."

THE WEEKEND WINDUP: Veteran producer Sam Spiegel says dealing with today's young superstar is a problem: "What inducement can you offer someone whose ambition is to live in a hippie commune?" . . . Danny Thomas'll open a string of shish kabob stands. . . . Lynn Redgrave's film, "The Virgin Soldiers," earned back its entire cost in Europe; the U.S. engagement'll be pure profit. . . . The only gal seen in "Patton" is Sally Frei — shown as a pinup in Yank.

Lyricist Carolyn Leigh's on a 500-calorie-a-day diet, slashed off 78 lbs. so far. . . . Recording exec Jimmy Wisner is flying to Paris to be "music consultant" to Sacha Distel. . . . There'll be two Clarks on the same bill at Las Vegas Caesares Palace next summer: Roy (of "Hee Haw") and Petula. . . . Stan Ross, Jackie Gleason's one-time "I'm with yewwww" stooge, has a big role in "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls."

New way to work your way through college: MGM hired 300 San Francisco State students to "riot" for "Strawberry Statement," 20th C-Fox used NYU'ers for "John & Mary" extras. . . . One of the top record hits in Rome belongs to Romina Power, dtr. of Linda Christian and the late Tyrone Power. . . . Oliver Reed was so happy with smog-free Zermatt, Switzerland (where he filmed "Women in Love") that he bought a home there.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Rodney Dangerfield claims his son attends the toughest school in town: "The teacher got a note from the cops about one student. It said, 'Please excuse Johnny for from 3 to 5 years.'"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Fred Allen once said it about Jack Benny at a testimonial dinner: "The last time he paid $50 a plate, it was to his dentist."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "The best place for your bathroom scale is in front of your refrigerator."

EARL'S PEARLS: Morty Gunty heard that Joe E. Lewis saw the movie "Don't Drink the Water," and suggested that he star in the next one, "Don't Water the Drink."

George Segal romances three girls in his new film, "Loving." He says they already plan a sequel: "They're gonna call it 'Exhausted.'" That's earl, brother.

CARRIES CAMPAIGN TO STUDIO

Art Linkletter has some advice for young members of his audience between taping sessions of his daily television show in Hollywood. Linkletter says his next target in his personal war on deadly drugs is the nations schoolteachers.

SINCE DAUGHTER'S DEATH

Linkletter in Personal War on Drug Abuse

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Since his daughter plunged to her death last Oct. 4 — the victim, he said, of LSD — Art Linkletter has been engaged in a personal war against dangerous drugs.

He has had an evening's discussion in the White House with President and Mrs. Nixon, addressed the nation's governors, appeared before Congressional committees, and spoken to youth groups in colleges and elsewhere.

HE SERVES on a county drug commission and books all the speaking engagements a busy television career will permit.

What can one man do to stop the drug flood?

"Just a little," Linkletter says. "No one ever knows. But if I can save one kid's life, anything I do is worth it."

His next target will be the nation's schoolteachers.

Through a film aimed specifically at them, the entertainer says, he will try "to educate teachers in how to look for the danger signals, how to handle the drug problem in school."

Diane, 20, the youngest of his five children, fell to her death from her sixth-floor apartment. "It wasn't suicide," Linkletter said then, "because she wasn't herself. She was murdered by the people who manufacture and sell LSD."

TWO DAYS later the grieving father said: "I think my daughter's death will be paid for many, many times by the kinds of things I can say and get done, using this as an example."

And since then, he says, "I think I have made a small dent on the American awareness of the vast proportions of the problem, and the need for community action starting right in the family."

Linkletter, 57, a tall man pink-cheeked from skiing weekends at his Lake Tahoe lodge, sat in his big office trimmed with trophies, plaques and tributes to his 35 years as a radio and television star.

SINCE DIANE'S death, he recalled, he had spent a long evening with the Nixons in the White House discussing "the problems that face families, whether it's dope, runaways or family breakups. I can tell you that the President is concerned, with a deep, angry, personal concern, at what's going on with the kids."

Kramer to Depict Campus Revolt

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Can a successful, rich, middle-aged producer capture the spirit and philosophy of campus revolt in a motion picture?

Stanley Kramer, producer of "On The Beach," "Champion," "Inherit The Wind" and "The Secret of Santa Vittoria" among dozens more, thinks he can and is, in fact, attempting it in his new film, "R.P.M."

The story deals with campus rebellion, activism and anarchy.

What, Kramer was asked, if youth sees the picture and scoffs at an establishmentarian attempting to comprehend their revolution?

"I don't think they will," said Kramer, sure of himself.

"I'm already in a counter-revolutionary state. We old revolutionaries, who have been by-passed and discarded by the youngsters, must provide the means for the present revolt to reach its goals."

AS A PRECAUTION against being out of touch, Kramer has employed a young activistic anarchist to act as technical advisor for the picture.

It is filmed partially on location at University of Pacific in Stockton, Calif., which has never experienced a campus uprising.

Long a rebel himself, making films of social significance, Kramer said, "we have everything for a political, spiritual and artistic revolution to make a better world."

He was speaking of his own generation.

"Maybe some of us who have lived longer and have been in revolt longer, can provide the pipeline for youth to express itself in practical terms.

"You don't need to know the cure for leprosy to know a guy has it. Same holds true for young revolutionaries who don't know the answers, but they know something is wrong.

"We shouldn't expect them to know the cures. They aren't qualified. Their function is to call attention to the problems. It is up to us — the people who care — to provide the solutions."

Kramer did not come out and say he was one of those who cares more than others about American institutions or morality. One must assume his past motion pictures are his credentials. They would appear to be.

The fact remains, however, that Kramer is not a now person by campus standards. Kramer maintains, "I support the college kids. My picture says they can't get what they want by rioting. The ends simply do not justify the means.

Career of American Director Traced in Lucid Critical Study

By VINCENT CANBY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In George Stevens' 1934 film version of Booth Tarkington's "Alice Adams," the heroine, the small-town girl from the wrong side of the tracks, wins the hand of the rich young man from the right side of the tracks — an upbeat alteration of the novel in which Alice goes off to become a secretary, and probably a spinster. In Stevens' film version of "The Diary of Anne Frank," made 25 years later, little Anne, just before she and her family are carried off to a concentration camp, Looks up at a sky of fleecy white clouds and says: "I still believe — in spite of everything — that people are basically good . . . I think the world is going through a phase — like I am with mother."

In his generally fine, lucid critical study, "George Stevens: An American Romantic," Donald Richie traces the career of one of America's most successful directors of mass entertainment in terms that Richie sees as the maturation of Stevens' romanticism. It isn't simply that Stevens' films no longer have happy endings, imposed from without, but that his characters, including Anne Frank, Shane and Jesus Christ, have chosen "to believe, to affirm, to say yes to life . . . This affirmation in the face of knowledge is an entirely different thing from the ignorant and facile affirmation of the man who has no idea of the horror that life can become."

I'm not convinced that this new affirmation is entirely different from the old, and it's one of the few things with which I disagree in Richie's extremely intelligent book, the first full-length study of the man who, I feel, reached his peak in the 1930's and 1940's with such films as "Gunga Din," "Swing Time," "Woman of the Year," and "The Talk of the Town."

Nixon Outlines Goals for Decade

By DON HASTINGS
Staff Writer

The Nation

President Nixon delivered his first State of the Union message Thursday and outlined his administration's goals for the new decade. He gave top priority to securing world peace, beginning with a just settlement of the war in Vietnam, but his major emphasis was on domestic problems.

The President proposed a $10-billion, five-year program to check pollution of the environment and pledged continued efforts to reduce living costs, reform welfare and tax systems and to halt the spread of crime.

The address was generally well received in the Congress, which had convened its election-year session Monday.

THE DAY AFTER THE PRESIDENT'S call for a war on crime, the Senate overwhelmingly approved tough legislation designed to crack down on the Mafia and keep it from infiltrating legitimate business. The measure which, among the other things, allows judges to impose sentences of up to 30 years on habitual criminals, was adopted, 72 to 1. It faces an uncertain future in the House.

EARLIER IN THE WEEK, the Senate challenged the threat of a presidential veto by passing, 74 to 17, a $19.7-billion appropriation for health and education programs. Nixon has called the figure inflationary.

RETURNING FROM a 21-day tour of the Far East, Vice President Spiro Agnew reported the United States "is admired and respected" in Asia.

A FLORIDIAN WAS NOMINATED by President Nixon to fill the vacancy on the U.S. Supreme Court. He is U.S. Circuit Court Judge G. Harrold Carswell, 51, of Tallahassee. Civil rights groups spokesmen expressed opposition to the nomination, saying Carswell is a segregationist, but his decisions in racial bias cases have hewed to guidelines set down by the Supreme Court.

THE COST OF LIVING shot up .6 per cent in December, capping a year in which the increase was the largest since the Korean war year of 1951, the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics announced last week. Nationally, the cost index rose 6.1 per cent during 1969, to 131.3. This means that in December it cost $13.13 to buy the same goods and services that could have been purchased for $10 in the 1957-59 base period, or for $12.52 in December 1968.

INTEREST RATES BANKS may pay on savings accounts were raised by the Federal Reserve Board, a move it said should increase the money available for the depressed housing industry. Maximum interest banks on passbook savings accounts was raised to 4½ per cent from 4 per cent Banks also were authorized to issue one-year and two-year securities with single maturity dates bearing interest of 5½ per cent and 5¾ per cent respectively.

THREE MEN WERE ARRESTED in Cleveland, Ohio, and charged with the murder of United Mine Workers Union executive Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski, his wife, Margaret, and their daughter, Charlotte, in their Clarksville, Pa., home. Arraigned and held in lieu of a quarter-million-dollars bail each, were Paul Eugene Gilley, 37, Aubran Wayne Martin, 23, and Claude Edward Vealey, 26. The Yablonskis apparently were slain to prevent him from testifying before a grand jury investigating alleged irregularities in the December election Yablonski lost to UMW President W. A. (Tony) Boyle.

A CORONER'S JURY RULED the killing of two Illinois Black Panther Party leaders in a Chicago police raid Dec. 4 was "justifiable homicide."

THE PRESIDENT OF THE CHURCH of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, David O. McKay, died in Salt Lake City at 96. He had headed the church since 1951. Joseph Fielding Smith, 93, Mormonism's foremost theologian, succeeded McKay.

The West

Ruling in the first federal school discrimination trial on the West Coast, a U.S. District Court judge in Los Angeles ordered the Pasadena Board of Education to desegregate all of its 38 schools by the opening of school in September. Dist. Judge Manuel Real also ordered representatives of the school system to submit a plan for implementation of the order by Feb. 16.

Pasadena is split sharply into black and white residential sections and the basic policy of the school district has been to assign children to schools in their neighborhoods. A group of parents sued the district, contending that children in majority Negro schools are not receiving educations equal to those in majority white schools.

THE LEADER OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC Archdiocese of Los Angeles, James Francis Cardinal McIntyr, retired Wednesday. He was succeeded by Archbishop Timothy J. Manning, 60.

SAYING HE PLANS TO RETURN to private law practice, California's Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch, the only Democrat to survive the statewide Republican victory in 1966, announced he will not seek re-election.

The World

Israeli troops seized a small Egyptian island in the entrance to the Gulf of Suez Thursday, then dismantled and carried away a radar station used to shadow ships and aircraft and Israeli forces operating out of the Sinai Desert. The invaders swooped down in helicopters and secured the island of Shadwan after a four-hour battle. They claimed 60 Egyptian defenders were either killed or captured.

Twenty-four hours later, the Israeli troops and the pieces of the dismantled radar station were helicoptered out.

In other Mideast fighting, Israeli tanks and troops struck several miles into Jordan and attacked a military installation just south of the Dead Sea. The 23-hour battle was described as the heaviest action between the two countries since March 1968. Israeli warplanes ranged into Egypt hitting targets within 15 miles of Cairo.

NO REPORT CARDS

Students Set Their Own 'Learning Pace' at School

By VINT MADER
Staff Writer

Additions range from microscopes to paper gorillas and live chickens at Stephen Foster Elementary School; playing an upstage role in the drama of American educational change.

Deletions at the Bellflower Unified School District school under a 2½-year-old project have included the traditional one-grade classrooms and their fixed-schedule, graded report cards.

Bellflower is among 18 Southern California school districts, selected as a varied "cross-section, that entered one school each in the League of Cooperating Schools project, organized through the UCLA School of Education with a Charles F. Kettering Foundation research grant.

The venture seeks expanded levels of learning at their own best rates for Foster's 514 students, says Principal Gerard Cook, rather than pushing or restraining them to a rigid instructional pace.

ABOLISHING six years of "vertical" grades, the school puts the pupils in four fluidly ascending groups designated A to D, based on 14 teachers in home rooms.

Another innovation is separate science and math labs, a music room and a well-stocked library, to all of which D-group students go frequently from the home rooms to pursue their own projects with a specialist teacher — an anticipation of junior and senior high school scheduling.

"We are strongly emphasizing the individuality of the children, and their learning through independence and self-direction, rather than by being coerced," says Cook.

In educational terms, this is "unstructured" learning, even previewing the time-honored responsibility of the student on university campus to pursue courses of study without daily grading.

THOUGH GROUPS A and B are structured under the home teachers' supervision, students side by side there are regularly working on different subjects or levels of study, and they can secure permission to go to the specialized rooms when home and lab teachers agree they are benefiting from individual work there.

The C group is a transitional level, where the students advance to additional unstructured studies.

Unique to elementary schools, the science lab offers the microscopes and other instruments to encourage higher-level ambitions, including electronic equipment.

The school district, Cook noted, has recently made an application for federal funds to improve the math lab, which he considers to be still under-equipped.

In the science lab, non-poisonous reptiles have been raised in indoor tanks, rabbits and chickens kept in outdoor cages and gardens cultivated.

ANOTHER specialty that is a joy to almost all students who work there, a challenging to opportunity to some and a frustration-curing relief to others is the school's project room.

Here pupils can model relief maps, towns, farms and other structures in pursuit of ideas originating in their classroom studies. Materials from paper, glue and wood to plaster of Paris are available, and projects have included near-lift-size gorilla and rhinocerous in papier mache.

There have been some parental objections to the free reins of Foster School, but Cook notes that there has also been enthusiasm among families, with about 20 volunteer parents currently participating in a teachers' aid program.

THE STRONGEST objections, says the principal, have arisen over the lack of the traditional report cards, replaced with what he calls "anecdotal progress reports," issued when he or the teachers feel a student's showing warrants a note of compliment or of caution to the parents.

Over 2½ years of reaction to these notes, which usually reflect more than one teacher's view on whether the youngsters are delivering their best efforts, Cook says he finds the objections are mostly in two categories.

In the case of bright children, the parents want the reassurance that a list of high marks conveys, rather than a written opinion that the student can scale to higher accomplishments.

THESE STUDENTS, he says, "have traditionally sailed through school using only half of their brains," and are the ones who benefit most if led higher.

In the other category, parents of children who actually have to struggle with academic demands, tend to blame the change of educational approach. In this instance, says Cook, the child's effort is often exemplary, and teachers' notes praising it help sustain it far more than would a stark record of low marks.

"But if the parents are so unhappy that they really want a child transferred out of the school," he said, "I do everything I can."

Over the 2½ years, he estimates, those who firmly wanted children out have evenly balanced with those who sought to transfer their children into the school of changing education, totaling about 15 on each side.

Red Cross Alters Blood Donor Hours

Beginning Feb. 1, new blood donor hours will be in effect on Wednesday and Thursday in the Red Cross Donor Center, 340 W. Willow St. New hours are from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The center, opened a year ago, has been operating on those two days from 2 to 6 p.m.

Monday and Tuesday hours, from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m., will remain the same.

Blood donors may now continue to donate up to age 66, under relaxed California regulations. The previous cutoff date was age 60.

"We hope the new hours will accommodate donors and blood center volunteers as well. We need them both," said Richard Codd, blood program chairman.

Mrs. Mary C. Bugbee Dies; Services Slated

Requiem mass for Mrs. Mary C. Bugbee, former resident of Long Beach, will be held Monday in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Clarendon, Tex. Entombment will be in the Bugbee family Mausoleum in Clarendon.

Mrs. Bugbee, widow of a pioneer Texas cattleman who had extensive ranch holdings in the Panhandle of Texas, lived at 2919 E. 1st St., Long Beach, from 1919 until 1942. Her father-in-law was the second white man in the Panhandle of Texas and pioneered the development of the area.

Despite her small size, Mrs. Bugbee used to delight in telling of the early ranching days "when it was nothing for us to cook breakfast for 50 ranch hands."

In 1942 Mrs. Bugbee moved to 135 E. Ralston St., San Bernardino, where she made her home with one of her three daughters, Miss Mary Isabel (Sis) Bugbee.

IN ADDITION to Miss Bugbee, the other surviving daughters are Mrs. Ethel Long of San Bernardino and Mrs. Betty Poole of South Pasadena. All three daughters received their schooling in Long Beach.

In addition to the daughters, there are five grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

U.S. to Aid U.N.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Saturday the United States has pledged $7.5 million to the United Nations Fund for Population Activities for 1970.

The population fund, established two years ago and headed by Paul Hoffman, director of the United Nations Development Fund, finances and coordinates U.N. studies and projects in the field of family planning.

School Dollar Squeeze--What's to Be Done?

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

It was a bleak week for dollar-pressed California school districts — including Long Beach.

First came reiteration from Washington that President Nixon will stand on his promise to veto a Health, Education and Welfare departmental budget that otherwise would provide Long Beach with $1 million, and $14 million to Los Angeles.

With schoolmen staggering from this blow, word came from Sacramento that efforts to aid all California districts via constitutional amendment were in trouble.

Needed are an additional 69,339 signatures to qualify for a June ballot a constitutional change that would require the state to provide an average of 50 per cent support for its schools.

"What's to be done?" is the strained question voiced in educational circles.

Prepare to reduce school programs in 1970-71? This would seem most likely in Long Beach.

Call an immediate tax election here to seek an emergency override fund? Timing is all-important, officials feel, and there is belief such an election might better be delayed.

Teacher organizations question the time factor and last week the smaller, militant American Federation of Teachers' Long Beach chapter demanded an immediate vote. There are indications, rumors, that the larger Teachers Association of Long Beach may soon move to such a position.

Wait until "they" solve all the problems in Washington and Sacramento?

A highly unlikely course, this, since educators basically are realists and it requires enormous naivete to assume today that a miracle can or will occur in the two capitals.

Of course, it's possible that proponents of the constitutional amendment can succeed in placing it on the June ballot, even in the face of an attorney general's ruling that the deadline passed last week.

And President Nixon's promised veto of HEW's $9.1 billion budgeted for education could be overridden by a two-thirds vote of both national legislative houses. Unless this or a similar step is taken, Long Beach faces loss of $1 million in aid to federally impacted area funds and as yet-undetermined amounts for compensatory education of the disadvantaged.

Nobody is holding his breath.

School officials today are tabulating results from a questionnaire distributed recently to the Long Beach district's 4,000 teaching and non-academic employes for their reactions.

Presented was a list of possible reductions which, if completely implemented, could result in saving the district about $6 million. A $4 million cut actually will be needed unless one of the "miracles" materializes.

Employes were asked their thinking as to where cuts should be imposed.

While large, significant savings can be effected only by reducing junior-senior high school days, raising class sizes in grades K-12 while reducing staff requirements, there are other areas considered for possible slashes.

BERRY STAND BEGINNINGS

Knotts Celebrate 50 Years

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

In 50 years, Walter and Cordelia Knott made it from a piece of pie to 15,000 daily dinners — each with a piece of pie.

Oddly enough, it wasn't what either of them wanted.

The fabulous story of how they beat the depression in the 20's with a roadside berry stand, which became world-famed Knott's Berry Farm, was the inspiration Saturday for a golden anniversary celebration in Buena Park.

It started with the traditional Prospectors' Day parade, to note the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill 122 years ago. It wound up with a program at the Berry Farm's Ghost Town, with Mr. and Mrs. Knott as the stars.

Their start at hosting the public was not without its problems, Knott recalled.

A depression was on, he remembered, adding that "we had to do something. We decided to set up a berry stand." That was in 1920 — on land that's now part of the Berry Farm. Soon they found customers. Seven years later, they added coffee and pie — and customers found them.

Then came the Great Depression of the late 1920's and early '30's, but instead of going under, the Knotts decided to serve chicken dinners.

She protested that "I don't want a restaurant," but she agreed to a "tea room."

"The first day we sold eight dinners, at 65 cents apiece," Knott recalled.

Those dinners were delicious — and the customers told others. The Knotts were on their way to a business that put out more

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

IS the bloom off the space program? Not a word about it was said by Pres. Nixon in his State of the Union address, which didn't ignore many important subjects.

Sure, we're going ahead on the Apollo program, but now that the mountain has been climbed, public interest has lagged enough to permit the Pres. to pass it up as a topic with hardly anybody noticing.

Meanwhile, Cong. Craig Hosmer, reporting on a survey of opinions about public issues in the local Congressional district, says that respondents were divided 50-50 to a question as to whether we should send another man to the moon.

And for a little family exercise this morning, try quickly to name the four Americans who have placed their feet on the moon, all within the last few months. We tried it and got it, but not without some headscratching. Neil Armstrong and . . . er . . .

ONE of the wild-eyed young columnists on the State College campus newspaper, defending the showing of sex films in that controversial "Social Myths" class, said they were the kind of films that might be shown "at a Kiwannis banquet."

If he was talking about Kiwanis (with one n) he has made a startling revelation. Being an old Kiwanis member, and having attended a hundred pleasantly stuffy Kiwanis banquets, I'd like to know when the sex film showings begin. So, I'm sure, would many of my fellow Kiwanians.

LITTLE do we know in how many breasts the fires of political ambitions smoulder.

Councilman Emmet Sullivan's resignation from the Sixth Dist. position in L.B. fanned embers into flames, and at this writing, a total of 17 good citizens have served notice of intention to run.

If all qualify by the deadline Tuesday, it will be one of the largest candidate fields in the history of local politics, and with a good chance that the result will be decided by a plurality rather than a majority.

If you're unfamiliar with the municipal election system, it should be pointed out that a special election to fill a vacancy on the Council is conducted only in the district represented and with no run-off. In regular elections, each of the nine districts nominates two candidates for city-wide selection.

As has happened here, when a long-tenured incumbent leaves office, it often opens a floodgate. In a county in which I used to live, the sheriff quit voluntarily after 24 years in office. Twenty-two citizens filed for an office which, time after time, had gone to him by default. Even one woman filed, which was pretty amusing in that rough-tough high-country county. (She didn't make it.)

ON the phone is a citizen of Hawaiian Gardens with a down-to-earth constitutional question.

She wants to know if it would violate some provision of the Bill of Rights if a law were passed requiring people to move their empty rubbish and garbage cans from curbsides after a collection.

She alleges her area looks terrible, with cans standing on curbs week after week. When she complained, an official told her nothing could be done about it because it would encroach on individual rights.

Wonder how that one would fare in the Burger court?

View of Plan to Revitalize L.B. Offered

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

The first city-wide presentation of the Gruen Report recommendations for revitalizing downtown Long Beach will be made Tuesday at 3 p.m. in the Elks Lodge, 4101 E. Willow St.

The meeting is open to the public on a first-come, first-served basis. No tickets or reservations are required.

Highlights of the report, which was developed over a 15-month period, will be given by Ernest Mayer Jr., city planning director, and officials of Victor Gruen Associates, which made the study.

Long Beach Chamber of Commerce and Long Beach District Board of Realtors are the cosponsors of Tuesday's meeting.

H. G. HANAWALT, chamber president, and [illegible] Krueger, president of realty board, joined in urging residents to attend the meeting to become "informed and involved in all categories of planning and decision-making that will affect the future character of our cities."

The Gruen Report recommends a multimillion dollar development of the area south of the proposed Pacific Coast Freeway, between Los Angeles River and Alamitos Avenue.

It envisions a 28-block "business core," which would include such things as a regional shopping center of 1 million square feet, an elevated train to serve the area, pedestrian malls, and extensive parking facilities.

Three major "residential neighborhoods," in which some streets would be closed to restrict traffic and make possible small parks and playgrounds, are proposed.

Adjacent to each "residential neighborhood" would be a "service area," which would include local shopping, schools, offices and related services.

The Gruen Report indicated that the entire project would represent a combined effort of government and private enterprise over a period of about 15 years.

TOTAL INVESTMENT, as seen by the Gruen planners, would involve about $500 million, of which $100 million would be public funds and the rest would come from private interests.

Wreckers Gain Delay on Building

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Auto wreckers in Carson have won temporary relief from a city ordinance that would require concrete block fences and other improvements on their property.

Long Beach Superior Court Judge Max Wisot issued an oral statement Friday which will be drafted into a formal preliminary injunction Monday. It would prohibit the city from closing or bringing criminal proceedings against auto wrecking businesses that don't comply with provisions of the ordinance.

Judge Wisot said wreckers shouldn't be required to make large improvement expenditures until the ordinance's validity is established in a trial before him next March 17.

Two auto wreckers already have spent $25,000 and $56,000, respectively, to build block walls.

The ordinance also requires auto wreckers to provide off-street parking, landscaping and, where needed, make dedications to widen streets.

Twenty of the city's 88 wrecking firms joined in a suit seeking a permanent injunction or outright over-turning of the ordinance on grounds of discrimination. They contend the ordinance doesn't require similar development by other heavily industrial firms.

Attorneys for the city and the auto wreckers will consult on exact wording of the preliminary injunction before presenting it to be issued by Judge Wisot on Monday.

I, P-T REPORTER RECEIVES AWARD

Bob Geivet, veteran Independent, Press-Telegram reporter, received the Orange County Press Club's "Sky" Dunlap Memorial Award during ceremonies Saturday night.

An estimated 350 persons attended the club's 15th annual awards banquet, held at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Geivet, a past president of the organization, was the first recipient of the Dunlap award, initiated for recognition of journalistic excellence. Dunlap died in 1968.

In all, some $1,500 in awards, representing 30 categories of competition, were presented to Orange County newsmen.

New Orange County Press Club officers were installed at the banquet. They include: Jim Duncan, president; Ray Rhoads, president-elect; Art Vinsel, vice president; Diane Reed, secretary; and Madison Burden, treasurer.

USS Fanning Is Launched

Described as "part of our alternative to war," the USS Fanning was launched Saturday by Todd Shipyards Corp. in San Pedro.

Principal remarks at the launching ceremony were made by Rep. Alphonzo E. Bell, R-Calif.

Saying that we must do more than wish for an end to wars, Bell said the Fanning was built to remind others of America's might.

"FANNING IS part of our alternative to war," Bell said. "It is my belief that she will prove an effective deterrent to those who might foolishly test our will, for our strength is great."

John T. Gilbride, Todd president, in his remarks at the launching, revealed a $20-million expansion plan for the San Pedro shipbuilding facility.

The Fanning, last of 14 destroyer escorts built by Todd under a current U.S. Navy contract, is the third ship named for Lt. Nathaniel Fanning, a Revolutionary War hero.

The newest Fanning is 438 feet long, displaces 4,000 tons fully loaded and has a top speed of 27 knots.

Mrs. Robert H. Lathrop, great-great-great granddaughter of Lt. Fanning, christened the ship.

We have only three years to save ourselves from an insidious international Communist conspiracy, a marketing professor from California State College at Long Beach told a Knotts Berry Farm audience Saturday.

Professor Charles E. Wolff told almost 100 persons at the farm's Independence Hall that the "200-year-old conspiracy" works through "so-called civil rights groups" funded by major corporation foundations.

But the conspiracy couldn't last long if it were only exposed, Wolff said.

"We've got to take an awful lot of little people who are worried about their little world and slam them right between the eyes with the truth," he said.

"We must save ourselves from this darkness of sin and sedition and anarchy," he said. "The Communists and the super rich and the conspiracy are all inter-

Press Barred as 9 Candidates 'Meet People'

Nine candidates out of 17 filing for the Sixth District vacancy on the City Council in the April 17 special election showed up before a sparse audience at a "meet the people" session at Polytechnic High School auditorium Saturday night.

Before introducing the candidates, Rev. Leon Morrisson, pastor of the First Providence Missionary Baptist Church, requested that all members of the press leave the gathering.

The meeting, arranged by the Long Beach Central Area Neighborhood Council, was attended by about 50 citizens.

Southland Mountaineer Robinson Reaches a New Peak—As an Author

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

John Robinson, a Long Beach native and now of Newport Beach, made a reputation a few years ago as the mountaineering authority on Baja California. He has tempered his active mountaineering career in favor of authorship.

The author of the mountaineers' "Baja Bible," called "Camping and Hiking in Baja California," is devoting all his spare time these days to research and writing on the mountain ranges of Southern California.

"I haven't given up on Baja, or mountaineering," the soft-spoken junior high school teacher says, "but I have become more interested in the colorful past of our mountains here in Southern California."

ROBINSON, who was born in Long Beach's old Seaside Hospital and was graduated from Fremont Elementary School, Jefferson Junior High and Wilson High School in 1947, first learned about camping and hiking at the Long Beach YMCA's now-defunct Kamp Kole.

"I find I am a member of what is becoming an exclusive organization called the 'Kamp Kolers,'" Robinson says.

"Since the old camp, which was located on the West Fork of the San Gabriel River, burned down in 1949, there aren't too many of us left."

Kamp Kole has been replaced by the YMCA's larger, more elaborate Camp Oakes in the San Bernardino Mountains.

ROBINSON attended the camp during the summers from 1939 to 1942 and developed love of mountains that he has never lost.

He joined the Sierra Club in 1955 and became active in the Sierra Peaks Section, the Desert Peaks Section and the Hundred Peaks Section, the three organizations within the club that emphasize mountain climbing, as opposed to hiking.

"I became something of a 'peak bagger,'" he says now. "It was fun but when I got married in 1959 I had to tone down on the weekends away from home."

It was about this time that he became interested in the history of the mountains he had climbed.

In 1958 Robinson climbed Picacho del Diablo (Peak of the Devil) in Baja California with the Desert Peaks Section. The mountain has since been renamed by the Mexican government. It is now called "Cerro de la Encantada" (Mountain of the Enchanted One) on all Mexican maps.

"The area was really wild then," Robinson recalls. "I was enchanted with it."

HE WENT BACK into the two Mexican national parks, the Sierra Juarez and the Sierra San Pedro Martir, numerous times and in 1965 was commissioned to write his book.

"For two years I researched the area," he says. "I made at least 20 special trips through the area to learn and chart the trails before I started to write."

The book, through three revisions, with a fourth upcoming, has built a solid foundation as THE book for the Baja mountaineer.

As a result of his painstaking work, he was asked to edit the diary of Jose Joaquin Arrillaga, an early explorer of the area. It was published by Dawson's Book Shop in Los Angeles under the title: "Jose Joaquin Arrillaga; The Diary of His Surveys of the Frontier in 1776."

HE IS NOW working on the soon-to-be-published pictorial history of the Mt. Wilson area, titled "In the Shadow of Wilson's Peak."

It will be published by Golden West Books of San Marino and will contain more than 200 pictures of the Mt. Wilson, Mt. Lowe area, including many on the old Mt. Lowe railroad.

When that one is finished Robinson has plans for books on the San Bernardino Mountains and then the San Jacintos, which should keep him busy for a while.

All this has to sandwich in with his job teaching at Davis Junior High School in Costa Mesa, where he also coaches basketball,

JOHN ROBINSON

Pageant of Masters Cast Volunteers Being Sought

If you'd like to be on stage, but would be too embarrassed to have a speaking role, perhaps the famed Pageant of the Masters at Laguna Beach is for you.

It soon will be casting time for the production, a part of the Festival of Arts, which portrays works of art in "living pictures."

A get-together for the potential cast will be Jan. 31 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Irvine Bowl, and on Feb. 1 from 2 until 5 p.m. at the same place.

Casting directors Karla Allen and June Hutter said that "it's fun. All the glamor of show business without the nerve-wracking aspects like auditioning or having to learn lines."

AT THE get-together, volunteers are measured and photographed — hopefully to "fit" them into some portrayal.

The casting directors said they will need 500 volunteers this year, because Pageant Producer Don Williamson will enact 53 works of art. They will include 35 of the most-popular of former years, by way of celebrating the pageant's 35th anniversary.

To poison air ranked with great crimes

WE HAVE BEEN looking at the opening statements of the candidates for attorney general from the viewpoint of the single issue of pollution. For too long, we think, the men in this office have been taking a narrow view of their powers in this field. The time has come when the attorney general should assume the mantle of leadership

Quite frankly, we'd like to see somebody in the office who would take a leaf from the notebook of Illinois' William Scott Jr. In the past six months, he has brought more than 200 lawsuits against polluting industries in a crusade that has attracted nationwide attention.

"What greater crime is there," he asks, "than to posion the air that people breathe?"

IN OUR PERUSAL, we've been seeking statements that had a ring to them like Scott's. The nearest at this hour seem to be those of Evelle J. Younger. He clearly sees his role as that of an activist.

"I shall actively assert the previously unused powers of the attorney general's office . . ." he said the day he announced. "The time has come to treat destruction of the environment on a par with crimes against society."

Younger also has an interesting plan for practical implementation of his "direct legal attack on the pollutors." It's the formation of an "environmental task force," a group of scientists and economists who can identify sources of pollution and serve as expert witnesses in court.

He seems to understand, too, that the attorney general, as the state's chief law enforcement officer, will set the tone for the remaining enforcement agencies in the state. He promises an "environmental quality control divison" that will study ecological developments and provide local law enforcement officers and agencies with encouragement and assistance.

ALL THE CANDIDATES will be making a mistake, we think, — if in making known their feelings on law and order — they obscure their position on the pollution issue. In the minds of many, the one is as important to the public welfare as the other.

"How much more destruction and impairment of human, animal and plant life through pollution of our air, land and water must there be before we realize we can no longer afford to do less" than wage all out war on pollution? Younger asked in his announcement.

We hope, be it he or whoever who finally assumes the attorney general's chair, that they remember that question.

Just good ol' golden rule daze

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — There is an abundance of things wrong with the way California's public schools are financially supported. About the only good thing which can be said about the problem is that it has just about gotten so bad that something is finally going to have to be done about it.

BOB SCHMIDT

The varied and circuitous routes that money takes as it travels from the taxpayer to the schools defy analysis. Fourteen pages are required in the 1969-70 Long Beach Unified School District budget just to list the different sources of income for the district.

There are federal funds coming directly from federal sources, federal funds channeled through state sources, federal funds going through local sources, regular state apportionments and special state apportionments, income from county sources and income from district sources.

And each of those broad categories is broken down into numerous subcategories. There are various formulas for various programs for various class and age groupings.

THE STATE has established that it costs at least "X" amount of dollars per child to maintain a basic education program. On top of that basic figure are the costs of numerous other programs. Some of those programs are mandated., some are optional.

There are programs for the handicapped, programs for veterans, programs emphasizing vocational training, programs for adults. There are incentives to keep class sizes down, and incentives to unify. There are school lunch programs and breakfast programs and milk programs and seemingly endless et ceteras.

Local school district officials complain that the state, for example, mandates a program, then fails to provide adequate funds to keep it going or to account for growth.

This incredibly cumbersome financing procedure is now, very simply, breaking down of its own weight.

The expenditure demands, because of inflation and the continuing population increase, have strained the present revenue sources. More youngsters mean more classrooms are needed, which cost more to build this year than last. It means more teachers and non-certificated personnel, who get paid more this year than last. It means more books, which cost more this year than last. Et cetera again.

NOT ONLY is the present system of financing schools clearly inadequate, but it permits inequities. A youngster lucky enough to be born into a family who lives in a wealthy school district has the opportunity to receive a higher quality of education than one not so lucky, simply because the wealthy district can finance more programs.

A teacher can earn more money in the Long Beach Unified School District than in the Lawndale District. He can earn more teaching in Beverly Hills than in Long Beach.

If you're a competent teacher with a family to feed, where do you go?

Predictably, there are already a number of bills concerning school financing before the state legislature. There will be more.

But the state alone can't solve the problem, because local school districts are dependent upon federal financing, too.

Financing of public schools is a federal-state-local matter. All three entities must be involved in a common search for a solution or else it will be like three carpenters individually trying to shorten the legs of a table in the dark.

One of the alternatives suggested is greater reliance on the private school. Sen. John G. Schmitz of Orange County suggests tax credits for families who send their youngsters to private schools and thereby ease the burden on public schools

But the end result, as far as the parents' pocketbook is concerned, would be the same. Schools cost money. Better schools are going to cost more money.

But maybe the public schools wouldn't cost so much if government could find a way to get the money from the taxpayer to the schools without so much of it disappearing en route.

Plight of Redmen

EDITOR:

Your editorial, "Redmen Face Many Moons of Wailing" was greatly appreciated by this (part) Indian. The neglect of Indians is indeed enormous. The injuries will not stop as long as the U.S. government persecutes and robs them as it still does.

My people, the Cherokees, were torn from their homes on the East Coast, their homes looted and burned, driven like cattle through thousands of miles of incredibly cold wintry weather, with little or no food, one out of three dying, to what is now Oklahoma, to be theirs "evermore." But "evermore" was less than 70 years, when again their homes uprooted, their land greatly reduced and parceled out. Last September, as the story forever contines, the state of Oklahoma wanted more and removed my mother's my grandmother's, my great-uncle's and aunt's bones for "progress".

A birthday present for state

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK
RALPH HINMAN JR.

WHILE OTHER California school officials relax on Lincoln's birthday, state Board of Education members will be deeply involved in one of 1970's most crucial educational policy-making sessions.

Of prime significance is the top agenda item — "Reorganization of the Board" — to be considered when President Howard Day, a Long Beach insurance broker, opens a Feb. 12 meeting in San Francisco.

Three new members will be appointed between now and then. For the first time in nearly a decade, an all-Republican board then may be sitting. But the identity of three successors to the last of Edmund G. Brown's holdover appointees remains a closely guarded secret in Sacramento.

Where does this unknown trio fit into the spectrum of contemporary Republicanism? Moderate? Conservative? Ultra-Conservative?

THIS IS THE question being pondered in statewide educational circles today. For these three will hold in their collective hand the balance of power on the state Board of Education during the coming year.

Their votes Feb. 12 can guarantee Day another term as a moderate peacemaking presiding officer or, conversely, give the post to a more conservative member should such a candidate arise.

During the past year regular board-watchers noted a small but distinct political polarization growing among supposedly non-partisan members. It was particularly noticeable during three hearings devoted to a pair of moral guidelines developed for use on all school levels.

At issue were codes developed by state Supt. Max Rafferty's protege, Dr. Edwin Klotz, and by a committee whose chairman was member Donn Moomaw, a Bel Air Presbyterian minister.

Klotz' critics claimed his guidelines would have imposed a 19th Century, Protestant-Puritan-McGuffey's Reader ethical stance on children of many racial or religious heritages.

DR. MOOMAW'S committee report — ultimately adopted by the board with few modifications— took a middle-of-the-road position, stressing the teaching of American liberty under law while leaving instruction in basic religious beliefs to home and church.

A January public hearing in Los Angeles to weigh the relative merits of Klotz vs. Moomaw almost turned into a donnybrook. Klotz' partisans screamed, hissed, booed, accused Rev. Moomaw of "sweeping Christianity out of our schools," Godlessness, Communist leanings and possibly worse.

Among the ironies overlooked: moderately conservative Dr. Moomaw is Gov. Reagan's "home pastor" in Bel Air; the governor's influential educational consultant, Dr. Alex Sheriffs, served as a member of Moomaw's committee.

The final board vote was all-but-unanimous, with but one negative tally cast—ironically enough, by outgoing liberal member Dorman Commons, first appointed by Pat Brown.

"I reluctantly must vote no," Commons said, "because (the revised guidelines) do not completely repudiate Klotz."

During heated debate, however, there seemingly was sympathy, tacit or otherwise, for the Klotz code from members Eugene N. Ragle, Dr. Thomas Harward and Henry T. Gunderson.

MEMBERS indicating favor for the Moomaw version were its author, Dr. John R. Ford and Mrs. Donald Krotz. Day, as presiding officer, maintained a completely neutral position during debate but voted for Moomaw.

The three now-departed lameducks, Commons, Dr. Miguel Montes and Mrs. Seymour Mathiesen, urged acceptance of the more moderate stance.

Rafferty, who serves as chief administrative officer to the board, remained outside the fray even when Moomaw partisans repeatedly tacked a "Rafferty-Klotz" label to the conservative guidelines.

In a postscript to the meeting, Commons' swansong as a member bitterly indicted Rafferty for "incompetence, negligence . . . and cynical (political) misuse of his non-partisan office."

Rafferty's defense was voiced by Ragle, in an equally bitter attack on Commons. The superintendent himself did not comment.

To outside observers these incidents were but straws in a coming wind. Overheated ideological feuds among fellow members of the same party could result in a paralysis of strong statewide leadership at a time when educational statesmanship is so critically needed.

The signs are present. These yet-to-be-named appointees are destined to play crucial roles far out of proportion to their actual rank as three freshmen members.

Bail denial a constitutional possibility

BOB HOUSER

BAIL REFORM, Dist. Atty. Evelle J. Younger indicated here Friday, may be the "most radical, most dramatic" facet of his campaign to become California's attorney general.

That may be wishful thinking. At this stage it seems unlikely the three other Republican candidates for Atty. Gen. Thomas Lynch's seat will wax hot for this issue as a hinge for victory. But on the off chance it is that important, Younger's stance should be recorded.

Erase the whole system, he says, and build a new one that is logical. Release on money bail today is dependent upon the economic status of the defendant. Who makes bail? The wealthy or moderately wealthy or the knowledgeable hoodlum who has salted away his rainy day bail fund. But the truck driver father of six in his first pinch with the law either can't make bail or pays an economically crippling premium for the money.

The theory that posted money assures a defendant's return is not true, Younger says. He feels a more compelling device to assure return would be making failure to return a separate crime.

A judge should be able to deny bail completely — despite the letter of the Constitution — in cases where the defendant may return to crime or where his own safety is at stake.

Younger's examples: A man tries to kill his wife, fails but promises to finish the job when he's free. Or an assassin like Sirhan Sirhan whose life might be taken if he were released.

Those charged with such offenses as rioting and child molesting could be released on their own recognizance but the judge should be able to set strict conditions regulating defendants' movements during that release. Violation of conditions would be a separate felony for which a mandatory consecutive sentence should be added to whatever penalty is assessed for the original crime.

YOUNGER POINTS out that the U.S. Constitution says that "excessive bail shall not be required." But under our present system the only thing a court can do to keep the would be wife killer in custody is to set bail at an impossibly high figure.

"There are situations," he said, "in which it is just not realistic to set bail on a certain defendant."

Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., has a bill pending which aims to solve the problem at the federal level. Younger said experts agree that the remedy is available with such legislation and would not be violative of the Constitution. "All this bill would say is that in certain circumstances, and on a proper showing, 'no bail' would not be excessive."

California's Constitution, in Younger's view, "seems to say that a person has an absolute right to bail except in capital cases. To this extent California's Constitution provision seems to be more restrictive or more protective of the arrestee than does the U.S. Constitution.

"WHATEVER THE device requires, whether it be a simple legislative enactment or amendment to the Constitution of the State of California, we must have such a procedure for our state."

Younger has proposed two other pieces of legislation with high priority in his campaign talks. One would legalize wire tapping and bugging at the state level as is now the case at the federal level. Another would legalize court issuance of search warrants by telephone.

We have a Western White House

LOVELY SPANISH STYLE WESTERN WHITE HOUSE OVERLOOKS PACIFIC OCEAN FROM SAN CLEMENTE HILLSIDE.

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN
Women's Editor

"Look, enjoy, but DON'T reproduce the pictures was the disappointing word given a roomful of reporters who gathered at Los Angeles Home Furnishings Mart for a program on "The Decorating Key to the Western White House."

Disappointing, because there's something inherent in all of us that likes to peek into the private lives of noted personalities, and then share with the world—both pictorially and in the written word.

So the beautiful illustrations of the most famous home in San Clemente which appear in the current issue of Architectural Digest can only be seen if you beg, buy or borrow a copy of the magazine.

Personally, I found the Western White House pictures warm, friendly and inviting.

Mrs. Richard Nixon's love of yellow shows up all over.

It predominates, combined with gold on walls and beamed ceiling, in sinkable cushioned furniture in the living room (the fabric is duplicated in draperies) and in gold carpeting.

It reappears in a gay floral print combined with orange, blue and shades of green in chair and ottoman, drapes and bedspread in her bedroom.

The sunny influence is felt in Tricia's bedroom where a white background floral print is used in draperies, bedspread and one wall, and in the guest house, most frequently used by David and Julie Eisenhower.

The President's bedroom veers from gold other than in wall covering and beamed ceiling, with use of a red and white geometric print.

ART OBJECTS reflecting the Nixon years in public office abound throughout. Occupying a place of honor on the fireplace mantle in the living room is an exquisite gold filigree box, a gift to then-Vice President Nixon from Emperor Haile Selassie.

Another memento is a grouping of ivory carvings gathered from various countries in the Orient during visits there. A replica of the plaque placed on the moon when the first astronauts landed last July, hangs in the President's study.

The entire house was redone by the decorating firm of Cannell & Chaffin, and on hand to explain the project was the firm's president, Joseph K. Cannell.

"The first question I'm always asked," he said, "is how we got the contract.

"It began with a telephone call from Mr. Nixon's attorney whose home we had recently done in Corona del Mar, asking if we would be interested in doing the Western White House.

"Would we!

"We first visited the house on Saturday in early May and were met by the daughter of the then-owners who assured us the Nixons wanted to retain the home as it was—dark beamed ceilings, furnishings of 1927 Grand Rapids Spanish."

In due course, an appointment was made with Mrs. Nixon, and not quite knowing how to proceed, he said a carful of samples was collected and they met in San Clemente in early June.

Spirits of the design team soared, said Cannell, when Mrs. Nixon informed them she wanted the house to be light, airy, fresh, colorful, gay and informal.

"Do you want this Spanish?" we asked.

She favored country fresh furniture and painted surfaces.

"How about the low, dark beamed ceilings? Would you like them painted out to the color of the walls?"

"Wonderful," she commented.

From time to time, Cannell continued, the President would pop into the room to chat or comment, "that's great."

Finally, all was done that could be done on that visit, and next followed a visit by Mrs. Nixon to their design firm.

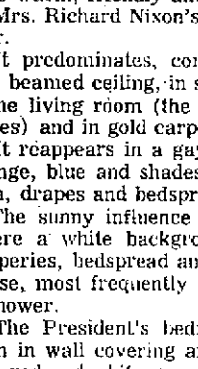

"This was an experience in itself," said Cannell, noting that for each member of the First Family (Mrs. Nixon was joined by her daughters on the visit) there also was a Security Officer.

"We spent five hours going over floor plans, selecting pieces of furniture, and figuring where we could utilize the personal things they were sending from their New York apartment.

From that point on, Mrs. Nixon was kept aware of progress via telephone ("it's amazing—you can reach her any place, any time, through the Signal Corps") and by pen and ink sketches sent to her.

Target date for completion of the home was Aug. 1, which, with a starting date on the home's interior of July 8, would have been impossible, said Cannell, without the complete cooperation of sup-

OLD GOVERNOR'S MANSION TOWERS ABOVE BUSINESS COMMUNITY IN SACRAMENTO

...so how about a governor's mansion?

By JUDY HAZLETT
Home Furnishings Editor

"The next governor may not be so willing to pay his own rent."

Mrs. Ronald Reagan smiled as she quipped with Home Furnishings Editors at the Los Angeles Furniture Mart about the need for a new governor's mansion for California.

After a variety of nerve-wracking experiences in the 92-year-old Victorian-style mansion located in downtown Sacramento, Mrs. Reagan and the governor took matters into their own hands. They moved out.

They moved into the mansion following his inauguration Jan. 1, 1967, and left three months later.

"I had never seen the house before we moved in," Mrs. Reagan said, ". . . and I had no idea it hadn't been kept up." (The State Fire Marshal first declared the mansion a fire hazard in 1941.)

"I called contractors to see about having it painted," she said. "They all told me the wood was too rotten and it would be a waste of time."

As she further described the old structure (built in 1877), Mrs. Reagan recalled their occupancy with a humorous outlook.

"The mansion has many drawbacks — including a motel across the street and service stations (one including a body-fender repair shop) on the other two corners surrounding the home.

"In fact," she said, "several dinner parties were interrupted while diesel trucks changed gears outside the window of the dining room. Ever try talking over that?" she asked with a laugh.

MRS. REAGAN WENT on to explain that as a mother she must first think of the welfare of her children. In such an area, their young son had no chance for playmates since there are no other homes in the vicinity.

The final straw came one night when Mrs. Reagan and her son were in the home alone.

"A fire alarm went off somewhere in the house," she said, "so I grabbed Skipper's arm and we ran for the front yard.

"When the firemen arrived I asked one of them how I should tell an 8-year-old the proper way to get out of his third-floor bedroom in case of a bad fire," she explained.

"He told me to have Skipper take one of the drawers from his dresser, walk to the far side of the room and with the drawer held in front of him

L. A. C. SAYS

A cause for pride in W. Europe and U.S.

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

AS OUR ECONOMY slows down under impact of the efforts to curb inflation it is comforting to realize how very well we have progressed and overcome previous periods when much the same conditions prevailed. It is comforting to view the splendid recovery in Western Europe from conditions far more dangerous than any we have had over the past third of a century.

The news of prosperity in the major countries of Western Europe should remind us that unless we take as courageous actions as they did we may suffer a much more serious recession than is necessary. It could have a much greater impact on the world economy because of our greatness. We have a population of about 204 million compared with a total of about 219 million in West Germany, France, Britain and Italy. But our gross national product (total value of all goods and services) is more than double that of these four great nations and more than that of all the Communist nations.

IT SHOULD BE interesting to the reader to compare the figures given in an article in the Arizona Republic. It should cause support for the President in his efforts to retard the inflation we are suffering or we will not only end in a serious recession here but severely affect the economy of our friends. It should be remembered our 1929-1930s depression came after European nations had been suffering from similar depressions. Some of the contrasts are given as follows:

The French mass circulation weekly, Paris Match, recently published interesting and encouraging figures on the growing economy of West Europe. The major West European states — West Germany, France, Britain and Italy — are still considerably behind the development level of the U.S. But they have progressed enormously in the past few years, and West Europe can now be considered one of the most prosperous areas of the world.

West Europe's giant is West Germany, whose gross national product exceeds $125 billion a year. France comes next with $115 billion, followed by Britain with $110 billion, and Italy with $74 billion. West Germany's population, however, is nearly 60 million, while the population of France is 51 million, of Britain 56 million, and of Italy 52 million. (Comparative figures for the U.S.A.: population 204 million, GNP — over $900 billion.)

FRANCE HOLDS the first place in passenger cars — over 13.5 million, followed by Britain — 13 million; West Germany — 12.5 million; and Italy — 9 million. Britain is first in TV sets — nearly 15 million, followed by West Germany — 13.5 million, France — 8 million, and Italy — 7.5 million.

Britain is also first in telephones — 12 million, followed by West Germany — 10 million, Italy — 7 million, and France — 6.5 million. (Comparative figures for the U.S.A.: autos — 102 million, TV sets—78 million, telephones — 101 million.)

These European figures are even more impressive when we recall that West Europe was a disaster area some 25 years ago. Italy and Germany were defeated countries whose economies lay in utter ruin. France, though on the side of the victors, hardly fared any better. Britain, once the proud leader of an empire, faced enormous post-war economic difficulties and seemed destined for bankruptcy.

The United States played a very important part in the economic recovery of all these nations. U.S. economic assistance, channeled first through the Marshall Plan, put West Europe on its feet and built the groundwork which made her economic progress possible.

Today when pessimists and gloomlovers talk only of the failures of U.S. foreign policy, it is well to remind them of the U.S. record in West Europe during the past 25 years. It is a proud record of really splendid achievements, rarely equalled in the history of nations.

Who cares for child if mom works?

WHEN THE NIXON Administration unveiled its package of welfare reforms last August, it indirectly focused on a problem that is certain to get a bundle of attention in the 1970s: the growing need for child care centers in the United States.

Not since the Second World War, when hundreds of thousands of women enlisted in the war effort and trooped off to defense factories, has the problem of working mothers and the care of their children taken on such an overriding sense of urgency.

Today there are upwards of 11 million working mothers in the country —or almost 40 per cent of all the women now working. And it is generally agreed by child care and nursery school experts that present facilities aren't meeting the needs of an overwhelming number of them—not to mention the needs of those mothers who would gladly go to work if child centers were available at tolerable prices.

The Los Angeles city school system, for example, now serves 5,000 children in its extended day care centers. Those on its waiting lists number 12,000.

IN LONG BEACH, the Unified School District runs 19 state-supported children's centers for more than 1,100 youngsters. And while the city appears to be in better shape than Los Angeles, officials like Mrs. Helen L. Rose, supervisor of early childhood education for the district, acknowledge that many more families would use them if the families could qualify under the program and additional centers were operating.

Long Beach's centers are part of a unique network of state centers. In fact, California is the only state in the union that operates a day care program through its school system.

The program was established—and originally financed—by the federal government in 1943 as a war measure, but "was continued after 1945 (in California) because of the still-existing need for women in the labor force," according to Theresa S. Mahler of the California Children's Centers Directors and Supervisors Assn.

IT IS NOW RUN by the state's 82 school districts and serves 21,000 youngsters in 347 centers. The state pays 75 per cent of the cost of operating the system—or $11 million—while the parents ante up an extra $4 million on the basis of their ability to pay.

Gradually, the centers have become more than baby-sitting facilities. They now offer an instructional experience that makes them, in effect, an extension of the schools. Today, because their fees are tied to the parents' incomes, they provide a vital service to thousands of families that cannot afford private schools.

Yet the fact that the program is designed primarily for low-income families and a few "exempt" categories, such as teachers, migrant farm workers and nurses, indicates how narrow its base is. At best, only a small portion is served.

To further limit its reach, the program takes only children over two. Yet thousands of women with children under two both desire and need employment, according to George Toll, former employment service manager in Long Beach, who believes the exclusion of younger tots from most nursery schools is a major contributor to female unemployment and the welfare problem.

UNTIL RECENTLY, children whose parents worked in industries "essential to the mobilization effort" —a throwback to the war—were eligible for the schools' day care program. But the "defense" category was dropped from the eligibility list two months ago, forcing a number of families, including 18 in Long Beach, off the program. Their places are being filled by welfare mothers being trained for jobs in what is known as the WIN program—or Work Incentive Program, a federally financed effort run by the State Human Resources agency.

Opening the program to more welfare mothers is a step in the right direction. The trouble is, it looks too much like a final step. There's nothing to indicate that the state intends to open the program to more of the poor, let alone those thousands of families who, living on the shaky margins of the middle class, can neither qualify for the program nor afford private alternatives.

Some of the mothers in those families may, if they're lucky and can afford them, have babysitters—although sitters can hardly offer children the same creative opportunities that a good children's center can.

The rest, along with their husbands (if they have them), must continue to struggle desperately to make ends meet. Worse yet, many of them must bear the psychological burden of a way of life—domesticity—that increasing numbers of them are finding empty and unsatisfying.

CALIFORNIA SHOULD BE credited for keeping and strengthening the wartime system of child care centers. But the fact remains that its policies fall far short of meeting the state's human and social requirements in a field that not only demands a greater commitment of resources, but some fresh perspectives as well.

In a way, President Nixon's plan to create more publicly supported day care centers for welfare mothers who want to work is merely an extension of the California system. As such, it reveals the same inherent paradoxes. Unless the federal government, for example, creates more real job opportunities in an economy that seems perpetually plagued by unemployment, the training of more workers can hardly serve a useful or humanitarian purpose. That way lies more bitterness, not less.

Morevoer, unless the administration program is a massive one, it is sure to exaggerate the plight of large segments of the poor and middle class that won't be able to qualify for it.

SOMEHOW, THE NATION is going to have to accommodate itself to growing numbers of working mothers (unless, of course, we begin to accept the concept of leisure and income maintenance on a large scale).

It won't be only economic pressure that forces many of the mothers onto the job market—although that will remain a powerful factor. It will be the dawning realization by many of them that life's creative possibilities lie outside the home, not in it. For some, it will be the growing conviction that housework and child rearing have become a form of enslavement.

There is obviously a social revolution afoot among women. Perhaps its anger and content were best expressed by writer Susan Sutheim in a recent article for Motive magazine, a publication of the United Methodist Church.

"We are half of mankind," wrote Miss Sutheim. "We are 53 per cent of America. We've been pinched and repressed and distorted in a thousand ways for a thousand years and more. Tap that sublimated and misdirected energy, and something's going to happen. Is happening."

Assuming Miss Sutheim is correct —and many think she is—there's little question that the pressure for public day care centers and nurseries will continue to build. The question is whether the nation will respond now to the pressure, or wait until it explodes in another one of those social crises that seem to be a hallmark of our time.

A jungle wallah at last oasis

MY FAVORITE weekly newspaper, the late Rosalie Ripsaw, used to be filled with items like the following:

"Irma Heinrich spent Saturday at the Ed Thomas home at Walthill. Mrs. Ed (Gracie Schmidt) is her aunt on her mother's side."

And, in the same edition:

"Mrs. Ed Thomas (Gracie Schmidt) of Walthill visited here Monday at the home of her niece, Irma Heinrich."

Like the Rosalie Ripsaw this column brings you News From All Over. Recently we talked about prohibition in the U.S. As part of our neighborhood news service we report today on prohibition in India.

India started drying up in 1957. The laws work little hardship on tourists. You can get a jug of wine or spirits if you are of drinking age. In India that's 16. However, since public drinking is discouraged you can no longer order a cocktail while watching a movie. This means that the Plaza Theater in New Delhi is no longer the golden oasis treasured by the jungle wallahs of World War II.

YOU DO NOT KNOW about wallahs? In the north of India wallah is the term of a huckster of goods or services. Its fine flexibility endeared it to American soldiers in 1943-'45 and they added it to their slang, which at Rear Echelon Hq. of the China-Burma-India Theater became a jabberwocky of Hindustani, Brooklynese, Lower Alabamaian and Upper Kansan. An officer was a brass wallah, an Anglo-Indian date was a love wallah and in one happy instance a young clerk from the state of Washington became a Walla Walla wallah.

Jungle wallah was a derisive term for the typewriter commando. The farther he was from the jungle the more jungly he tried to appear. His uniform was standardized — suntan trousers and blouse, crisp bush jacket, topee, sun-glasses and soft boots empurpled with native dye like Little Black Sambo's.

The open neck of the blouse reeked with mosquito repellent as the Rear Echelon file clerk set forth after evening chow, jingling with silver 8-anna pieces and pointing for the Plaza Theater on the far side of Connaught Circus. If the evening was hot as usual the specimen paused in front of Davico's Restaurant and whistled for a tonga. The two-wheeled vehicle was drawn by a skeleton pony under the whiplash of a tonga wallah twisting an ingratiating smile around a wispy mustache.

AT THE PLAZA THEATER our hero alighted in two pieces. He awarded the driver a one-anna (two-cent) tip, brushed off shrill protests, stode into the modernistic lobby and queued up to reserve a two-rupee seat. The double bill might be "The Palm Beach Story" and "Reveille With Beverly." Or "Tortilla Flat" and "Reveille With Beverly." Ann Miller danced in "Reveille." Indian theater managers were convinced that bare-legged dancing outside the seraglio was indecent and, therefore, just what the Yanks wanted.

After pocketing his ticket the jungle wallah looked at his post exchange watch. It was 6:10 and that meant 50 minutes to kill. The place to kill them was the air-conditioned bar. Due to rationing, no liquor was sold until 6:30. The white-turbaned, black-mustached waiter shuffled his naked feet while Sahib made a reluctant choice among lime, lemon or orange squash (pop) and Vimto. Vimto sounded like a restorative of powers sapped by the sub-tropics, but proved a murky grape phosphate with a sneaky, bitter after-taste. At 6:30 Vimto yielded to Tom Collins. Two double-Toms knocked hell out of a 5-rupee note. They tasted like carnival lemonade laced with fusel oil. After 19 months in India they tasted good.

SHARP ON 7 the curtain went up. Sahib lingered over his Collins, hoping to avoid the 50 or 60 violently tinted advertising slides which preceded the newsreel. When at last he lurched into his appointed seat the slides were still running the gamut from Rajah's Perfumed Castor Oil ("for Mem-Sahib's hair") to Ram Ghopal's Piggery.

The British Paramount News was travel-worn. It was June in New Delhi, but one of the scenes pictured GI's attending Thanksgiving services in Westminster Abbey. Opening with a fierce American eagle, United News brought the Pacific campaign up to Eniwetok. Indian News Parade showed a Sikh festival, grain rationing in Bombay, a cannon chopping up a hill in Burma, and one Japanese prisoner.

After that "Tortilla Flat" started to unreel and somehow became jumbled with "Reveille With Beverly." (Indian film operators had only the vaguest notion of proper sequence in foreign films). Indeed, at one point Akim Tamiroff exited from Mr. Steinbeck's movie and brazenly materialized in "Reveille," leering at Beverly.

THIS MISHMASH disturbed our jungle wallah only slightly. Lounging in a leather-cushioned chair, he was fortified by the recurrent sluff-sluff of the barefoot booze wallah, bearing fresh fusel.

When the lights went up, a trailer made in 1937 portrayed the King and Queen while "God Save the King" scratched off the sound-track. This forced the soggy clerk up on the heels of his purple boots.

He staggered out into a tonga and sang broken pieces of "Bless 'em All" as he was jolted back to the barracks. In the gloaming (an Indian mid-summer evening can gloam clear up to 9:30) the horse looked like twin xylophones mounted on a mechanized step-ladder.

Chivalrous VCCers save gals from golf raincheck

By PAT McDONNELL

TALK ABOUT CHIVALRY . . . fellows at Virginia Country Club really played Sir Galahad when they made the ultimate in concessions by permitting distaffers on the fairways on a Saturday morn. The girls had been rained out day before while playing final 36 holes in WSCGA tournament. Crisis arose over finalist Mary Elizabeth Shea's golf date in Florida the following Monday.

Either Mary would have to lose by default or miss out on Florida match. Gallant VCCers came to the rescue and 22-year-old Mary won the contest.

Three-day tournament attracted 150 of the Southland's finest women golfers . . . all of whom were good sports about swinging and trudging through the mud. VCCers qualifying were Joan Bescos, Beverly Hallmeyer, Liz MacKenzie, Faye Dallas, Liz Wallace, Judy Elik, Lou Walters and Margaret Wallace.

Ingenious gals who galleried defied the ooze and wet by wrapping their shoes in plastic baggies. Storm didn't dampen enthusiasm of golf buffs who congratulated chairman Ann Wood on one of club's most successful endeavors.

CIVIC LIGHT OPERA boosters didn't need to see forever . . . only just as far as Ocean Avenue site of company party given in sprawling Spanish home of Katy Brandts. More than 50 members of cast and crew from "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever" gathered for fest which CLO traditionally stages at close of each production.

Highlight was viewing video tapes taken on dress rehearsal night. Getting a chance to see how they look on TV were Carolyn Thomson (escorted by Buddy Doyle), Norm Russell, Glenn Bradley and Claire Carlson. Plaudits were offered Cathy Cords for her layout work on the program and to technical director Allen Mitchell. Others partaking of scrumptuous smorgasbord were John Coy, Rosemary Robedee, James and Frances Sidford, Joan Boelter and Kathy Berry.

PERFECT PRELUDE to Huntington Harbour Yacht Club's installation banquet was cocktail party in H.H. home of outgoing commodore Robert Halfer and wife Mildred. As hostess greeted more than 60 arrivals, she presented an arresting study in black sheer wool — a rhinestone sunburst sole accent on the long-sleeved gown.

Receiving congratulations were HYCC's new commodore Allen Fitzpatrick and his wife Freda and vice commodore Jerry Olson and wife Audrae. Long Beach Yacht Clubbers on hand were Commodore Don and Rosemary Leedom and Bill and Caroline Hardcastle.

SPELLING HAS never been a particular bug-a-boo for Naomi Chandler . . . that is until she made the boo-boo of misspelling name of reservations chairman for Assistance League's third annual Gourmet Series. Naomi is publicity chairman for the five Monday programs featuring demonstrations by chefs of outstanding Southland restaurants.

So imagine Naomi's embarrassment when she submitted information to the I, P-T and inadvertently misspelled name of reservations contact. For the benefit of readers who've had difficulty tracking down reservations chairman in the phone book, her correct name is Mrs. Norman Jacque, 3930 California Ave.

Happy gourmeting, gals.

HEARTS 'N' FLOWERS abounded in Assistance League Clubhouse Friday when Marjorie Dougherty and Ruth Anderson Graham entertained four dozen plus friends at a valentine-themed luncheon. Manola Smith and Zita Remley assisted at gala whee where red and gold carnation floral arrangements were presented each guest.

In keeping with the seasonal motif, Marjorie wore an A-line red silk frock and dressy coat fashioned from gold brocade fabric she purchased in Peking. Ruth turned the tables — colorwise — by wearing a gold dress with red silk coat.

EVERYONE ENJOYS a celebration and if Robert (Spi) Spicer kinda overdoes it today it will be understandable . . . what with four-way aspects of event.

Today is not only Spi's birthday but his and wife Della's 23rd wedding anniversary AND 48th wedding date of his parents, Robert and Amy Ramsay.

Celebration takes on a fourth dimension when you add to it the wedding anniversary of Spi's brother-in-law and wife, Bob and Lee Halter, who are marking seventh date since they said "I do."

Each year the three couples get together to celebrate the 25th — one year they flew to Las Vegas — today they'll dine at the Velvet Turtle after cocktails in 832 Cedar Ave., home of Robert and Amy, who, incidentally, were married in same house in 1922.

THERE WAS A HOUSEFUL of Lindas Saturday when Don and Linda Dyer threw a couples-type bridal shower for Linda Scarfo and Dexter Dyer who will make that center-aisle walk Saturday. Two score couples gathered beforehand at Don and Linda's Stanley Place address to surprise engaged pair who were anticipating a quiet dinner-for-four.

Matron-of-honor-to-be, Linda Commeau, and husband Tom and Linda and John Sumpter were among those voicing a rousing cheer of welcome. Also joining in fest were Evelyn Gruchow and prospective bridegroom's parents, Jack and Shirley Dyer of Lynwood. Bride-elect's clan was represented by her father, Philip Scarfo of Yucaipa, and sister and brother-in-law, Arlene and Bob Kemis.

Escalante, Becker vows read in home

Marian Escalante exchanged nuptial vows with Dale Becker of South Gate during a ceremony Saturday evening in the home of her father, Conrad J. Escalante, 852 E. Ocean Blvd. The bride is also the daughter of Mrs. William Stokes of China Lake.

For her marriage to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Henry Becker of South Gate, the bride chose a formal colonial gown of white peau de soie featuring lace appliqued Victorian collar and cuffs.

Mrs. Samuel Santangelo was matron of honor and bridesmaids included Patricia Mooney, Leila Cunningham, Penelope Jacobs and the bride's sister, Diane Escalante. Mary Ann and Joseph Escalante, sister and brother of the bride, were flower girl and ring bearer.

Herbert Stout performed best man duties and 300 guests were ushered by Steve Pezman, Danny Callahan, Joel Faucetta and Chuck Linnen.

The new Mrs. Becker is a graduate of Western High School, Anaheim, and Long Beach City College. Her husband, an alumnus of Pius X High, Downey, attended California State College, Long Beach.

MRS. DALE BECKER

A dinner reception was held at the Pacific Coast Club following the ceremony. The newlyweds will reside in Seal Beach.

ROME DESIGNER ON FOOD KICK

Pea pods, chicken parts, key collection

By GLORIA EMERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

ROME — The least forgettable number in the Italian spring-summer couture shows last week might just be the long white evening dress splattered with a fried egg design. If it is not that one, the runner-up could be the long dress whose print is raw chicken parts, or the ankle-length black party dress with the pasta print.

The dresses are the newest darlings of the American expatriate Ken Scott, who about 14 years ago moved to Milan, where he dreamed up some of the prettiest prints Americans ever saw. Those days of doing gorgeous flowers in bright colors are over: The new Ken Scotts are all about food.

Typical of the new Ken Scott mood is a short white dress with the chest dominated by the tips of asparagus while the spears run down the skirt. Pineapple, strawberries, cherries, pods bursting open with peas, the ice cream called cassata, which has several flavors in one portion, and even slices of salami make up other prints.

Although the designer has a restaurant in Milan, he says the clothes were not dreamed up in the kitchen.

While Ken Scott's clothes are alive with wit or whimsey, no one, least of all him, thinks that his prints of fried eggs or chicken parts will live forever in the minds of men. His whole approach to fashion, which may be a typically American one these days, is flip and funny. But the Italian designers have become increasingly solemn, it seems. Without accepting the fact most women these days are taking themselves much less seriously.

CRITICS OF the couture collections here say it has been a long time since Rome couture seemed so winded and quite so weary. The long skirts most designers showed was one reason, most of them looked as if panic-stricken men had dropped them the day before they were shown.

An exception was the Antonelli collection this week, whose designer Silvano Malta dropped hems 12 inches from the ground (including heels). What made Silvano's long, close-to-the-body softer silhouettes shine was his own conviction about this look. It is pure 1938, he said today, even if all those little cloche hats come from the decade before.

Roberta Schultz to wed Harvard law student

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schultz entertained at a family party in their Long Beach home to reveal the betrothal of their daughter, Roberta Deane, to David Benor, son of Dr. Ethel Benor of Los Angeles and Leon Benor of Jerusalem.

The bride-to-be, a senior at UCLA, is a graduate of Dominguez High School where she was voted outstanding senior and was editor-in-chief of the school newspaper.

Her fiance was graduated cum laude from UCLA where he was president of the Pre-Law Society. Now in his first year at Harvard Law School, he is affiliated with Phi Beta Kappa and Pi Sigma Alpha.

Hospital Goes to the Patient

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Firemen are taking the hospital to the heart-attack patient in the Torrance area.

They're putting into practice a new concept in salvaging lives — one that may save lives that would be lost under traditional emergency care.

The pilot project is being conducted by Fire Station 50 of the Los Angeles County Fire Department. Specially trained firemen there are working out of Harbor General Hospital.

They operate in a five-mile radius of the hospital, wearing white coats in place of the traditional Fire Department blues. With them in their special mobile unit — a station wagon — go stethoscopes, an electrocardiograph (heart-action monitoring device), and respiratory-assistance equipment. A registered nurse is also a part of the team.

THEIR MISSION: Salvage heart-attack patients who currently would not make it to the hospital.

Richard Houts, Los Angeles County fire chief, assigned six firemen, all with rescue squad experience, to a special course at Harbor General. They were given 100 hours of training.

Assigned in pairs, firefighters accompanied doctors on daily patient visits. They took blood pressures, read electrocardiograms.

There were classroom sessions, too, with doctor lecturers. They learned a vocabulary of 200 medical terms, for one thing. Finally they took a test, with questions such as this: "If the R wave in lead III is taller than the R wave in lead II, is left axis deviation present?"

Dr. J. Michael Criley, chief of cardiology at Harbor General, says firemen in the original training group did as well or better than registered nurses in the cardiac-care examination that followed the course.

When the special team arrives at the scene of a suspected heart attack, the firemen and the registered nurse immediately place small metal leads onto the patient and radio heart information to a doctor in the hospital's heart unit. The doctor radios back information and instructions to the scene.

The doctor may tell the special squad to increase oxygen, administer certain drugs, start closed-chest heart massage or "defibrillate" the heart. (Fibrillation is life-threatening abnormal heart action, and defibrillation is administration of electric shock to restore normal heart beat.)

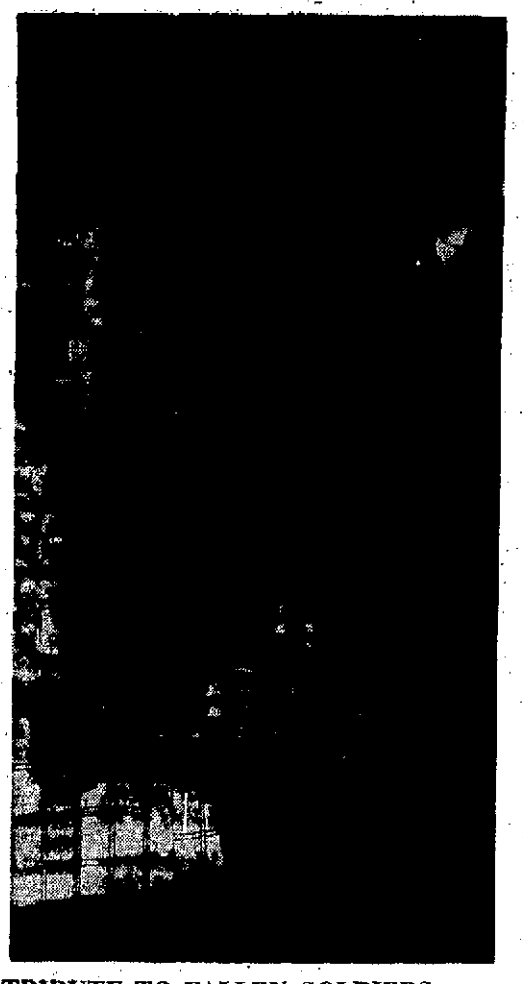

A CONVENTIONAL fire rescue squad goes on every call, and if it arrives prior to the heart care unit, it starts resuscitation or gives first aid.

If the patient is to be taken to the hospital, he is placed in an ambulance along with the specialized equipment. A fireman and nurse accompany the patient on the ambulance trip.

At the hospital, normal emergency admitting procedures are bypassed, and the patient is taken directly to the cardiac care unit.

Dr. Criley says that at least two heart-attack patients cared for by the special crew might not had lived had it not been for one-the-scene procedures.

So far, the special crew has been able to reach a patient's home on an average of 4.6 minutes. Sixty per cent of all deaths from heart attack occur within one hour of onset of the attack.

TRIBUTE TO FALLEN SOLDIERS

Torrance residents paused Saturday to pay tribute to their war dead, as with the assistance of lawmakers, units from Fort MacArthur and the Junior Woman's Club a memorial plaque was dedicated to those Torrance men killed in Vietnam. Accepting the plaque are Mrs. Aram Hovanisian, club Americanism co-chairman, and Carl Backlund, Torrance postmaster. —Staff Photo

3,000 See L.B. Rock Concert

A moderately-sized but highly-appreciative audience applauded, yelled and danced in the aisles as four rock groups played in concert at Long Beach Arena Saturday night.

Profits from the concert — small if realized — were scheduled to aid the Long Beach Free Clinic.

The concert featured Sweetwater, Taj Mahal, Eric Burdon and War, and Frantic.

The show marked the Long Beach debut for Burdon in his first group appearance here since leaving the Animals; War consists of seven instrumentalists and their backing of Burdon was one of the highlights of the show.

Box office count for the show was 3,062. No dollar count or profit statement was immediately available.

The crowd stayed late to hear the last selections by Sweetwater, the final act.

Long Beach police, mindful of the massive traffic jam which followed the Simon and Garfunkle concert here in December, were appreciative that the crowd wasn't larger.

3 Beacon Street Contracts Get OK

Three contracts for architectural design and engineering services in San Pedro's Beacon Street Redevelopment Project have been approved by the Los Angeles Community Redevelopment Agency

The contracts — totaling $88,500 — involve two private firms and the Los Angeles city engineering department.

PLANNERS HALT EXPANSION

Junkyard Plea Denied

The Planning Commission has refused to grant a special permit to cover expanded operations of a junkyard at 3710 E. Fountain St.

Commissioners cited city regulations adopted in 1949 which prohibit any new junkyards in the city, or the expansion of any existing yard.

The permit was sought by Jack Tankard, who established the junkyard on Fountain Street in 1937. At that time, it was a permitted use in the M-2 industrial zone.

In 1950, following a major fire at the yard, Tankard was issued a special permit to continue operations on the same scale.

Last Oct. 24, the Building Department revoked the special permit, contending Tankard had not complied with conditions established in the permit.

Tankard appealed to the City Council. He was granted "a reasonable time" to comply, and also told to seek a special permit from the Planning Commission to cover property being used by the yard in excess of his original permit.

Attorney Robert M. Devitt, representing Tankard, told the Planning Commission Thursday the refusal to approve the expanded use would be an "unreasonable abridgement" of his property right.

Commission Chairman W. Robert Pierce noted that Devitt had not made reference to the 1949 law prohibiting junkyards, and asked him to "speak directly to this point."

Devitt contended there had been "no true expansion" of the yard. He said the volume of business actually had declined, but that Tankard was using the added land to provide better storage of his materials.

Several property owners in the area filed written protests, and Thomas B. Coleman, 1361 Euclid Ave., appeared to object to the permit.

Coleman said old homes are being removed and the area upgraded.

"He's had 21 years to change that location," commented Commissioner Arnold B. Berg. "He knew it was a prohibitied use, but he has expanded it."

Commissioner Weckford Morgan noted that Tankard has "doubled the size of the yard" since his original permit.

than 700,000 dinners last year.

Knott's pet project was Ghost Town, which they started on a modest scale in 1940. It now dominates the place — and is as well known as the Berry Farm itself.

When Disneyland came along, Knott remembered, "our complacency was gone."

"He built more in one year than we did in 15," Knott explained.

The Knotts were special guests of the late Walt Disney when the Anaheim Magic Kingdom opened in 1957. And they were as bug-eyed about it as any other tourist.

With so many people at Disneyland, they hurried back to Buena Park to look after their own place —and found it crowded.

"Didneyland didn't hurt us," Knott explained. "It has been a big help; we hope we've helped them, too."

"That place showed us that people want more entertainment. That's what we decided to do; we've been at it ever since."

locked to take away our freedom. But we can stop them if we can get the message out."

His comments came at the end of a daylong seminar on "Americanism" during which he rambled over a wide range of topics from schools to government to economics.

His audience, including both students and elderly persons, was generally enthusiastic.

HE TRACED the upheavals in American society to "the conspiracy" — which he often referred to as "them."

He denounced President Richard M. Nixon as one more in a long line of presidents since Franklin D. Roosevelt who were either tools or members of the conspiracy.

"Politics is a waste of time today," he said. "What good is a choice of Tweedle Dick and Tweedle Humphrey?"

Wolff, who owns a business consulting service, said that "we have to get out political leaders to talk about total victory" in foreign affairs.

"If there were just an outside signal, 99 per cent of the people in Communist countries would rise up and kill the 1 per cent that oppress them," he said. He said such a signal would be given if "the U.S. ever took an anti-Communist stand."

Low, low prices on our best wide 4-ply polyester cord tire

Vanderbilt Premium†V-120 V.I.P. 36 month guarantee*

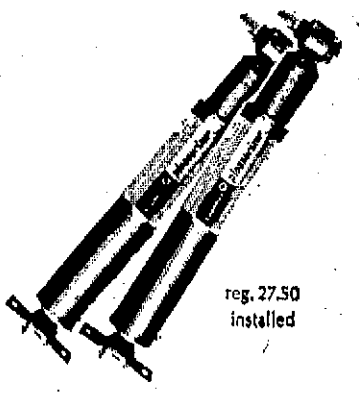

*Every Vanderbilt Tire is guaranteed for the life of the original tread, against manufacturing defects and workmanship, and against all failures from road hazards. If tire fails, we will—at our option—repair it at no cost, or in exchange for a new tire, charge only for the tread used. The amount charged will be on a pro-rata basis against the current selling price at time of adjustment plus Federal Excise Tax.

Every Vanderbilt Tire is guaranteed against wearout for the number of months specified. If tread wears out within the stated period, return the tire to any auto center selling Vanderbilt Tires. We will exchange it for a new tire, charging the current selling price at time of adjustment plus Federal Excise Tax, less a stated allowance.

†Since no industry-wide system of standards exists, the representations as to "grade", "line", "level", or "quality" relate only to the private standard of the marketer (e.g. Vanderbilt Premium Grade).

MAY CO

AT WIT'S END

Shear victory comes too late

By ERMA BOMBECK

I don't expect anyone to break out in a rash, but I have been looking for my scissors for three weeks.

I've checked all the obvious spots: the bread box, vegetable crisper and under the car battery. I've even checked my child-proof hiding places where items have been known to be relatively safe for years: under the dishtowel, under a bar of soap and behind the snow shovel.

Actually, losing control of my scissors is my own fault. One day I was desperate to find my comb so I said to my youngest, "If you tell Mama where the comb is, I'll tell you where I hide my scissors." At that time I revealed to him that I had hid my scissors in a box under the kitchen sink marked, "Rain Soaked Picnic Plates." It was like telling Fidel Castro where the missiles were hidden. I never saw the scissors again.

"Have you seen my scissors?" I asked my son.

"No, check whats-his-name. He borrowed them three weeks ago to cut his toenails."

"Have you seen my scissors?"

"No, bout two and a half weeks ago SHE grabbed them out of my hands to cut her bangs."

"SHE, have you seen my scissors?"

"Not since Daddy took them a couple weeks ago to cut some electrical wire in the garage."

"Have you seen my scissors?"

"No. Someone took them to chop up marshmallows for a salad, but that was a week and a half ago."

"SOMEONE. Where are the scissors?"

"What's-his-face borrowed them last Sunday to trim the dog, but Tuesday Daddy borrowed them to either clean out the lint trap in the bathroom or prune the mahonia bush."

"Have you seen my scissors?"

"On Wednesday, whats-his-name was cutting up a sheet for a parachute.

"Scissors?"

"A few hours ago SHE was sharpening her ice skates with them?"

"Have you?"

"They're gone! Rotten kid jerked them out of my hand to cut a sole off his shoe that was flapping."

"You got the scissors, Rotten?

"Sure what do you want them for?"

"I forgot."

BROKERAGE HOUSE DILEMMA

Small Wall Street Investor Vanishing

By TERRY ROBARDS
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — For nearly a decade the small investor has been vanishing from Wall Street and the forces of change that are causing tumult in the securities industry now threaten him with virtual extinction.

Wall Street is in a dilemma. The feeling is nearly unanimous that the small investor is necessary, even vital. But there is doubt about how best to keep him in the stock market. One thing appears certain: It will cost him more to do business.

A New York Times survey of some of the United States largest brokerage houses doing public business shows that they generally do not want small transactions. Some of them will accept them, grudgingly, but most say they are not worth the trouble.

MOST FIRMS appear to feel that the bulk of their paperwork difficulties stem from handling small trades. They also know that commissions of $20, $25 or even $30 tickets resulting from relatively small trades — often are profitless.

Alfred M. Seaber, a partner in Goodbody & Co., estimates that the cost of an individual transaction, regardless of size, is $20 to $25. With the broker's commission added in, it takes a ticket of close to $40 for the firm to make a profit.

This is why Goodbody is one of a number of firms that have started imposing a minimum commission to customers — in this case $15 — regardless of transaction size. This means that an investor who buys two shares of American Telephone and Telegraph at about $49 a share must pay over 15 per cent in commissions at Goodbody.

THIS WEEK Eastman Dillon, Union Securities & Co. joined the trend sweeping the industry and changed its internal compensation structure. One ingredient was a $20 minimum commission on all trades, meaning that the investor who buys two shares of AT&T through the firm pays over 20 per cent.

This also means that any investor who makes a transaction involving less than $1,300 worth of stock will be paying more in commissions than the minimums set by the New York Stock Exchange. In other words, the $20 minimum starts becoming a larger percentage of the trade at about $1,300.

Only Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., among the largest houses has stood its ground in the face of rising costs and continued to maintain that it will accept any trade, no matter how small it may be.

This should not imply that any Merrill Lynch broker will happily accept any trade that comes in. Practically speaking, the brokers at almost any firm eschew the small tickets in favor of concentrating on developing large accounts.

MUCH MORE typical is the attitude at Herzfeld & Stern, where a partner said this week, "If someone comes in with a small ticket, we grumble, mumble and make it known we're not too happy about it, but we take it." He said the firm's internal commission structure would probably be changed in coming months.

At A. G. Becker & Co., a large Chicago-based firm, John F. Connor, a vice president, said, "We have never leased a street-floor location, because this type of location attracts people we couldn't serve properly."

Connor said inquiries from investors with less than $3,600 to $5,000 to invest generally have been referred to firms that are "better geared to handle this type of retail business." He added: "We are definitely a retail house, but our thrust is toward the bigger individual accounts."

In San Francisco, Herman T. Birr 3d, president of Birr, Wilson & Co., said: "We are right in the middle of a study of our whole commission structure. We are considering a minimum commission of $10, which would make very small trades, in effect, unprofitable for the investor."

Similar studies are under way at Hirsch & Co.; Harris, Upham & Co.; Glore, Forgan, William R. Staats, Inc.; Butcher & Sherrerd; Mitchum, Jones & Templeton, and Hayden, Stone, Inc. All of these concerns have numerous examples to follow.

REVISED commission schedules already have been announced by most of the U.S. largest brokerage houses, including Bache & Co., Inc.; Francis I. DuPont & Co.; Goodbody; E. F. Hutton & Co., Inc.; Shearson Hammill & Co., Inc.; Paine, Webber Jackson & Curtis, and Eastman Dillon.

Most of them have one thing in common: they encourage their registered representatives to do business with customers who deal in large amounts. And they discourage dealing with the little guy.

For example, brokers at Walston & Co., Inc., do not receive any portion of the commission if the total commission, or ticket is under $12. This obviously militates against handling small trades. The minimum at Fahnestock & Co. is $10 and at Mitchum Jones & Templeton it is $15.

GRUEN REPORT

Mayer explained that, ultimately, the Planning Commission will have to conduct public hearings with the intent of amending the city's master plan to include all or part of the Gruen recommendations. The final decision would be by the City Council.

Prior to the Planning Commission's official hearings, however, a number of public meetings are planned in which details of the proposals will be presented and questions from the audience will be answered, Mayer said.

Tuesday's meeting is the first aimed at the public at large, Mayer explained. The prior presentation, on Dec. 16, was primarily for the City Council, Planning Commission and some key city officials and civic leaders.

Museum Tops Chamber Goals

Establishment of a city museum tops the list of 1970 objectives of the Seal Beach Chamber of Commerce, its president, Keith E. Houdyshell, said Saturday.

He has appointed James W. Dunn Jr. to direct efforts toward purchase of the Stanton Home, First Street and Ocean Avenue, for the museum.

Dunn also will direct the obtaining of a large bronze statue of a seal for Eisenhower Park and the securing of a renovated trolley car from the Pacific Electric Co.

Radio Taken

Burglars who slipped the door lock on the auto of Jim North of Los Angeles, while it was parked in the 4500 block of Atlantic Avenue, fled with a citizen band radio valued at $159, Long Beach police said Saturday.

BREWMASTER INTERNATIONAL

You read about it in NEWSWEEK'S "NEW PRODUCTS."

DRAW ONE: Electronics has taken over the drawing of draft beer in taverns. BREWMASTER INTERNATIONAL of Albuquerque, New Mexico, is marketing a beer tap that looks exactly like the conventional tap, except that the pull handle is inoperative. The bartender instead touches a button and a "perfect" glass of beer pours forth. The Brewmaster unit features easy, quick connection, trouble free operation, accurate booking and unusually high profits for distributors. For the tavern owner, this does away with waste, unauthorized give-away, over-pulls and spillage.

Investment required $5,250 and up, completely secure by equipment. For complete details regarding a distributorship available in your area, write, wire or phone:

1st Long Beach Showing.

To introduce our new Victor Series 800 Billing Computer, we're demonstrating it at a premiere showing, January 27-29.

In case you haven't heard, the new Series 800 costs the same as a conventional accounting machine but doesn't have the limitations that usually go along with the price.

It may be the first computer you can really afford. The Series 800 does more things automatically and with less operator error than any other billing system. So check the date, time and place and make it a point to stop by for an hour.

And let the Victor 800 computer give you a run for your money.

Harriet Lees is bride in formal rite

Harriet Kathryne Lees, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry James Lees, 4057 Pine Ave., exchanged wedding vows with Ralph Hamilton Rowland III of Fresno, during a Saturday evening ceremony in California Heights Methodist Church.

The bride chose a formal white satin gown featuring trained silk organza cage appliqued with white roses, for her marriage to the son of Ralph Hamilton Rowland Jr. and Mrs. Ralph Watson, both Fresno residents.

Elizabeth Ibbetson and Mrs. Jack Child were maid and matron of honor.

Lois Williams, Sandi Sorenson, Libby Rowland and Joan Watson, sisters of the bridegroom, were honor attendants. Rica Ibbetson was flower girl and Marc Sunderland, the bride's cousin, and Jack Watson, brother of the bridegroom, acolytes.

Mrs. Dean Sunderland, the bride's aunt, who also sang at the bride's parents' wedding, was soloist.

MRS. RALPH ROWLAND III

Peter Cooper Meux performed best man duties and 250 guests were ushered by James Lees, the bride's brother, Michael Menzies, Dennis Skinner, Scott Whitman and Timothy Totomuto.

A champagne reception, during which a musical trio entertained guests, followed in the Ebell Club of Long Beach.

Upon return from a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, the newlyweds will reside in Los Angeles.

CALIFORNIA SALUTE

Museum notes bi-centennial

In a salute to the state's bi-centennial, California Museum Foundation, a non-profit corporation dedicated to support of California Museum of Science and Industry, will entertain at an invitational open house reception Thursday at the museum in Exposition Park.

The MUSES, women's support group for the museum, and the Docents, women's tour guides, will hostess the gala affair with committee members dressed in authentic period costumes.

The 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. open house will bring together the ladies groups, advisory board, young men's consul group, board of trustees of the Museum Foundation and the state-appointed board of directors, their husbands and wives.

Sponsors of the museum's 19 permanent exhibits and the current temporary exhibitors also will be in attendance.

Following buffet dinner, highlight of the evening will be presentation of the yearly museum calendar, a silk-screened poster done by artist Earl Newman.

MUSIC BY MARIACHI bands will set a merry mood for tours throughout the museum. Special arrangements also have been made to view the Moon Rock, which now is on display at the museum on loan from NASA's Manned Space Center, Houston.

Among Long Beach Women participating as MUSES are Mmes. Llewellyn Bixby Jr., Llewellyn Bixby IV, William Broom, William Graham, William Klingensmith, Leo Vander Lans, Palmer Wentworth, Vaile Young and Donald Muchmore, wife of the Museum Foundation president.

Resorts lure two couples

Cash-Collins

Wedding vows were exchanged by Johnny Clark and Jeanne Michelle Collins Saturday evening at the Chapel of the Wedding Bells in Bellflower.

The former Miss Collins is the daughter of Mrs. Irene Collins, 3545 Lime Ave., and is a graduate of Jordan High School. Her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cash of Torrance.

The bride was attired in an Empire style white crepe gown accented with pearl cuffs and neckline. Her shoulder-length veil was held by a pearl crown headpiece.

Pamela Collins, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Marsha Ellis and Janet Long. Tess Scates was flower girl.

Carl Cash served as his brother's best man with Kenny Cash and Jimmy Cash as ushers. Jamie Cash was the ring bearer.

The newlyweds are honeymooning in Mammoth and will reside in Bellflower.

Lynch-Fisher

Honeymooning in Aspen, Colo., are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Lynch Jr. (Deborah Fisher), who exchanged wedding vows during Saturday noon nuptials in St. Matthew's Catholic Church.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fisher, 3836 E. Fifth St., wore a formal silk taffeta gown trimmed with daisy lace.

Rose Coats attended as maid of honor; Linda Connor and Mary Ann Rosvold were bridesmaids.

Daniel Parry was best man for the son of Mrs. Jim Ferrara of Imlay, Nev., and the late Mr. F. C. Lynch Sr.

The bridegroom's cousins, Richard and Joseph Bechler, seated 100 guests.

A luncheon buffet at the Long Beach Elks Lodge followed the ceremony.

Both young people are currently attending California State College at Long Beach, where the bridegroom is a member of Alpha Kappa Psi.

The newlyweds will reside in Long Beach.

Musical arts

Musical Arts Club will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Covenant Presbyterian Church, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue, for dinner and a program of operatic and light opera selections.

Soloists will be Shirlee Sawers, soprano, and Frank Politeo, tenor. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Fred Ohlendorf, 4220 Heather Road.

Y Kicks Off Drive for 5,000 Recruits

The YMCA of Greater Long Beach today kicks off its 1970 campaign to recruit 5,000 new members and raise $102,000 in contributions.

The kick-off was scheduled to coincide with YMCA Sunday, which is being observed in most Long Beach churches along with the rest of the country, and the opening of National YMCA Week.

More than 750 volunteer Y workers will canvass the city for memberships and contributions from now until the drive closes March 1, said Bill George, citywide chairman.

Weekly progress reports for all six of the YMCA branches in Greater Long Beach will be made during the campaign.

"We expect this year's drive to top everything we have done in the past," George said last week.

"All YMCA activities in the Long Beach area have been expanding in the past few years, and we expect to expand our membership to the same degree."

Last year's drive netted more than 3,000 new members and brought in approximately $86,000 in contributions.

Assisting George will be Long Beacy attorney Clyde Bronn, a former president of the YMCA of Greater Long Beach, and a long-time active worker in YMCA affairs.

BILL GEORGE
Y Membership Chairman

Branch chairmen for the drive are: Bronn, Metropolitan; Wendy Melton, Camp; James Edson, Downtown; John Overmeyer, Lakewood; 'Speed' Handeland, Los Altos; Henry Moffett, Los Cerritos, and James Warren, North Community.

Goals are: Metropolitan, 100 members and $5,000; Camp, 100 members and $4,000; Lakewood, 300 members and $19,000; Downtown, 700 members and $21,000; Los Altos, 1,500 members and $34,000; Los Cerritos, 1,300 members and $27,000, and North Community, 300 members and $16,000.

Safe Looter Pleads Guilty

A plea of guilty to grand theft put one man in jail for a year —and changed the trial date for two other men charged with him in looting a restaurant safe of $4,700.

John G. Filozzola, 46, of Las Vegas, who police said had "Mafia connections," withdrew his plea of not guilty and was ordered to jail for a year as condition to five years of probation.

A conviction could have meant a prison term.

Anthony U. Rossi, 33, of Santa Ana, and Henry W. Willming, 30, of Costa Mesa, won continuance of their trial until Feb. 9.

The three men had been charged with "setting up" an alleged burglary at Berkshire's Restaurant at Newport Beach, where Willming was a bartender.

Rossi, meanwhile, was arrested by Tustin police on a charge of conspiring to rob a bank messenger. Jailed with him was Dean B. Lohman, 20, of Tustin, who police said teamed with Rossi in an alleged scheme to hijack cash consigned to a check-cashing stand in Tustin.

At the time of his arrest on the conspiracy count, Rossi was at liberty under $62,500 bail. On his new arrest, bail of $100,000 was set by Municipal Court Presiding Judge Paul G. Mast, who set Jan. 26 as hearing date. Lohman is held under $25,000 bail.

Apartment Block Change Upheld

The City Council was within its legal rights in modifying the special permit issued by the Planning Commission for an apartment complex in Alamitos Heights, City Attorney Leonard Putnam said last week.

Ralph W. Schuhart, 535 Manila Ave., had questioned whether a council-approved change, moving a proposed entrance-exit to the complex from Colorado Street to Bellflower Boulevard, was legal.

Lincoln Properties, Inc., proposed to erect 525 apartment units in the area north of Colorado Street between Pacific Coast Highway and the southerly extension of Bellflower Boulevard.

When approved originally by the Planning Commission, the project was to have an exit-entrance on Colorado Street.

The commission action was appealed to the City Council by Everett H. York, one of the opponents of the apartment complex. At the council hearing, it was pointed out the Pacific Coast Freeway might make a Colorado Street exit impossible, and the plan was modified to permit an exit onto the extended Bellflower Boulevard.

Variety of Courses Offered at LBCC

A variety of courses and programs are being offered this Spring for regular college students and adults of the community at the Liberal Arts Campus and Business and Technology Campus of Long Beach City College. Most courses will be offered both day and evening. Among course offerings are several new programs of interest.

Developed jointly by an advisory consisting of industry and college personnel, the LBCC Quality Control program includes 16 transferable college-credit courses and has individual curriculums for certificate and associate degrees.

A COURSE IN custodial training is being offered this spring at BTC. The class, covers techniques of building care and maintenance, proper use of supplies and equipment, and cleaning materials and methods.

The Foreign Language Department is offering two new foreign language and culture courses for study and travel: "Languages and Cultures of Spanish-Speaking Countries" and "Languages and Cultures of Western Europe".

A complete electronics program is now being offered at the Business and Technology Campus, including sections in electronics, electro-mechanical technology and industrial electricity. Courses included in these groups are Electrical Codes and Ordinances, Pulse-Digital Circuits and UHF, Microwave Theory and Measurements and Electronic and Microelectronics Fabrication Practices.

Engineer - in - Training courses will be offered by the Mathematics and Engineering Department at the Liberal Arts Campus. The course, designed to prepare qualified engineers to take the California State Board of Registration Exam for civil and professional engineers, will employ the sources of qualified engineers, instructors and guest lecturers.

A NEW OFFERING AT the evening Business and Technology Campus is Essentials of Auto Care and Maintenance for adults who wish a general background on all aspects of automobile operation. The practical rather than technical aspects of auto care and maintenance are emphasized in this course open to both men and women.

The Child Development Center at BTC will offer morning and afternoon sessions this spring. Through group participation and class discussion, parents study current concepts in early childhood and parent education. Parents are eligible for participation when their child is between the age of 30 months and the time of Kindergarten enrollment.

Training and refresher courses for office occupations are being offered at the Business and Technology Campus. The training program covers accounting, office machines, secretarial training, shorthand and typing, stenotypy, PBX training, office occupation testing and interviewing, bookkeeping and shorthand. The refresher courses are general and open-ended so that students may enroll at anytime and stay only until they feel they are ready for employment.

SPRING CLASSES at LAC (4901 East Carson Street) and BTC (1305 East Pacific Coast Highway) will begin on February 5. New part-time day students at LAC will be registered by appointment the morning of February 4 and without appointment that afternoon. Part-time day students at BTC will be registered by appointment only.

Evening registration for new students at LAC will be by appointment only from 6:00 - 8:30 p.m. on February 4, 5 & 9 and at BTC on February 2, 3, 4, 5 & 9.

Los Altos Association Elects Hosking Leader

Everett W. (Ev) Hosking has been elected president of the Los Altos Association for the current year, it has been announced by the organization's board of directors.

He succeeds Wayne Roy, who will remain on the board. George E. Riggins, Jr. will serve as vice president, the position held last year by Hosking.

With a background of 44 years in the newspaper business, Hosking is an integral part of Long Beach history.

E. W. HOSKING
Heads Association

HE IS THE SON of the late W. H. Hosking who was vice president of the old Press-Telegram Publishing Company, and he started his newspaper career while in high school.

Hosking has worked as a reporter, aviation editor, assistant city editor and city editor of the Press-Telegram. Several years ago he has promoted to the position of editor of the Sunday Department for the Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram, a position he now holds.

He has been a close observer of community affairs for many years and has served nine years as a director of the Los Altos Association, which is comprised of more than 5,200 property owners in the eastern and northern sections of Long Beach. It is the largest of nearly 200 associations of its type in Southern California.

Hosking is a veteran of 24 years active and reserve service with the United States Air Force with duties primarily centered in the area of staff information officer.

HE HAS BEEN interested in aviation since 1928 when he began to take flying lessons from Earl S. Daugherty. After Daugherty's death he continued his flying with Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon of around-the-world fame and later under the tutelage of Clyde Schlieper.

In the 1930's Hosking was cochairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce aviation committee which was largely responsible for the development of Long Beach Airport.

His published works include coauthorship of the book "History of Aviation."

Hosking and his wife Harriet live in the Park Estates area of Long Beach and have one son, Lt. William J. Hosking, a career Naval officer.

Lighting Additions Public Hearing Set

The proposed improvement of Long Beach Street Lighting District No. 9 was set for public hearing on March 10 by action of the City Council this week.

The district covers the area bounded by the Union Pacific right-of-way on the south, Market Street on the north, the Los Angeles River on the west, and Long Beach Boulevard on the east.

Plans call for installation of 226 street lights at an estimated cost of $138,400, of which the city would pay half, and the balance would be assessed against property benefited by the improvement.

Twenty-eight 400-watt mercury vapor lamps would be installed along main thoroughfares, and 198 standards with 175-watt mercury vapor lamps would be installed along residential streets, according to City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson.

Minority Housing Rulings

Four lawsuits brought by minority homeseekers against apartment owners and managers within the last three months in the Long Beach area have ended in judgments against the defendants, a Fair Housing Foundation official has announced.

In all four cases, apartment owners or managers admitted they had discriminated against the homeseekers "on account of color or race," said Curt Moody, Long Beach Foundation Executive Director.

The lawsuit defendants also admitted they had "denied the right to full and equal accommodations, advantages, services and privileges" in their respective apartments, Moody added.

ALL CASES, Moody stated, involved the Fair Housing Foundation.

"Our function is that of impartial investigator of complaints of racial discrimination in housing," said Moody. "When the investigation is completed, our findings are turned over to the minority homeseeker.

"He is then informed of his rights under the law, and determines his own course of action," he added.

Moody noted that the Foundation has also undertaken investigations for landlords who feel "they have been unjustly accused of discriminatory practices."

Fire Unit Not Linked to Magazine

Long Beach firemen members of Local 372, International Association of Fire Fighters today warned local merchants and residents that they do not have any affiliation with the Fraternal Order of Fire Fighters Inc., publishers of a magazine called National Fire Chief.

The FOFF Inc. is soliciting advertisements for its magazine and solicitors are usually dressed in khaki work clothes and fire service uniform caps, the IAFF stated.

The FOFF is not associated with organized labor or the IAFF.

Sister Helps Trap Suspect

STOCKTON (UPI) — A San Jose man suspected of rape and murder was arrested near here after his sister led him into a police trap.

Sheriff's detectives lying in wait at a truck stop Friday night arrested Floyd Wayne Ward, 25, and charged him with the rape-murder of Mrs. Maria Rose Long, 53, in San Jose.

Ward, a Vietnam veteran recently employed as a shoe salesman in San Mateo, was apprehended after his sister, Mrs. Crystal Conner of San Jose, arranged to meet him at the truck stop.

'BANK THEFT' CAPER

Vicious Swindle Is Worked in L.B.

By CHUCK CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

A vicious swindle — the bank examiner bunco — is being worked in Long Beach with elderly persons as the victims, the Long Beach bunco detail warned today.

Sgts. Wesley W. Bertz, Ralph W. Abraham and Carthel S. Roberson said the latest victim, an 88-year-old retired man was robbed of $2,500 Jan. 16.

The scheme is so basically simple that it sounds impossible that it works, the officers said.

HOWEVER, the latest victim did not become suspicious until two days after he was buncoed, the officers reported.

The elderly man said he received a telephone call at 10:30 a.m. from a man who represented himself as an official of the bank where he maintained a $2,800 saving account.

The man said he believed the victim was being cheated by a dishonest bank employee and asked how much money he had on deposit.

The victim told the plausible talking con man his exact balance and the man asked him if he would assist in capturing the dishonest employee.

THE VICTIM readily agreed and the thief said he would call him later and tell him exactly what to do.

At 11 a.m. the con artist called again and said he had found a discrepancy in the victim's account and that if the victim would cooperate he would have his loss restored and in addition would receive a reward for his cooperation.

The victim was told to withdraw $2,500 from his account and to turn it over to a bank representative who would meet him in front of the bank.

The victim followed instructions and gave the money to a man who showed him a bronze badge at 12:30 p.m.

THE THIEF told the victim the money would be returned to his account and that he would hear from the "chief" the next day when the dishonest employee was arrested.

Sgts. Abraham, Bertz and Roberson said another elderly man was swindled out of $1,500 by another bunco man two weeks before the last victim was taken.

"In this instance the victim was able to identify a picture of the thief but the district attorney failed to issue a complaint when he learned the man was a prison escapee, theorizing the adult authority would punish him when and if he was captured," the sergeants said.

THE BUNCO detail mentioned three ways in which the con man learns his victims have money in a particular bank.

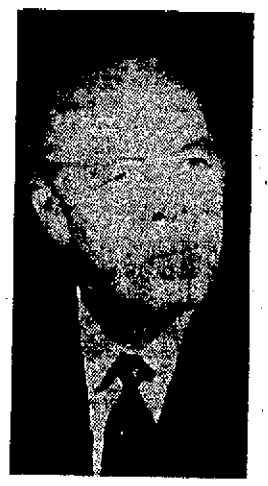

In one instance a victim recalled receiving a telephone call from a person who claimed he represented a credit bureau and he furnished the information.

In other instances the con man consults a city directory and copies down the names of retired persons living in high rent districts.

Being glib tongued and claiming to be a bank representative, they succeed in getting the elderly, slow thinking victims to tell them what bank before they go into the dishonest employee bit, the officers said.

IN STILL another instance, the woman victim remembered a man leaning over her shoulder and looking at her opened deposit book and thus finding out her name and the amount of her deposit.

"Call the police when anyone calls you and pretends to be a bank representative, or call your bank and talk to the manager," Sgts. Bertz, Abraham and Robersons urged.

A social hour starting at 6:30 p.m. will precede the dinner. Lt. Col. John B. A. Johnson, USAR (ret.), will preside.

Phony GI Reveals His Masquerade

AUGSBURG, Germany (UPI) — An American civilian masqueraded for months under a soldier's name to serve with the Army in Germany, the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes said Saturday.

A spokesman for the 24th Infantry Division in Augsburg confirmed the basic facts of the case but declined to give further details.

The civilian went to his company commander's office Nov. 25 and said he was not PFC Bob Addison, as his identity papers indicated, but David Major of Gary, Ind., a civilian, the newspaper said.

He said he agreed to switch with Addison to complete Addison's three-year stint of Army service early in 1969, when Addison was home on leave from his unit at Fuerth, Germany, Stars and Stripes reported.

The newspaper said Major wanted to leave the United States for some reason, and Addison wanted to get out of the Army.

The civilian who called himself Major had served a stint with the Army in Germany in 1967, so he knew the ropes. On his return to Germany as PFC.

Love conquers all for Gwinn Girards

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

Measles: a simple childhood disease.

Not even a disease, really. For a child, German or three day) measles may mean a slight fever or rash. Nothing more.

But to the unborn child who's mother contracted rubella (the medical term for the disease) during the first few months of her pregnancy, it may mean a lifetime of heartbreak and hardship.

In 1964-65, California and the rest of the nation was beset by a measles outbreak of epidemic proportions.

The result: in California alone 1,500 children were born with severe hearing, sight and heart defects. Many of these suffered slight to acute mental retardation as well.

In some cases, couples with children plagued by not one, but many handicaps were unable to accept the financial and psychological burdens thrust upon them. Hundreds of rubella victims were turned over to the state. Their destinies: to lie helplessly in institutions for the rest of their lives.

One couple in Orange County, however, is doing what it can to help these youngsters. They are the 1970 Orange County March of Dimes poster family, the Gwinn Girards.

IN EXPLAINING how they became involved with rubella victims Mrs. Girard said, "When our four children got older, we decided to raise puppies as a spare-time hobby. We bought the dog, but when its first litter died we had second thoughts about the whole thing."

She continued, "We said to ourselves, 'We shouldn't be wasting our time raising puppies. We should be putting our experiences to better purposes.'" Girard is a retired Marine; his wife, a former registered nurse.

Today the Girards have two adopted children and nine other foster children living with them in their Santa Ana home. All were born with some kind of birth defect. Eight are rubella victims.

At first glance, the rubella victim is a pathetic sight.

The cowlick and slight mouth deformity common to most rubella babies is not the only external evidence of the disease. Even the tiniest child must wear extensive hearing equipment and strong corrective glasses.

And that's not the worst of it. While some of the Girard children romp playfully on hobby horses and build houses from colored blocks, others — those who were confined in institutions during their early years — lie listlessly in their cribs.

The annual Mothers March for March of Dimes — this year focusing on birth defects — will be conducted door-to-door throughout the Long Beach area Tuesday. Volunteers for the march still are needed, and interested individuals are urged to call the March of Dimes office, 424-0414.

"THESE CHILDREN, like any others, must be stimulated to develop," Mrs. Girard explained. "They must be encouraged and given love and made to do what they can for themselves.

"We've had children three years old come to us who were still drinking from bottles. One little three-year-old couldn't even raise her head," she added.

But there is hope. Hope for these children, and for the hundreds of others like them.

Sitting a few steps away, studying with his tutor is the Girard's oldest rubella child, 10-year-old Chris.

An enthusiastic youngster who enjoys people and life, Chris was once just like the children in the other room. Yet now he speaks, reads and writes like any normal 10-year-old. He's an avid swimmer and enjoys craft activities. Once a week he attends meetings and outings sponsored by the Foundation for the Junior Blind.

It wasn't easy. It took a lot of patience and care and love — which the Girards have plenty of. But today the couple feel a certain satisfaction as Chris joins their oldest adopted child, 12-year-old Donald (who was born with an arm and hand deformity) for an outing to Disneyland.

As the youngsters are leaving, Chris asks Dad for some money.

"How come you only come to me when you want a little cash?" Girard asks the boy.

"Aw, Dad, come on," David replies as he smiles and hugs the elder Girard affectionately.

THE LOVE the Girards have given these children has paid off.

"In 1967 when we participated in the John Tracy Clinic for parents of rubella victims, Chris was a real inspiration. He was an example of what their children could develop into," Mrs. Girard said.

"There we met with members who had completely lost hope and were ready to give up. That's when we decided to open our home to others' babies. We believed we knew as much about caring for them as anyone."

The Girards quickly went to work, converting their garage into a seven-bed nursery and filling it with the things that any toddler would enjoy. Swing sets and a trampoline were added to the backyard.

Caring for their "family" is a full-time job. The day begins at 6 a.m. with devotionals, followed by breakfast. "It gets pretty messy," Mrs. Girard said, "but we're trying to teach them to care for themselves." The remainder of the day is filled with therapy, educational play and many, many visits to the various doctors who provide services for the Girards.

"But all this can be prevented," Mrs. Girard stated, "with a simple vaccination."

APPROVED and licensed last summer, the vaccine is now available for children ages 1 through puberty. It should not, however, be confused with the rubeola vaccine (for red or two week measles) given to children several years ago.

Even if your child has had three-day measles (doctors are not sure if there really is ammunity to the disease) or has had a measles shot, you should make sure he gets this new one.

Tuesday volunteers for the Mothers' March will distribute informative leaflets about the vaccine to every home. Though in comic book form, its message is no joke.

Another measles epidemic is expected in 1970-71.

The baby you save may be your own.

BRAVE SOLDIER—Three-year-old David Alan Bush does his part in the battle against birth defects by lining up early to receive the German (rubella) measles vaccination. Dr. John Mitchell, consulting physician for the March of Dimes, administers the vaccine.

Films, discussion slated for religious seminar

A day-long youth seminar "Wanted: Information Concerning the Whereabouts of God, Alias Jesus Christ" will be held next Sunday at Holy Trinity School, San Pedro.

All students from 9th through 12th grade and beginning college students are invited.

The day's activities will begin at 2 p.m. with films, discussions and communication sessions scheduled. A concelebrated Folk Mass, dinner and dance featuring the "Fifth Flight" will conclude the program.

MRS. RONALD CRANFORD

Cranford and Clark say vows

Honeymooning in San Diego after their marriage Friday at Los Altos Methodist Church are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lee Cranford (Shirley Diane Clark).

The couple's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Clark, 2903 Lomita Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. John P. Cranford, 4637 Hackett Ave.

The former Miss Clark was attired in a white chiffon gown with touches of lace and flower trim. Mrs. Lester Bender, the bride's sister, was matron of honor.

Lester Bender was best man and Owen Thurmond served as usher.

The new Mrs. Cranford was graduated from Millikan High School and Lakewood Beauty College. Her husband is an alumnus of Lakewood High School.

Elegance Keynotes Musical Dramas

By DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

To complement its exhibition, "The Middle Ages: Treasures from The Cloisters and The Metropolitan Museum of Art," the Los Angeles County Museum of Art is presenting, this weekend through February 1, the New York Pro Musica in two musical dramas from the 12th Century, "The Play of Daniel," and "The Play of Herod."

Friday night in Bing Auditorium, a benefit premiere opened the ten-performance visit in a fittingly elegant (black ties and $100 seats are elegant, Eliza) manner.

For once, there was truly rich costuming in the audience as well as on the stage.

"THE PLAY OF DANIEL" certainly fills the eye. Robert Fletcher's and Henry Heymann's costumes seem to be the real thing; they stand the scrutiny of very close viewing with no loss in lavish effect. And John Conklin's sets, together with the lighting of Peter Hunt, first produced at The Cloisters in 1963, have survived cross-country travel without apparent mishap.

Leo Bing Auditorium offers different sound values than the Pro Musica's New York base, of course. Its handsome interior gives off none of those churchly echoes which some people feel comprise an important part of "Daniel's" dramatic effect.

Still if you, like me, have not seen this production at The Cloisters, the loss of echo may not trouble you at all. Sound effects are nice, but what is truly dramatic and compelling here — the music — can come alive without great dependence on them.

With Charles Siebert's sonorous delivery of W.H. Auden's verse narration providing helpful comment, the play, enacted by Pro Musica's 30-member ensemble of singers and players, did certainly come alive. The ensemble's usual patina of authenticity could not surprise us, of course, but there was something unexpected in the consistently high level of the singing.

PROMINENT AMONG the performers were Anthony Tamburello (Belshazzar), Ray De Voll (Daniel), Elizabeth Humes (Belshazzar's Queen), Paul Dwyer (An Angel), and a boys choir from New York's Church of the Transfiguration.

To this listener, who usually chews his nails at the sound of boys choirs, this one was a calming and revelatory experience.

Among the instrumentalists were familiar Pro Musica names: LaNoue Davenport, Shelley Gruskin, Mary Springfels, and Genette Foster, as well as Robert Sirinek, who played the straight trumpet.

I hope the rumor we heard just before the performance began — that this series of performances represents this ensemble's valedictory as a touring unit — was only a rumor.

Armour Girds for 'Safari'

College professor Richard Armour, perhaps best known as a humorist and author of rib-tickling stories, will take a "Safari into Satire" at University of California Irvine's science lecture hall Feb. 1 at 8 p.m.

The event is the annual free-to-the-public lecture offered by UCI Town and Gown.

Dr. Armour, who taught for years at Scripps College and Claremont Graduate School, is now lecturer emeritus there. His many books include "It All Started With Columbus" and "Light Armour," a collection of his wittiest works.

HOBBY SHOW OPENS WITH SNAKES, DOLLS

Hobbies ranging from wood whittling to snake collecting will be illustrated this weekend at the Gardena Recreation Department's annual hobby show in the Gardena Community Center, 1651 W. 162nd St.

The show, co-sponsored by the Gardena Friends of the Library, will open at noon on both days. It will run until 8 p.m. Saturday and 5 p.m. Sunday.

Among the hobbies to be shown are doll collections, handicrafts, postmarks, copper pitchers and pictures of old Gardena.

Lucky Sailor Will Escort TV Actress

Some lucky Long Beach-based sailor will win an all-expense-paid night on the town with Denise Nichols, star of the ABC television show Room 222.

That's first prize in the raffle at the second annual benefit show for the Long Beach Community Improvement League, to be held at 8 p.m., Feb. 7, in Long Beach Auditorium.

The Navy is selling 1,000 tickets.

FIRST PRIZE includes dinner and entertainment at Dino's restaurant on the Sunset Strip.

Miss Nichols will be met at Los Angeles International Airport by a chauffer-driven limousine upon her return from Tokyo.

She will be driven to the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium and introduced on stage.

The 500th woman through the door at the benefit will be escorted for an evening of dinner and entertainment by Lincoln Kilpatrick of the Leslie Uggams Show and Lloyd Haines, co-star of ABC's Room 22."

The 500th man through the door gets an all-expense-paid evening with Miss Edna Hartman at a famous Hollywood nightspot.

Stars who have agreed to appear include Brock Peters, Erik Braden, Joe Campanella, Lola Falania, Maxwell Julian and Letta Mubulu.

Tickets are available at the Bank of America, 4th Street and Pine Avenue, and Norse Way branches; and the Community Improvement League Benefit Headquarters, 555, E. Pacific Coast Hwy.

Lakewood Looks for a Queen

Applications for the 1970 Lakewood Pan American Queen contest, will be available starting Monday.

Unmarried girls between the ages of 17 and 21 who attend college, or Artesia, Lakewood, Mayfair, or St. Joseph high schools, and are residents of Lakewood or Lakewood Village, are eligible.

The Pan American Queen selected will reign over the city's Pan American Festival April 13-19.

Twenty girls will be selected as semi-finalists on March 3-4 and will compete in the finals on April 9. All competition — which includes each contestant deliverying a short speech on fostering Pan American Goodwill — will be held at Bullocks, Lakewood.

Applications will be available at schools or at the Pan American office, 5787 South St., Lakewood. Completed applications must be returned by Feb. 24.

AT CHAPEL THEATER

Sex Has Message

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

Sex IS saleable, as nightly overflow crowds at Chapel Theater's current mounting of "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running" demonstrates again.

But it would be a sad mistake, I think, to charge off this vehicle's enormous popularity to its frankly uninhibited examination of human sexuality.

In other words: it is good theater — particularly in the discerning hands of director Billy Creamer, who consistently sustains a never-too-frothy, never-too-ponderous approach.

The language, the ideas in four only tenuously connected playlets comprising the whole no longer is startling to an audience conditioned, through hearsay at least, by "Hair" and "Oh, Calcutta."

Beyond this, there are areas explored which hold deep, significant meaning to the more-or-less affluent, middle-aged, middleclass citizens: where is he going, where has he been, what's this life all about?

In the first vignette, the state of contemporary theater is probed. Specifically, will on-stage nudity ever be accepted by general audiences? (The show predates "Hair," of course.) Parker Babbidge turns in a superlative job as a hammy actor who really doesn't mind at all appearing in the skinny.

Number two deals with those tensions and apprehensions that develop during a lasting, "happy" marriage. Whether or not George and Harriet will trade in their old double bed for a pair of twins provide the entree for Darlene Chafee and Babbidge to make points worthy of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

I was most taken with the third offering, perhaps through identification with its "hero." Austin Rheingold reaches his finest moment as this middle-aged husband and father unwillingly confronted with his childrens' sex education at a time when he's going through the well-known identity crisis experienced by many during their fourth fifth decade.

Finally, there is a pointed spoof between two elders who have difficulty in remembering on occasion their husband-wife's name. Each has been married several times and it's not always easy for Mrs. Chaffee and Andrew Hawkes to remember which partner was involved in what amorous event from the past.

Overall, on balance, a strong three-star rating; mature viewers only — and they should make reservations well in advance.

EDUCATOR TO ADDRESS BRETHREN

Professor G. B. Gordon, Pacific Christian College vice president and director of development, will speak at the third anniversary banquet of Long Beach Brethren Manor, at 6:45 p.m. Thursday.

Master of ceremonies in the Manor's dining room, 3333 Pacific Place, will be H. George Hanawalt, Southern California Edison Co. regional manager and president of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Gordons' topic will be "Life is Fun."

Young couples take vows in solemn ceremonies

Robinson-Lona

Chapel of Memories in Norwalk was setting for the Saturday afternoon marriage of Linda Diane Lona to James Richard Robinson.

The couple's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Lona, 5615 N. Spahn Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley F. Robinson, 5853 Dagwood Ave. Both bride and bridegroom are students at California State College at Fullerton.

For her wedding day the bride chose a gown of Chantilly lace and satin with mandarin neckline and lace bodice and sleeves. Her matching headpiece held a three-tiered silk illusion veil.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Kenneth Stout and Karen Maxfield was the bridesmaid. Michael Fall was best man with Gregory Robinson, Fred Lona, Richard Lona, Michael Gavin and Ronald Hobson as ushers.

Following the ceremony the newlyweds were feted at a buffet reception at Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall in Norwalk. They will reside in Fullerton.

Meyers-Jenkins

Attired in a floor-length gown of candlelight silk with lace bodice and sleeves, Judith R. Jenkins became Mrs. James L. Meyers Saturday at the Alta Mira Hotel in Sausalito.

The new Mrs. Meyers' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Jenkins, 2024 Beverly Plaza. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Meyers of Fresno.

Sally Jenkins of Palo Alto was the maid of honor. Bruce Meyers served as his brother's best man with Bernard Barber, Basab Basu and Dan Simmons as ushers.

Following the ceremony the newlyweds were feted at a reception at the hotel. Presently honeymooning in Lake Tahoe, the couple will reside in San Francisco.

Rowley-Shaw

Honeymooning at Lake Tahoe following their marriage Saturday at St. Thomas of Canterbury Episcopal Church are newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Thomas John Rowley III (Linda Mary Saw).

The bride and bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Saw, 6153 Castana Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas John Rowley Jr. of Logan, Utah.

The former Miss Saw was attired in a Victorian gown of lace and organza with lace train. Her attendants were Mrs. James Mabary, matron of honor, and Susan Kelleher and Julie O'Hara, bridesmaids.

Dan Ford was the best man and Charles Short and James Mabaray were ushers.

The new Mrs. Rowley was graduated from Paramount High School and attended UC Santa Barbara. Her husband is a graduate of UC Berkeley.

Following the ceremony the newlyweds were feted at a buffet dinner at the Sierra Restaurant in Bellflower. The couple plan to reside in Bellflower.

Italian pianist

Maurizio Pollino, young Italian pianist, will perform with the Los Angeles Philharmonic today at 3 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion. With music director Zubin Mehta conducting, he will play Chopin's "Concerto No. 2" in F minor for piano and orchestra.

Winter date set by pair

During a traditional candle-passing ceremony among her Kappa Alpha Theta sorority sisters, Charlene Strother announced her engagement to Mark Ebright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Ebright of Long Beach.

The bride-elect, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Flintridge, is an alumna of La Canada High School and attended UC, Santa Barbara. She will graduate in June from USC, with a degree in elementary education. Miss Strother was a Les Fleurette Debutante in 1966.

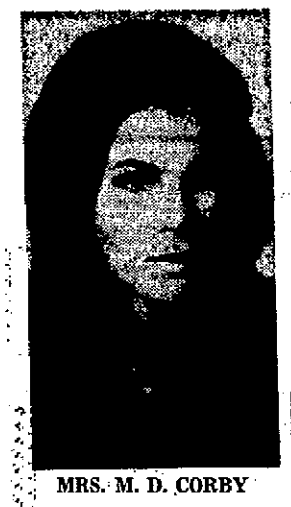

The benedict-elect, a graduate of Wilson High School, attended UC, Santa Barbara, where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha, and also attended California State College at Long Beach. He is currently serving a term of active duty with the U.S. Army Reserve at Fort Ord.

The young couple announced a December wedding date during an open house in the home of the bride-elect's parents.

Hi-Hill Teacher Honored

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

Most Golden Apple honor teachers earn their accolades in normal-size classrooms, shops, labs or gyms.

But not Shirley Abercrombie, most recent recipient of an award made monthly by Teachers Association of Long Beach and The Independent, Press-Telegram in recognition of high-quality teaching.

Mrs. Abercrombie holds forth every day, "rain or shine," in an open-air classroom — Long Beach's Camp Hi-Hill, far up Mt. Wilson's north slope in Angeles National Forest.

OPENED in 1948 with joint school district-city ownership, Camp Hi-Hill provides a week's outdoor education every year for most local 6th-graders. During their week youngsters live in cabins scattered up and down the high hill, with supervision from their own home teacher, college student counsellors and a permanent camp educational staff.

Regular, "3R-style" classes meet, but there's additional emphasis placed on "outdoor education" — instruction in natural science, conservation and outdoor living.

Mrs. Abercrombie "has done an outstanding job" in this dual teaching role "and is a leader in the (larger) outdoor education program," declares a colleague's letter that put her name in nomination for an Apple.

"Recently she helped plan, setup and worked in a pilot program of developing outdoor techniques for use by classroom teachers in city school environments," the letter writer notes.

"She exemplifies the enthusiasm and drive signifying a devoted and dedicated teacher . . . whose students adore her," the fellow teacher concludes.

NOW IN HER 6th year at Camp Hi-Hill, Mrs. Abercrombie was educated in city schools, graduated from Poly High School, City College and Cal State, Long Beach, where she also earned a master's degree in educational administration. Before "going up the mountain," which now is her permanent home, the honoree taught in Addams, Burbank, Lowell and Longfellow Elementary Schools.

A son, Rod, serves in the Air Force, and a daughter, Gail, a UC-Santa Barbara graduate, expects to practice teaching next year in Long Beach.

Reserve Enlists '2 by 6ers'

The recruiting office at the Naval Reserve Training Center on Terminal Island is currently accepting applications for first enlistments in the "two-by-six" program of the Naval Reserve.

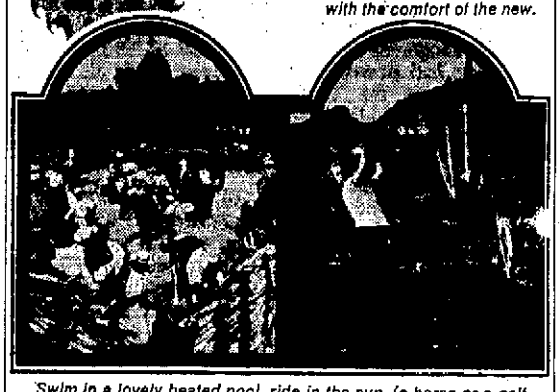

Chief Boatswain's Mate Edward K. Corder Jr., head recruiter, said there is no waiting list for the programs.

The two-by-six program requires a two-year active duty obligation during a six-year enlistment. Reporting for the active duty is delayed for one year, thus permitting enlistees advancement to higher pay grades before reporting for duty.

The program is open to single applicants, 18 to 21, with no dependents. Seventeen-year-olds are eligible if high school graduates.

In another program designed to provide manpower for reserve units, men discharged in the past four years can re-enlist as members of the Naval Reserve on their same pay levels. The pay grades are those from E-4 through E-9.

TUCSON ARIZONA

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your Birthday Today: Personal and professional advantages are featured this year. Strive to make use of every opportunity for advancement and to put aside a fifth of your earnings in a sound investment. Your ideas of what is fun and what sort of individuals interest you are about to shift as success brings you into contact with a new set of people.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You now become aware that many around you have more or less psychic gifts and you cannot long hold much of a secret from them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emotional interests awaken suddenly. Take a good look at yourself; do something about any feature or quality that distresses you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business with official agencies goes more smoothly now. Be well ahead of time wherever you have appointments. Gather your best friends and compare notes, go shopping together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A great deal is gained from conversation with others in similar lines of business. Long trips should be in advanced stages of planning by now. Begin a campaign to expand business contacts and improve existing connections.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some long forgotten favor you extended comes back to you now. Get estimates on work related to your property or home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In an atmosphere of good humor, ask for whatever you really want and make the most of the answers you get.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Seek favors where needed for yourself and your friends. Impromptu arrangements come off more easily today; keep matters simple to permit greater freedom of movement.

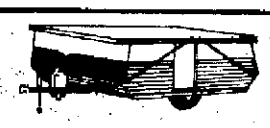

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A pleasant surprise comes in the midst of your routine. Be flexible with original plans; diplomatically but firmly, social and romantic ventures thrive beyond expectations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The ventures you begin now may take three months to complete. But enough encouragement in your planning to take the first element into account.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Unpredictable friends are probably up to some delightful mischief. Catch up with correspondence, finish neglected projects, and balance your check stubs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's a long pull to September, but some scheme comes to a conclusion about that time. Get busy now to meet a worthwhile deadline — a course of study or a creative project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If official matters, legal concerns come up today, settle them promptly. Do a shopping for clothing and perhaps a gift for someone you love.

Att'n: Kelley

Dear Kelley:

After several fruitless searches in quest of a utility trailer, (there are very few advertised), it occurred to me to try running an ad in your "Wanted" column. I deduced there must be numerous people who bought them in the east for the express purpose of moving west, who now let them set idle and unused.

Well, the deduction was correct. I had over 20 calls in two days offering a broad variety of trailers in all parts of Long Beach as well as San Pedro, Gardena, Norwalk, Wilmington and you name it. I took an afternoon off, inspected them and bought the one in Norwalk.

Your ad created a "supermarket" of trailers from which I could take my choice.

Thanks for saving me time and miles.

Very truly yours,

Bill McConnel

California Mansions!

...new governor's residence has been a 30-year controversy

run as hard as he could toward the window, then jump."

"Well, needless to say, I was horrified. That did it!"

The next day she started looking for another house.

"I just couldn't fulfill my responsibility as the governor's wife and the mother of two children in that house," she said. "My husband and I are expected to travel and I could not go away and leave my children in a home that was unsafe.

"Everyone in Sacramento (and elsewhere in the state) threw up their hands and said, 'You can't do that — you can't move out of the governor's mansion.'"

But they did.

Within three months from the day they had moved into the 15-room structure, the Reagans moved at their own expense into a comfortable English-Tudor style home some two miles away from the bustling noise of the capital.

SINCE THE "big move" Mrs. Reagan has tried to head an effort to get a new governor's mansion for California.

"I think it's disgraceful that the largest state in the Union does not have a mansion everyone can be proud of. I don't care if I ever sleep in it a night—I am just dedicated to this," she said.

Mrs. Reagan explained she would like to see the stately residence built with funds contributed by everyone and not appropriated through the legislature.

At this point a member of the audience asked Mrs. Reagan why she didn't ask her husband to take the initiative to get something done.

"We did take the initiative," she said. "We moved out."

Building a governor's residence is not new to Californians. Efforts for funds were started more than 30 years ago.

Mrs. Reagan was asked what her preference in architectural style was for the new home.

She said she felt the residence should be Spanish reflecting the tradition and history of California.

But, as in many efforts, progress moves slowly.

At this point, there is no committee working on the project.

She noted that although everyone seems interested and agrees that there should be a new mansion, there's no central working committee.

The state does, however, now have the land on which the new mansion will be built.

Through donations from Californians, a committee bought 12 acres for $130,000 overlooking the American River outside Sacramento. The site was given to the state in 1967.

ENTERTAINING is one of the drawbacks in the home now occupied by the Reagans.

"When we moved into the house (Sacramento is not bulging with large homes) the dining room would seat eight people. There was no downstairs powder room and many a night our little boy was awakened by people going through his bedroom to use the rest room. The living room was small and if my husband wanted to do some work, he had to set his papers on the bed," she said.

STILL — IT'S somewhere to live . . . but, not long ago, the governor and his family came within two weeks of being evicted.

The owner of the house had financial difficulties and was being forced to sell. We didn't want to buy so I started looking for another home. But there just wasn't one available large enough for our needs," she said.

Two weeks before eviction into the street, a bipartisan group finally came to their aid and bought the house. Now the Reagans pay them the $1,250 a month rent.

"I think it's pretty Mickey Mouse for our largest state not to have a governor's mansion," she concluded.

At that point a voice from the audience said: "Why don't you stop paying your own rent, then California would have to do it."

With enthusiastic applause, the crowd agreed. She laughed.

pliers, painters, electricians and craftsmen.

ONE TRAUMATIC experience dealt with fabric for the draperies and furniture in the living room.

"It was a beautiful shade of yellow print, Mrs. Nixon's color. We discovered only 12 yards were available."

A call to the factory in Scotland revealed that the firm was closing for vacation. They called back, agreeing to loom the fabric and we relaxed. A call from the airlines. The package had been lost somewhere enroute.

More calls. This time to Montreal where 74 yards of the original looming were located, and another to London which netted 56 yards. The job proceeded on schedule.

At last, all was ready—complete to flowers on the table and linen on the beds—and the Nixons were making their first visit.

At 3 that afternoon, the Cannell's phone rang, and they were invited to San Clemente at 5.

With his wife, in typical female fashion saying her hair was a mess and she had nothing to wear, they climbed in their car and traveled to the Western White House where they basked in an hour and forty-five minutes of First Family compliments.

Completing the well-rounded look at the interior of the home that snuggles privately on a cliffside overlooking the Pacific, were talks by Cleon Knapp, publisher of Architectural Digest in which the story is told, and by George Szanik, noted interior photographer who makes the house come alive in gorgeous color photographs.

WESTERN WHITE HOUSE living room is entirely done in shades of yellow and gold, with only a chair and footstool of blue to bring indoors the lovely ocean view seen from huge, arched windows. Drawing by Staff Artist Erwin DeGroot from photograph by George Szanik.

Karpin on bridge

by Fred L. Karpin

One of the better players in the theatrical world was the late Tallulah Bankhead. From a technical point of view, she was not a good bidder, primarily because she felt that life was too brief to spend time mastering the many types of specialized bids that, in her opinion, arose all too infrequently. However, she was an excellent player of the cards, as the deal today demonstrates. Miss Bankhead was in the South seat.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

When West's queen of clubs opening rode around to Miss Bankhead, she did not first win the trick and then pause for reflection. Instead, she reflected before playing to the first trick.

It was readily apparent that if either the king of diamonds or the ace of hearts were favorably located (in East's hand), then the fulfillment of the contract would be a cinch. But Miss Bankhead assumed, in the pessimistic fashion that is characteristic of the expert approach, that West possessed both of these key cards.

If, Miss Bankhead reasoned, the heart ace were located in West's hand, it was imperative that East be kept out of the lead, since a heart shift by him would enable the defenders to cash two heart tricks. And so Miss Bankhead geared her play to keeping East out of the lead — she permitted West's club queen to capture the opening lead.

WEST THEN continued with a low club, East's king falling to South's ace. The king of trumps was then led, and this was followed by a trump to dummy's ace. Next came the queen of diamonds and South finessed, losing to West's king. Hoping his partner held the heart king, West now cashed the ace of hearts, and then led another heart. As is evident, South took the rest of the tricks.

Had Miss Bankhead captured the opening lead with the club ace, she would have gone down. In this case, upon winning his diamond king, West would have led a low club to East's king. East would then have made the automatic shift to the heart queen, and the defenders would have cashed two heart tricks.

Elizabeth Boyer weds Army captain

Planning a delayed honeymoon trip to Europe this summer are Capt. John A. Di Muro, U.S. Army, and Mrs. Di Muro (Elizabeth M. Boyer), who were married Saturday afternoon during a Nuptial Mass in Ft. MacArthur Chapel, San Pedro.

The bride chose a white velvet Juliet style gown for her marriage to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Di Muro of Sherman Oaks.

Mrs. Ronald Hess was matron of honor for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Boyer, 2203 Vuelta Grande Ave. Attending as bridesmaid was Mrs. William Dager.

Mark Richards was best man and James Armstrong seated guests.

A reception in Ft. MacArthur Officers Club followed the ceremony.

The birde, a graduate of St. Anthony High School and Immaculate Heart College, Los Angeles, is currently employed as a stewardess with American Airlines in San Francisco. Her husband, an alumnus of Notre Dame High School, Sherman Oaks, also attended Santa Clara University. He is presently stationed at Ft. Ord.

The newlyweds will reside in Santa Cruz.

Miller-Sparks engagement told

Mrs. Cletus S. Miller of Long Beach announces the engagement of her daughter, Nancy Anne, to Charles T. Sparks III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Grasman of Long Beach. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Mr. Miller.

Miss Miller, an alumna of Lakewood High School and Long Beach City College, is now attending California State College at Long Beach.

Her fiance graduated from Lakewood High School and is now attending Long Beach City College.

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

Tammy's Voice—Bahston Plus Britain

NEW YORK — Tammy Grimes' voice has been likened to the sound of "a rusty key being turned in a boudoir lock" . . . "the seductive rustle of a silk negligee" . . . "the gurgle of rare brandy."

Tammy's fame is mounting again, she has her bright cat's eyes pinned on a Tony award for her Amanda role in the Noel Coward revival, "Private Lives" — and she was somewhat astonished when I told her that she was wonderful but that she caricaturized womanhood.

Miss Grimes, who's even a greater table actress than a stage actress, dropped her jaw almost to the floor.

"I don't think so!" She was having wine with dinner in Sardi's between shows. She slumped back against her seat and fixed her eyes on the ceiling. "The people in this show are the rich hippies of 1931. I do not lean so much on my personality because the part of Amanda is so good."

YES, IN SOME shows "you have to react vocally or facially," but according to her, she doesn't in this show. (According to her!)

The fact is that Tammy's known she was a comedienne since she was 13. She played a lady-in-waiting in "Victoria Regina," in Chestnut Hill, Mass.

"I got a tremendous laugh and all I did was bow to the queen. I could never figure out why." Her voice at this point became a shade — a slight shade only — Missourian. Tammy went to Stevens College in Missouri but she'll never be thought Middle Western.

"And can you make people cry as well as laugh?" . . . "Yes." . . . "When did you?" . . . "Today."

There's a hint of tears when she sings "Some Day I'll Find You" — but there was more when in "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" she swept down the grand balustrade to welcome the guest who had snubbed her and not come to the party.

It was in "Molly Brown," she confessed to me, that she frequently didn't like the audience and longed to tell them, "No matter what you paid, you're a bad audience. So please just do me one favor and leave — go see 'Spartacus.'"

Some readers thought she had actually said it — and she became known as "The Terrible Tempered Tammy Grimes."

TAMMY SAYS her voice is a "combination of Bahston with a little British thrown in" — she swears she doesn't practice it.

She picked up some from Noel Coward, who directed her in "Look Out for Lulu." He also told her "You were the greatest Elvira" in "High Spirits" — "but be sure to keep your tummy in." What did Noel mean by that? "Merely that he would have preferred a woman with a flatter tummy."

Married to Christopher Plummer and then to Jeremy Slate and now single, Tammy says actors and actresses while married can make a go of it even though very very famous.

"Who ever did it?"

"Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton!"

"And do you have any such plans?"

"When I do" — her dreamy eyes were again on the ceiling — "you'll be the fust to know."

THE WEEKEND WIND-UP: Veteran producer Sam Spiegel says dealing with today's young superstar is a problem: "What inducement can you offer someone whose ambition is to live in a hippie commune?" . . . Danny Thomas'll open a string of shish kabob stands. . . . Lynn Redgrave's film, "The Virgin Soldiers," earned back its entire cost in Europe; the U.S. engagement'll be pure profit. . . . The only gal seen in "Patton" is Sally Frei — shown as a pinup in Yank.

Lyricist Carolyn Leigh's on a 500-calorie-a-day diet, slashed off 78 lbs. so far. . . . Recording exec Jimmy Wisner is flying to Paris to be "music consultant" to Sacha Distel. . . . There'll be two Clarks on the same bill at Las Vegas Caesares Palace next summer: Roy (of "Hee Haw") and Petula. . . . Stan Ross, Jackie Gleason's one-time "I'm with yewwww" stooge, has a big role in "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls."

New way to work your way through college: MGM hired 300 San Francisco State students to "riot" for "Strawberry Statement," 20th C-Fox used NYU'ers for "John & Mary" extras. . . . One of the top record hits in Rome belongs to Romina Power, dtr. of Linda Christian and the late Tyrone Power. . . . Oliver Reed was so happy with smog-free Zermatt, Switzerland (where he filmed "Women in Love") that he bought a home there.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Rodney Dangerfield claims his son attends the toughest school in town: "The teacher got a note from the cops about one student. It said, 'Please excuse Johnny for from 3 to 5 years.'"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Fred Allen once said it about Jack Benny at a testimonial dinner: "The last time he paid $50 a plate, it was to his dentist."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "The best place for your bathroom scale is in front of your refrigerator."

EARL'S PEARLS: Morty Gunty heard that Joe E. Lewis saw the movie "Don't Drink the Water," and suggested that he star in the next one, "Don't Water the Drink."

George Segal romances three girls in his new film, "Loving." He says they already plan a sequel: "They're gonna call it 'Exhausted.'" That's earl, brother.

CARRIES CAMPAIGN TO STUDIO

Art Linkletter has some advice for young members of his audience between taping sessions of his daily television show in Hollywood. Linkletter says his next target in his personal war on deadly drugs is the nations schoolteachers.

SINCE DAUGHTER'S DEATH

Linkletter in Personal War on Drug Abuse

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Since his daughter plunged to her death last Oct. 4 — the victim, he said, of LSD — Art Linkletter has been engaged in a personal war against dangerous drugs.

He has had an evening's discussion in the White House with President and Mrs. Nixon, addressed the nation's governors, appeared before Congressional committees, and spoken to youth groups in colleges and elsewhere.

HE SERVES on a county drug commission and books all the speaking engagements a busy television career will permit.

What can one man do to stop the drug flood?

"Just a little," Linkletter says. "No one ever knows. But if I can save one kid's life, anything I do is worth it."

His next target will be the nation's schoolteachers.

Through a film aimed specifically at them, the entertainer says, he will try "to educate teachers in how to look for the danger signals, how to handle the drug problem in school."

Diane, 20, the youngest of his five children, fell to her death from her sixth-floor apartment. "It wasn't suicide," Linkletter said then, "because she wasn't herself. She was murdered by the people who manufacture and sell LSD."

TWO DAYS later the grieving father said: "I think my daughter's death will be paid for many, many times by the kinds of things I can say and get done, using this as an example."

And since then, he says, "I think I have made a small dent on the American awareness of the vast proportions of the problem, and the need for community action starting right in the family."

Linkletter, 57, a tall man pink-cheeked from skiing weekends at his Lake Tahoe lodge, sat in his big office trimmed with trophies, plaques and tributes to his 35 years as a radio and television star.

SINCE DIANE'S death, he recalled, he had spent a long evening with the Nixons in the White House discussing "the problems that face families, whether it's dope, runaways or family breakups. I can tell you that the President is concerned, with a deep, angry, personal concern, at what's going on with the kids."

Kramer to Depict Campus Revolt

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Can a successful, rich, middle-aged producer capture the spirit and philosophy of campus revolt in a motion picture?

Stanley Kramer, producer of "On The Beach," "Champion," "Inherit The Wind" and "The Secret of Santa Vittoria" among dozens more, thinks he can and is, in fact, attempting it in his new film, "R.P.M."

The story deals with campus rebellion, activism and anarchy.

What, Kramer was asked, if youth sees the picture and scoffs at an establishmentarian attempting to comprehend their revolution?

"I don't think they will," said Kramer, sure of himself.

"I'm already in a counter-revolutionary state. We old revolutionaries, who have been by-passed and discarded by the youngsters, must provide the means for the present revolt to reach its goals."

AS A PRECAUTION against being out of touch, Kramer has employed a young activistic anarchist to act as technical advisor for the picture.

It is filmed partially on location at University of Pacific in Stockton, Calif., which has never experienced a campus uprising.

Long a rebel himself, making films of social significance, Kramer said, "we have everything for a political, spiritual and artistic revolution to make a better world."

He was speaking of his own generation.

"Maybe some of us who have lived longer and have been in revolt longer, can provide the pipeline for youth to express itself in practical terms.

"You don't need to know the cure for leprosy to know a guy has it. Same holds true for young revolutionaries who don't know the answers, but they know something is wrong.

"We shouldn't expect them to know the cures. They aren't qualified. Their function is to call attention to the problems. It is up to us — the people who care — to provide the solutions."

Kramer did not come out and say he was one of those who cares more than others about American institutions or morality. One must assume his past motion pictures are his credentials. They would appear to be.

The fact remains, however, that Kramer is not a now person by campus standards. Kramer maintains, "I support the college kids. My picture says they can't get what they want by rioting. The ends simply do not justify the means.

Career of American Director Traced in Lucid Critical Study

By VINCENT CANBY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In George Stevens' 1934 film version of Booth Tarkington's "Alice Adams," the heroine, the small-town girl from the wrong side of the tracks, wins the hand of the rich young man from the right side of the tracks — an upbeat alteration of the novel in which Alice goes off to become a secretary, and probably a spinster. In Stevens' film version of "The Diary of Anne Frank," made 25 years later, little Anne, just before she and her family are carried off to a concentration camp, Looks up at a sky of fleecy white clouds and says: "I still believe — in spite of everything — that people are basically good . . . I think the world is going through a phase — like I am with mother."

In his generally fine, lucid critical study, "George Stevens: An American Romantic," Donald Richie traces the career of one of America's most successful directors of mass entertainment in terms that Richie sees as the maturation of Stevens' romanticism. It isn't simply that Stevens' films no longer have happy endings, imposed from without, but that his characters, including Anne Frank, Shane and Jesus Christ, have chosen "to believe, to affirm, to say yes to life . . . This affirmation in the face of knowledge is an entirely different thing from the ignorant and facile affirmation of the man who has no idea of the horror that life can become."

I'm not convinced that this new affirmation is entirely different from the old, and it's one of the few things with which I disagree in Richie's extremely intelligent book, the first full-length study of the man who, I feel, reached his peak in the 1930's and 1940's with such films as "Gunga Din," "Swing Time," "Woman of the Year," and "The Talk of the Town."

LBAA dons new look for new venture

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Long Beach Art Association is an organization of Southern California artists who meet and exhibit in their gallery at 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

In recent weeks, many of the painters have forsaken canvas and other surfaces to spread their paint on walls of the gallery in a vast redecorating project.

Their purpose is to have the gallery renovated for initiation of a new undertaking — a rental gallery to operate in conjunction with the display gallery.

Both the rental program and a new show, "Painting Is Like Music," will open next Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

Eleanore Smith has headed the redecorating committee, assisted by Dorothy Harvey, George Jordan, Elaine Stone, Jean Hartt and Elizabeth Taylor. An ex-officio member, who made such pragmatic contributions as building cabinets and brushing paint, was Eleanore's husband, Municipal Court Judge Charles Smith.

To establish rules for the rental gallery, chairman Hilda Utecht, LBAA president Betty Anne Kirkpatrick and Lois Venne surveyed similar enterprises from San Diego to San Bernardino. All LBAA members are eligible to exhibit, but their work must have been juried in at least two shows. A variety of media and subject matter will be for rent and if a patron wants a kind of work not on display, every effort will be made to find it for him.

RENTAL FEES for a two-month period are set on a sliding scale — a minimum of $5 for work valued from $1 to $75, to $19 for work valued from $426 to $600. In addition to this two-month charge which goes to the artist, there is a $2 handling fee retained by the gallery.

The renter, of course, has the option to buy the art of his choice. "We think this is an ideal way for people to select art — to live with it in their home or office for a while before deciding whether or not they want to buy. After all, no artist wants anyone to buy his art and then to be unhappy with it," said Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

Rentals may be transacted during regular gallery hours — 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays and 7:30 to 9 p.m. the first and third Tuesdays of each month. The gallery is closed Mondays.

ONE-MAN shows opening Tuesday in the new Pasadena Art Museum, Colorado and Orange Grove Boulevards, include new and recent work by Richard Serra, Craig Kauffman and Robert Morris.

Also on display will be Japanese prints from the Frank Lloyd Wright collection; works from the permanent collection; new acquisitions; Blue Four and sculpture; work by architect-designer A. B. Heinsbergen; and Joseph Kosuth's conceptual art.

Serra, one of the important new sculptors from New York, is creating a massive sculpture within the museum galleries especially for the Pasadena show.

Morris will display metal sculpture and four large felt pieces which he has made at the museum.

Kauffman, West Coast artist who works primarily in biometric plastic shapes, has a survey of his series dating from 1966.

New museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays; noon to 5 p.m. Sundays; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays; closed Mondays. Parking is free.

THROUGH MARCH the Wayne Long Ethnic Art Collection may be seen at Otis Art Institute Gallery, 2401 Wilshire Blvd.

More than 400 objects from around the world include examples from Africa, the Pacific area, India, South America, Mexico, Japan, China, Iran, Cambodia, Thailand, England, Italy, Java, Tibet, the United States, the Australian Aborigine, the Northwest Coast Indian and the Eskimo.

Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays; 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays; closed Mondays. There is no admission charge.

MEMBERS OF Traditional Artists Guild of Paramount have been invited to exhibit in the California Museum of Science and Industry, Exposition Park, Los Angeles, from Saturday through March 15.

Young musicians in Debut Concert

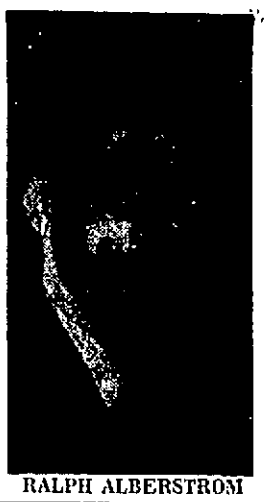

Two young musicians next Sunday will claim honors they won this summer when they earned first and second places in the 1969 Southwestern Youth Music Festival in Long Beach.

Ralph Alberstrom and Jenifer McKenzie will be soloists with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in the annual Debut Concert next Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium. Admission will be free.

With Alberto Bolet conducting, pianist Alberstrom, 18, will perform Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 4." First place winner in the Amateur Championship Division of the 1969 SYMF competition, Alberstrom had won first place in the Chamber Music Division in the 1968 SYMF competition and the 1969 Junior Bach Festival.

MISS MCKENZIE, who won second place in the amateur championships, has received numerous awards. Now 21, she has been studying the flute since the age of 10. A music major at California State College, Fullerton, she has performed with the Riverside Opera and the San Bernardino Symphony. In addition to her second place award in the 1969 SYMF, she won first place in the orchestral instruments competition that year. After graduating in June from CSCF, she will attend a conservatory to study for her master of music degree in performance.

Next Sunday she will play "Concerto for Flute and Orchestra" by Nielsen. Bolet also will conduct the orchestra in Three Dances from "The Bartered Bride" by Smetana.

YOUNG CHORISTERS SING IN ST. STEPHEN'S CATHEDRAL, VIENNA

Vienna Choir Boys mark silver anniversary in U.S.

The Vienna Choir Boys will make their silver anniversary appearance in the United States in two performances Saturday, Feb. 7, under auspices of S. Hurok. Programs are scheduled at 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion.

The choir, composed of 22 boys ranging in age from 8 years to just prior to the time of change of voice, will come directly from Vienna from an institution begun by royal Hapsburgh (Maximilian) decree in 1498.

Visitors to Vienna can hear the choir in the baroque Hofmusikkapelle, in St. Stephen's Cathedral, and often in performances requiring children in the Vienna State Opera.

The Walt Disney movie, "Almost Angels," dealt with a typical member of the choir. The vivacious youngsters have appeared often on major television programs and in a gala New Year's Eve production of "Die Fledermaus" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

FOR THEIR Los Angeles program they will perform a one-act comic opera, "Herr und Madame Denis," by Jacques Offenbach, a merry bedlam of mistaken identity, abductions from convents, and frustrated police who are taken in by impersonations.

Other numbers will be "The Blue Danube" by Johann Strauss, "Pastorale and Happiness" by Schubert, "Sound of the Trumpet" by Purcell, "Duo Seraphim" by Ludovico da Viltoria, "The Gypsy Chews Tobacco" by Kodaly, and "131st Psalm" by Anglberger.

Tickets are now on sale at The Music Center box office and agencies.

CSLB art faculty show is 'thoughtful'

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Nine members of the CSLB art faculty are exhibiting at the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave. The foyer show offers a fine opportunity to view this work without braving the perils of parking at the college.

Those familiar with the work at the college will find old-timers (John Martin, Orval Dillingham and Kenn Glenn) in new modes of investigation and will be interested in the work of newcomers Stephen Werlich (here about 5 years), Laird Plumleigh, Robert Harris, Richard Miller, Paul Donaldson and Pete Mendez; all but Plumleigh did their graduate work here.

It is interesting to see, for example, how closely sculptor Miller follows the idiosynratic treatment of the abdominal area, and to examine the elegant articulation of hands and feet of Stephen Werlich.

However, Miller really does his own thing in "Multiple Woman" in which six, 10-inch high identical figures fan out from their attachment at the head, with only one having feet on the ground. This non-rational composition suspends our disbelief.

WERLICH, whose bronzes are well within the traditional vein, never cloys or bores. His large figure, "Crouching Woman," is a play of one gorgeous volume against others. In "Expulsion" and "Man and Woman," the interpenetration of space is baroque, yet sparing and restrained.

Martin and Dillingham continue to investigate a way of seeing with which they have been, in a parallel sense, involved for the last several years. It is the juxtaposition of realities, the painterly real object, historical reference, painting from overexposed photos, and the painting of humble, everyday objects on a grand scale. Stenciled letters, and reminiscences of news shots, radar shots, and binoculars form an abstract pattern in John Martin's "The Wreck of the Nancy."

"MEMORY AND ME" is the title of Laird Plumleigh's only offering, a provocative penline. Memory is the subject and feeling of Paul Donaldson's several small washes.

Though Pete Mendez did all his work at CSLB, he doesn't work like anyone else. There is nothing tentative in his semi-surreal approach. I don't know why "The Old Bob Dylan" turns into a fanged jungle cat, or "Pocho Pete" has stripes like a tabby on one side of his face, but I'd like to know. "Dancing Cadavers" is a virtuoso view of forms upward, as though through a glass floor.

In this group show, there is a splendid opportunity to view peacefully a body of very thoughtful work. The show continues through Feb. 1, with viewing hours every day and evening except Friday night.

NO REPORT CARDS

Students Set Their Own 'Learning Pace' at School

By VINT MADER
Staff Writer

Additions range from microscopes to paper gorillas and live chickens at Stephen Foster Elementary School, playing an upstage role in the drama of American educational change.

Delethons at the Bellflower Unified School District school under a 2½-year-old project have included the traditional one-grade classrooms and their fixed-schedule, graded report cards.

Bellflower is among 18 Southern California school districts selected as a varied cross-section, that entered one school each in the League of Cooperating Schools project, organized through the UCLA School of Education with a Charles F. Kettering Foundation research grant.

The venture seeks expanded levels of learning at their own best rates for Foster's 514 students, says Principal Gerard Cook, rather than pushing or restraining them to a rigid instructional pace.

ABOLISHING six years of "vertical" grades, the school puts the pupils in four fluidly ascending groups designated A to D, based on 14 teachers in home rooms.

Another innovation is separate science and math labs, a music room and a well-stocked library, to all of which D-group students go frequently from the home rooms to pursue their own projects with a specialist teacher — an anticipation of junior and senior high school scheduling.

"We are strongly emphasizing the individuality of the children, and their learning through independence and self-direction, rather than by being coerced," says Cook.

In educational terms, this is "unstructured" learning, even previewing the time-honored responsibility of the student on university campus to pursue courses of study without daily grading.

THOUGH GROUPS A and B are structured under the home teachers' supervision, students side by side there are regularly working on different subjects or levels of study, and they can secure permission to go to the specialized rooms when home and lab teachers agree they are benefiting from individual work there.

The C group is a transitional level, where the students advance to additional unstructured studies.

Unique to elementary schools, the science lab offers the microscopes and other instruments to encourage higher-level ambitions, including electronic equipment.

The school district, Cook noted, has recently made an application for federal funds to improve the math lab, which he considers to be still under-equipped.

In the science lab, nonpoisonous reptiles have been raised in indoor tanks, rabbits and chickens kept in outdoor cages and gardens cultivated.

ANOTHER specialty that is a joy to almost all students who work there, a challenging to opportunity to some and a frustration-curing relief to others is the school's project room.

Here pupils can model relief maps, towns, farms and other structures in pursuit of ideas originating in their classroom studies. Materials from paper, glue and wood to plaster of Paris are available, and projects have included near-lift-size gorilla and rhinocerous in papier mache.

There have been some parental objections to the free reins of Foster School, but Cook notes that there has also been enthusiasm among families, with about 20 volunteer parents currently participating in a teachers' aid program.

THE STRONGEST objections, says the principal, have arisen over the lack of the traditional report cards, replaced with what he calls "anecdotal progress reports," issued when he or the teachers feel a student's showing warrants a note of compliment or of caution to the parents.

Over 2½ years of reaction to these notes, which usually reflect more than one teacher's view on whether the youngsters are delivering their best efforts, Cook says he finds the objections are mostly in two categories.

In the case of bright children, the parents want the reassurance that a list of high marks conveys, rather than a written opinion that the student can scale to higher accomplishments.

THESE STUDENTS, he says, "have traditionally sailed through school using only half of their brains," and are the ones who benefit most if led higher.

In the other category, parents of children who actually have to struggle with academic demands, tend to blame the change of educational approach. In this instance, says Cook, the child's effort is often exemplary, and teachers' notes praising it help sustain it far more than would a stark record of low marks.

"But if the parents are so unhappy that they really want a child transferred out of the school," he said, "I do everything I can."

Over the 2½ years, he estimates, those who firmly wanted children out have evenly balanced with those who sought to transfer their children into the school of changing education, totaling about 15 on each side.

Red Cross Alters Blood Donor Hours

Beginning Feb. 1, new blood donor hours will be in effect on Wednesday and Thursday in the Red Cross Donor Center, 340 W. Willow St. New hours are from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The center, opened a year ago, has been operating on those two days from 2 to 6 p.m.

Monday and Tuesday hours, from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m., will remain the same.

Blood donors may now continue to donate up to age 66, under relaxed California regulations. The previous cutoff date was age 60.

"We hope the new hours will accommodate donors and blood center volunteers as well. We need them both," said Richard Codd, blood program chairman.

Mrs. Mary C. Bugbee Dies; Services Slated

Requiem mass for Mrs. Mary C. Bugbee, former resident of Long Beach, will be held Monday in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Clarendon, Tex. Entombment will be in the Bugbee family Mausoleum in Clarendon.

Mrs. Bugbee, widow of a pioneer Texas cattleman who had extensive ranch holdings in the Panhandle of Texas, lived at 2919 E. 1st St., Long Beach, from 1919 until 1942. Her father-in-law was the second white man in the Panhandle of Texas and pioneered the development of the area.

Despite her small size, Mrs. Bugbee used to delight in telling of the early ranching days "when it was nothing for us to cook breakfast for 50 ranch hands."

In 1942 Mrs. Bugbee moved to 135 E. Ralston St., San Bernardino, where she made her home with one of her three daughters, Miss Mary Isabel (Sis) Bugbee.

IN ADDITION to Miss Bugbee, the other surviving daughters are Mrs. Ethel Long of San Bernardino and Mrs. Betty Poole of South Pasadena. All three daughters received their schooling in Long Beach.

In addition to the daughters, there are five grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

New Orleans has its new drummer for Mardi Gras

IMAGINATIONS RUN UNCHECKED in the design of hundreds of colorful floats paraded through the streets of New Orleans during Mardi Gras which this year will be held on Feb. 10.
(Delta Air Lines photo)

—NEW ORLEANS — There he goes again: it's that different drummer New Orleans always marches to about this time of year. Playing that old familiar Mardi Gras tattoo, and oops, pardon me, coming through please, we'll try to keep the pace.

Thoreau's wisdom might have its applications to Mardi Gras even — but at Walden Pond Thoreau didn't have to, oops, fight the crowds.

Like Irving Berlin wondered who wakes the bugler up, at Carnival time one wonders who taught our different drummer that inane, carefree, joyous beat. The city is building toward the big day, Feb. 10, Mardi Gras, a day when New Orleans is out of step with normal routines and is enjoying the great free show it stages for its own people and anyone else who cares to see it.

Carnival fantasy actually takes to the streets with the first parade on Jan. 31. This year there will be 35 parades in 11 days, giving promise that Mardi Gras 1970 will be more exciting than ever. Last year one of the most extravagantly-staged parades ever seen by Carnival throngs made its debut. This was the Krewe of Bacchus, whose huge, animated floats created a sensation with New Orleanians. The new parade is expected to be even larger when it rolls the Sunday before Mardi Gras.

MOST VISITORS for Carnival arrive for the final four days, when no less than 14 parades will appear on the streets.

The New Orleans Tourist Commission suggests that visitors can have as much fun as Orleanians who have years of practice in the Mardi Gras art. Basic to this is planning to costume.

On Mardi Gras, Canal and Bourbon Streets become a crossroads of the bizarre. A band of gorillas roams behind an Abraham Lincoln, a living whiskey bottle and a group of court jesters. Other costumes may not be quite so literal, some may consist of body paint, plumes and sequins. Families may dress as clowns or a tribe of Indians. The masker cloaks his identity behind his fanciful garb and in this way even a conservative banker can have a fling.

Traditionally, each person can then become more reflective on the somberness of Lent, which begins next day, Ash Wednesday.

MUCH OF carnival's ritual is tucked away from the sight of visitors, however. These are the elaborate balls which are staged by the social organizations known as "krewes." Following its parade a Krewe will hold an elaborate ball at the Municipal Auditorium. The social season in New Orleans has become closely associated with Carnival and the season's debutantes are often presented to the mock royalty of the evening.

A high point of any debutante's year would be to belong to the court of the Mystic Krewe of Comus, most venerable of the Carnival krewes.

Comus appeared on the streets of New Orleans in 1857, with horse-drawn floats presenting the theme "Heathen Gods and Goddesses." Each year, then the Carnival krewes present a parade built around a different theme. The subject may range from mythology to literature to Mother Goose.

AND AS the parade season approaches, the most jaded New Orleanians feel their pulses quicken, even if only slightly. A Mardi Gras parade can tell an entire tale, can re-create chapters from childhood only dimly remembered. Mardi Gras is a diet of fantasy for 10 days and it takes a callous soul not to be moved by at least some part of the celebration.

Carnival in New Orleans is actually a living part of the city. The 10 days of parades could not be subtracted or removed as an element of the culture without actually damaging the remainder of the year. Without its few days of carnival there is no doubt that New Orleans would be much different at all other times. It might remain somewhat apart in its way all the same, but it would nevertheless be much different.

Any visitor should try to establish that sort of rapport with the festival and he would understand it better. It is after all nice to know that after it's over this time, next year it will roll around again.

Senior citizens travel club seeks members

The 1970 membership drive for Golden Tours, a senior citizens' travel club sponsored by the Recreation Department, is now under way, according to Jack E. Dillon, supervisor of senior citizen activities.

The club arranges one-day and overnight tours to various educational and entertainment centers, and expenses are shared by those participating in a specific trip.

Previous Golden Tours trips have been to Marineland, Huntington Library, San Diego Zoo, the Pilgrimage Play, various national parks, and to Hawaii.

Membership costs $1 a year. Senior citizens may join by applying in person at the Golden Tours office, 350 E. Ocean Blvd., Dillon said.

DECATHLON ASPIRANTS APPLY HERE

You see them on every flight.

And think they're amateur wing-walkers.

They pace up and down the aisle, literally walking themselves to a destination such as on a Los Angeles - Dallas flight.

These pace-setters will really have their room unconfined when Delta Air Lines places the Boeing 747 into service next October.

A walk 13 times around the cabin interior equals one mile. Flying at 10 miles a minute, well, a passenger could walk around the airplane in an average time of 20 minutes to the mile.

The flight stewardesses will beat them all.

Bermuda floral event Apr. 16-18

HAMILTON, Bermuda — This mid-Atlantic island's Botanical Gardens will take on a fresh, spring face as floats made from thousands of Easter lilies and other fragrant blossoms take their place among the customary livestock, flower and vegetable exhibits at the annual Agricultural Exhibition scheduled April 16-18.

The colorful floats — representing the island's schools and parishes — will replace Bermuda's annual Floral Pageant, which has been suspended owing to dwindling numbers of available workers.

Southland Mountaineer Robinson Reaches a New Peak—As an Author

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

John Robinson, a Long Beach native and now of Newport Beach, made a reputation a few years ago as the mountaineering authority on Baja California. He has tempered his active mountaineering career in favor of authorship.

The author of the mountaineers' "Baja Bible," called "Camping and Hiking in Baja California," is devoting all his spare time these days to research and writing on the mountain ranges of Southern California.

"I haven't given up on Baja, or mountaineering," the soft-spoken junior high school teacher says, "but I have become more interested in the colorful past of our mountains here in Southern California."

ROBINSON, who was born in Long Beach's old Seaside Hospital and was graduated from Fremont Elementary School, Jefferson Junior High and Wilson High School in 1947, first learned about camping and hiking at the Long Beach YMCA's now-defunct Kamp Kole.

"I find I am a member of what is becoming an exclusive organization called the 'Kamp Kolers,'" Robinson says.

"Since the old camp, which was located on the West Fork of the San Gabriel River, burned down in 1949, there aren't too many of us left."

Kamp Kole has been replaced by the YMCA's larger, more elaborate Camp Oakes in the San Bernardino Mountains.

ROBINSON attended the camp during the summers from 1939 to 1942 and developed love of mountains that he has never lost.

He joined the Sierra Club in 1955 and became active in the Sierra Peaks Section, the Desert Peaks Section and the Hundred Peaks Section, the three organizations within the club that emphasize mountain climbing, as opposed to hiking.

"I became something of a 'peak bagger,'" he says now. "It was fun but when I got married in 1959 I had to tone down on the weekends away from home."

It was about this time that he became interested in the history of the mountains he had climbed.

In 1958 Robinson climbed Picacho del Diablo (Peak of the Devil) in Baja California with the Desert Peaks Section. The mountain has since been renamed by the Mexican government. It is now called "Cerro de la Encantada" (Mountain of the Enchanted One) on all Mexican maps.

"The area was really wild then," Robinson recalls. "I was enchanted with it."

HE WENT BACK into the two Mexican national parks, the Sierra Juarez and the Sierra San Pedro Martir, numerous times and in 1965 was commissioned to write his book.

"For two years I researched the area," he says. "I made at least 20 special trips through the area to learn and chart the trails before I started to write."

The book, through three revisions, with a fourth upcoming, has built a solid foundation as THE book for the Baja mountaineer.

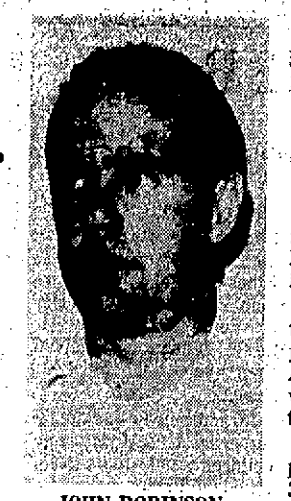

As a result of his painstaking work, he was asked to edit the diary of Jose Joaquin Arrillaga, an early explorer of the area. It was published by Dawson's Book Shop in Los Angeles under the title: "Jose Joaquin Arrillaga; The Diary of His Surveys of the Frontier in 1776."

HE IS NOW working on the soon-to-be-published pictorial history of the Mt. Wilson area, titled "In the Shadow of Wilson's Peak."

It will be published by Golden West Books of San Marino and will contain more than 200 pictures of the Mt. Wilson, Mt. Lowe area, including many on the old Mt. Lowe railroad.

When that one is finished Robinson has plans for books on the San Bernardino Mountains and then the San Jacintos, which should keep him busy for a while.

All this has to sandwich in with his job teaching at Davis Junior High School in Costa Mesa, where he also coaches basketball.

JOHN ROBINSON

Pageant of Masters Cast Volunteers Being Sought

If you'd like to be on stage, but would be too embarrassed to have a speaking role, perhaps the famed Pageant of the Masters at Laguna Beach is for you.

It soon will be casting time for the production, a part of the Festival of Arts, which portrays works of art in "living pictures."

A get-together for the potential cast will be Jan. 31 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Irvine Bowl, and on Feb. 1 from 2 until 5 p.m. at the same place.

Casting directors Karla Allen and June Hutter said that "it's fun. All the glamor of show business without the nerve-wracking aspects like auditioning or having to learn lines."

AT THE get-together, volunteers are measured and photographed — hopefully to "fit" them into some portrayal.

The casting directors said they will need 800 volunteers this year, because Pageant Producer Don Williamson will enact 53 works of art. They will include 25 of the most-popular of former years, by way of celebrating the pageant's 35th anniversary.

SIMBOL OF "GATEWAY PARIS" program the Arch of Triumph, recently cleaned and scrubbed to look like new. (French Government Tourist Office photo)

'Gateway Paris' drive launched to lure travelers

PARIS — The French Tourist Office, in cooperation with Air France, Air Canada, Air India and Olympic Airways, has inaugurated an ambitious program highlighting Paris as the prime gateway of arrival or departure for European travelers.

The plan offers a tempting array of incentives for U.S. travelers to make Paris their first or last point of contact with Europe during the period through April 30. Included are: one free night with breakfast in a hostelry in the French provinces (either a Chateau-Hotel, Realls de Campagne, Luxury hotel of the Cote d'Azur or Normandy), a complimentary ascent and refreshment at the Eiffel Tower, a gift at the Royal Opera perfume shop, tea and pastry at the Bon Marche department store, visit of the Louvre, visit of Versailles, and one free day of Avis car-rental for any three days of paid rental.

The "Gateway Paris" program is being conducted through U.S. travel agents and the above mentioned airlines from whom booklets are available describing all details of the plan. The agents give their customers certificates enabling them to partake of the various free gifts and services upon arrival in Paris or prior to departure from the French capital. Tourist officials have been delighted with the large numbers of U.S. visitors who have helped make 1969 a record breaking year. Now the "Gateway Paris" program provides a handsome bonus for those visitors who come early in the year and thereby start 1970 off toward even higher goals.

Driving the PanAm highway

By STAN DELAPLANE

GUATEMALA CITY — Friends of mine driving a camper down the Pan American highway report: "We crossed into Guatemala with a minimum of customs inspection — though it takes time for all the paperwork. There are several checkpoints along the way and Sanborn's Travelog is of terrific assistance." (Sanborn's Travel Service, McAllen, Texas. Free information on Mexico and Guatemala.)

"We put into the Motel Plaza here, $2 per night with electric hookup. Three supermarkets within two blocks of the motel. You can buy anything you would at home. Prices on U.S. goods about 25 per cent higher than at home. Imported wine and liquors impossibly high.

"More people speaking English here than we found in Mexico. Very kind and helpful."

I asked them to keep a record of costs — they are going on to Panama. Mexico was very cheap by camper. Probably increases as you go south. I flew these countries, stopping in each capital. PanAm runs a daily flight that stops in each country.

For me the countries become less interesting south of Guatemala. But maybe ground travel would improve the outlook. Good (but not touristy) hotels all along the way.

"We wrote as you suggested to European tourist offices for lists of camping places. Some didn't even bother to answer . . ."

THEN YOU have to go to their main office in the country when you arrive. Government tourist offices are usually civil service — and a landing field of political lame ducks. They turn on a lot of service for me. May short you.

"We will be doing our first skin diving on the island of Cozumel. People have told us you can get bad coral cuts that get infected."

Travel and RESORTS

CORAL CUTS always become infected unless you do something about them. The native remedy is to rub lime juice into them pronto. Wear light sneakers for walking around. And go out with somebody who can point out the dangerous stuff. Fire coral burns enough that you get a red patch on your skin.

In the South Pacific there's a cone shell on the reefs that carried a sting like a rattlesnake. Couple of children — natives — were killed by these last year.

"When is the best time to go to Tahiti?"

DRY WEATHER starts about June. (Friend of mine writes me from Bora Bora today: "Lot of rain, night and day and very hot and humid.") If you go to Tahiti during July you are in the gayest time — the Juillet. The French celebrate July 14. The Tahitians celebrate it the whole month.

Everybody comes in from the outer islands. Big competitions of Tahitian dance groups. That's the dancing where the girl looks like she had her hips in an electric blender. They do this in groups of twenty or thirty. And a group leader — an elderly vahine — walks up and down in the line like a tough drill instructor. Stopping once in awhile to do a bump and grind to show the kids what's what.

Lots of music. Lots of drinking. Lots of love making. Business comes to full stop. Everything stays open all night. People go to bed only when they are exhausted. I've never seen anything to match it — except the Carnival in Rio.

"What is a pension which you mention as cheap living in Europe?"

PENSION in France; Pensione in Italy; Pensao in Portugal. They can be anything from renting out the spare bedroom to a small charming inn. The idea is you get room and meals at a flat price. In Portugal by law the meals include free wine.

You have to take a taxi and shop for these after you get there. They aren't big enough to advertise or get listed with travel agents. But the Government tourist office usually has a list.

The Hotel SS Mariposa is going places
Los Angeles to Alaska

Your choice of eight sailings on this exciting 13-day cruise-vacation, starting June 14.

Check into Matson's sea-going Hotel SS Mariposa right in Los Angeles. And from there, begin a great adventure.

Your itinerary is truly delightful. Your luxurious hotel cruises to Victoria, Juneau, Skagway, Glacier Bay, Sitka, Vancouver and San Francisco, before heading back to Los Angeles.

It's the perfect "two-week" vacation. The pace is leisurely, the fun continuous, the highlights many and memorable. Everywhere, the scenery is spectacular. For instance, you'll sail through the languid, deep blue waters of the famous Inside Passage. Not even the fjords of Norway can compare to its stately beauty. And, for sheer grandeur, you'll never forget sailing through Glacier Bay. Almost 3,600 square miles pierced by magnificent glaciers of immense proportions. Even your hotel staff will stand by the rail in awe. And they've seen it before.

What makes it all so enjoyable, of course, is the superb cuisine, the personal service, and the luxury that's part of a Matson cruise-vacation. Not to mention the simple convenience. You don't have to worry about packing and unpacking, or transportation from place to place, or more than one hotel reservation.

Matson's Hotel SS Mariposa sails for Alaska from Los Angeles June 14 and 27; July 11 and 24; August 6 and 19; and September 1. Matson's Hotel SS Monterey sails from Los Angeles for Alaska June 21.

Make your reservation now. Remember, the Hotels SS Mariposa and SS Monterey carry only a limited number of guests, which assures a congenial atmosphere. Fares for the 13-day cruise-vacation start at $730.

We have a Western White House

LOVELY SPANISH STYLE WESTERN WHITE HOUSE OVERLOOKS PACIFIC OCEAN FROM SAN CLEMENTE HILLSIDE.

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN
Women's Editor

"Look, enjoy, but DON'T reproduce the pictures was the disappointing word given a roomful of reporters who gathered at Los Angeles Home Furnishings Mart for a program on "The Decorating Key to the Western White House."

Disappointing, because there's something inherent in all of us that likes to peek into the private lives of noted personalities, and then share with the world—both pictorially and in the written word.

So the beautiful illustrations of the most famous home in San Clemente which appear in the current issue of Architectural Digest can only be seen if you beg, buy or borrow a copy of the magazine.

Personally, I found the Western White House pictures warm, friendly and inviting.

Mrs. Richard Nixon's love of yellow shows up all over.

It predominates, combined with gold on walls and beamed ceiling, in sinkable cushioned furniture in the living room (the fabric is duplicated in draperies) and in gold carpeting.

It reappears in a gay floral print combined with orange, blue and shades of green in chair and ottoman, drapes and bedspread in her bedroom.

The sunny influence is felt in Tricia's bedroom where a white background floral print is used in draperies, bedspread and one wall, and in the guest house, most frequently used by David and Julie Eisenhower.

The President's bedroom veers from gold other than in wall covering and beamed ceiling, with use of a red and white geometric print.

ART OBJECTS reflecting the Nixon years in public office abound throughout. Occupying a place of honor on the fireplace mantle in the living room is an exquisite gold filigree box, a gift to then-Vice President Nixon from Emperor Haile Selassie.

Another memento is a grouping of ivory carvings gathered from various countries in the Orient during visits there. A replica of the plaque placed on the moon when the first astronauts landed last July, hangs in the President's study.

The entire house was redone by the decorating firm of Cannell & Chaffin, and on hand to explain the project was the firm's president, Joseph K. Cannell.

"The first question I'm always asked," he said, "is how we got the contract.

"It began with a telephone call from Mr. Nixon's attorney whose home we had recently done in Corona del Mar, asking if we would be interested in doing the Western White House.

"Would we!

"We first visited the house on Saturday in early May and were met by the daughter of the then-owners who assured us the Nixons wanted to retain the home as it was—dark beamed ceilings, furnishings of 1927 Grand Rapids Spanish."

In due course, an appointment was made with Mrs. Nixon, and not quite knowing how to proceed, he said a carful of samples was collected and they met in San Clemente in early June.

Spirits of the design team soared, said Cannell, when Mrs. Nixon informed them she wanted the house to be light, airy, fresh, colorful, gay and informal.

"Do you want this Spanish?" we asked.

She favored country fresh furniture and painted surfaces.

"How about the low, dark beamed ceilings? Would you like them painted out to the color of the walls?"

"Wonderful," she commented.

From time to time, Cannell continued, the President would pop into the room to chat or comment, "that's great."

Finally, all was done that could be done on that visit, and next followed a visit by Mrs. Nixon to their design firm.

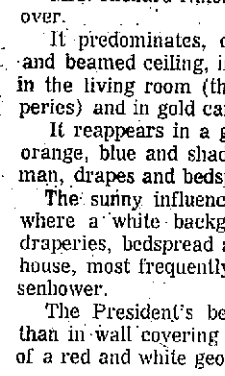

"This was an experience in itself," said Cannell, noting that for each member of the First Family (Mrs. Nixon was joined by her daughters on the visit) there also was a Security Officer.

"We spent five hours going over floor plans, selecting pieces of furniture, and figuring where we could utilize the personal things they were sending from their New York apartment.

From that point on, Mrs. Nixon was kept aware of progress via telephone ("it's amazing—you can reach her any place, any time, through the Signal Corps") and by pen and ink sketches sent to her.

Target date for completion of the home was Aug. 1, which, with a starting date on the home's interior of July 8, would have been impossible, said Cannell, without the complete cooperation of sup-

OLD GOVERNOR'S MANSION TOWERS ABOVE BUSINESS COMMUNITY IN SACRAMENTO

...so how about a governor's mansion?

By JUDY HAZLETT
Home Furnishings Editor

"The next governor may not be so willing to pay his own rent."

Mrs. Ronald Reagan smiled as she quipped with Home Furnishings Editors at the Los Angeles Furniture Mart about the need for a new governor's mansion for California.

After a variety of nerve-wracking experiences in the 92-year-old Victorian-style mansion located in downtown Sacramento, Mrs. Reagan and the governor took matters into their own hands. They moved out.

They moved into the mansion following his inauguration Jan. 1, 1967, and left three months later.

"I had never seen the house before we moved in," Mrs. Reagan said, ". . . and I had no idea it hadn't been kept up." (The State Fire Marshal first declared the mansion a fire hazard in 1941.)

"I called contractors to see about having it painted," she said. "They all told me the wood was too rotten and it would be a waste of time."

As she further described the old structure (built in 1877), Mrs. Reagan recalled their occupancy with a humorous outlook.

"The mansion has many drawbacks — including a motel across the street and service stations (one including a body-fender repair shop) on the other two corners surrounding the home.

"In fact," she said, "several dinner parties were interrupted while diesel trucks changed gears outside the window of the dining room. Ever try talking over that?" she asked with a laugh.

MRS. REAGAN WENT on to explain that as a mother she must first think of the welfare of her children. In such an area, their young son had no chance for playmates since there are no other homes in the vicinity.

The final straw came one night when Mrs. Reagan and her son were in the home alone.

"A fire alarm went off somewhere in the house," she said, "so I grabbed Skipper's arm and we ran for the front yard.

"When the firemen arrived I asked one of them how I should tell an 8-year-old the proper way to get out of his third-floor bedroom in case of a bad fire," she explained.

"He told me to have Skipper take one of the drawers from his dresser, walk to the far side of the room and with the drawer held in front of him

DEAR ABBY

Her exit should provide clue

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A married friend of my husband's is going around with the kind of woman you'd expect would openly go with a married man.

This couple dropped in unexpectedly one night. I was polite, but I told my husband that I did not want that woman in my home, so to please tell his friend not to bring her here again.

Well they dropped by again last night and my husband welcomed them with open arms!

Abby, this woman is rude and ignorant, and spent the entire evening filing her fingernails. The noise of that emery board got on my nerves so severely I finally got up and excused myself.

After they left I told my husband again how I felt, and he said that was "their way of life" and I should accept it. Well, I don't care what they do, or how they live, but I will not "accept" it, and I don't think I should be expected to entertain trash like that in my home. I'd like your opinion. — NEEDS SUPPORT

DEAR NEEDS: If your husband insists upon welcoming into his home people whose unconventional way of life is not acceptable to you, that would seem his "right." It is also your "right" to disapprove and to absent yourself from the company. That ought to tell somebody something; your husband, his friend, and the lady with the emery board.

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is getting along in years, has taken ill and is now confined to her bed. She lives with me, but my biggest problem is keeping some of her friends away from her.

Mother has always been a very sociable person and she loves company, but some of her friends have more time than brains, and after they've paid mother a visit, it takes her days to recover from the setback.

Mother said that one of her friends told her that if she didn't change doctors she was as good as dead, because her doctor didn't know what he was doing.

Other friends bring her the most depressing news about who else is sick, dying, or dead.

I am not able to sit in there and monitor every conversation, so what should I do? — DIGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: With "friends" like your mother has, she doesn't need any enemies. You would do your mother a service to quietly tell the offending visitors to bring only cheerful conversation or stay at home.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I got into a discussion on child-rearing and we disagree on a point we'd like you to settle.

When brothers and sisters get into a fight about something do you think the parents should stay out of it and let the kids settle it in their own way? Or should parents intervene and give the children the benefit of their mature judgment. — B AND L

DEAR B AND L: That depends upon the seriousness of the "fight," the age and sex of the "children," and the "way" they propose to settle it. Children should be taught that "might" does not make right; and the one who slugs the hardest isn't necessarily "right." Parents should use their "mature judgment" in determining whether or not they should intervene.

Chivalrous VCCers save gals from golf raincheck

By PAT McDONNELL

TALK ABOUT CHIVALRY . . . fellows at Virginia Country Club really played Sir Galahad when they made the ultimate in concessions by permitting distaffers on the fairways on a Saturday morn. The girls had been rained out day before while playing final 36 holes in WSCGA tournament. Crisis arose over finalist Mary Elizabeth Shea's golf date in Florida the following Monday.

Either Mary would have to lose by default or miss out on Florida match. Gallant VCCers came to the rescue and 22-year-old Mary won the contest.

Three-day tournament attracted 150 of the Southland's finest women golfers . . . all of whom were good sports about swinging and trudging through the mud. VCCers qualifying were Joan Bescos, Beverly Hallmeyer, Liz MacKenzie, Faye Dallas, Liz Wallace, Judy Ellik, Lou Walters and Margaret Wallace.

Ingenious gals who galleried defied the ooze and wet by wrapping their shoes in plastic baggies. Storm didn't dampen enthusiasm of golf buffs who congratulated chairman Ann Wood on one of club's most successful endeavors.

CIVIC LIGHT OPERA boosters didn't need to see forever . . . only just as far as Ocean Avenue site of company party given in sprawling Spanish home of Katy Brandts. More than 50 members of cast and crew from "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever" gathered for fest which CLO traditionally stages at close of each production.

Highlight was viewing video tapes taken on dress rehearsal night. Getting a chance to see how they look on TV were Carolyn Thomson (escorted by Buddy Doyle), Norm Russell, Glenn Bradley and Claire Carlson. Plaudits were offered Cathy Cords for her layout work on the program and to technical director Allen Mitchell. Others partaking of scrumptuous smorgasbord were John Coy, Rosemary Robedee, James and Frances Sidford, Joan Boelter and Kathy Berry.

PERFECT PRELUDE to Huntington Harbour Yacht Club's installation banquet was cocktail party in H.H. home of outgoing commodore Robert Halfer and wife Mildred. As hostess greeted more than 60 arrivals, she presented an arresting study in black sheer wool — a rhinestone sunburst sole accent on the long-sleeved gown.

Receiving congratulations were HYCC's new commodore Allen Fitzpatrick and his wife Freda and vice commodore Jerry Olson and wife Audrae. Long Beach Yacht Clubbers on hand were Commodore Don and Rosemary Leedom and Bill and Caroline Hardcastle.

SPELLING HAS never been a particular bug-a-boo for Naomi Chandler . . . that is until she made the boo-boo of misspelling name of reservations chairman for Assistance League's third annual Gourmet Series. Naomi is publicity chairman for the five Monday programs featuring demonstrations by chefs of outstanding Southland restaurants.

So imagine Naomi's embarrassment when she submitted information to the I, P-T and inadvertently misspelled name of reservations contact. For the benefit of readers who've had difficulty tracking down reservations chairman in the phone book, her correct name is Mrs. Norman Jacque, 3930 California Ave.

Happy gourmeting, gals.

HEARTS 'N' FLOWERS abounded in Assistance League Clubhouse Friday when Marjorie Dougherty and Ruth Anderson Graham entertained four dozen plus friends at a valentine-themed luncheon. Manola Smith and Zita Remley assisted at gala whee where red and gold carnation floral arrangements were presented each guest.

In keeping with the seasonal motif, Marjorie wore an A-line red silk frock and dressy coat fashioned from gold brocade fabric she purchased in Peking. Ruth turned the tables — colorwise — by wearing a gold dress with red silk coat.

EVERYONE ENJOYS a celebration and if Robert (Spi) Spicer kinda overdoes it today it will be understandable . . . what with four-way aspects of event.

Today is not only Spi's birthday but his and wife Della's 23rd wedding anniversary AND 48th wedding date of his parents, Robert and Amy Ramsay.

Celebration takes on a fourth dimension when you add to it the wedding anniversary of Spi's brother-in-law and wife, Bob and Lee Halter, who are marking seventh date since they said "I do."

Each year the three couples get together to celebrate the 25th — one year they flew to Las Vegas — today they'll dine at the Velvet Turtle after cocktails in 832 Cedar Ave., home of Robert and Amy, who, incidentally, were married in same house in 1922.

THERE WAS A HOUSEFUL of Lindas Saturday when Don and Linda Dyer threw a couples-type bridal shower for Linda Scarfo and Dexter Dyer who will make that center-aisle walk Saturday. Two score couples gathered beforehand at Don and Linda's Stanley Place address to surprise engaged pair who were anticipating a quiet dinner-for-four.

Matron-of-honor-to-be, Linda Commeau, and husband Tom and Linda and John Sumpter were among those voicing a rousing cheer of welcome. Also joining in fest were Evelyn Gruchow and prospective bridegroom's parents, Jack and Shirley Dyer of Lynwood. Bride-elect's clan was represented by her father, Philip Scarfo of Yucaipa, and sister and brother-in-law, Arlene and Bob Kemis.

WSCGA trophy brings gleam to eyes of tourney stars

Escalante, Becker vows read in home

MRS. DALE BECKER

Marian Escalante exchanged nuptial vows with Dale Becker of South Gate during a ceremony Saturday evening in the home of her father, Conrad J. Escalante, 852 E. Ocean Blvd. The bride is also the daughter of Mrs. William Stokes of China Lake.

For her marriage to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Henry Becker of South Gate, the bride chose a formal colonial gown of white peau de soie featuring lace appliqued Victorian collar and cuffs.

Mrs. Samuel Santangelo was matron of honor and bridesmaids included Patricia Mooney, Leila Cunningham, Penelope Jacobs and the bride's sister, Diane Escalante. Mary Ann and Joseph Escalante, sister and brother of the bride, were flower girl and ring bearer.

Herbert Stout performed best man duties and 300 guests were ushered by Steve Pezman, Danny Callahan, Joel Faucetta and Chuck Linnen.

The new Mrs. Becker is a graduate of Western High School, Anaheim, and Long Beach City College. Her husband, an alumnus of Pius X High, Downey, attended California State College, Long Beach.

A dinner reception was held at the Pacific Coast Club following the ceremony. The newlyweds will reside in Seal Beach.

ROME DESIGNER ON FOOD KICK

Pea pods, chicken parts, key collection

By GLORIA EMERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

ROME — The least forgettable number in the Italian spring-summer couture shows last week might just be the long white evening dress splattered with a fried egg design. If it is not that one, the runner-up could be the long dress whose print is raw chicken parts, or the ankle-length black party dress with the pasta print.

The dresses are the newest darlings of the American expatriate Ken Scott, who about 14 years ago moved to Milan, where he dreamed up some of the prettiest prints Americans ever saw. Those days of doing gorgeous flowers in bright colors are over: The new Ken Scotts are all about food.

Typical of the new Ken Scott mood is a short white dress with the chest dominated by the tips of asparagus while the spears run down the skirt. Pineapple, strawberries, cherries, pods bursting open with peas, the ice cream called cassata, which has several flavors in one portion, and even slices of salami make up other prints.

Although the designer has a restaurant in Milan, he says the clothes were not dreamed up in the kitchen.

While Ken Scott's clothes are alive with wit or whimsey, no one, least of all him, thinks that his prints of fried eggs or chicken parts will live forever in the minds of men. His whole approach to fashion, which may be a typically American one these days, is flip and funny. But the Italian designers have become increasingly solemn, it seems. Without accepting the fact most women these days are taking themselves much less seriously.

CRITICS OF the couture collections here say it has been a long time since Rome couture seemed so winded and quite so weary. The long skirts most designers showed was one reason, most of them looked as if panic-stricken men had dropped them the day before they were shown.

An exception was the Antonelli collection this week, whose designer Silvano Malta dropped hems 12 inches from the ground (including heels). What made Silvano's long, close-to-the-body softer silhouettes shine was his own conviction about this look. It is pure 1938, he said today, even if all those little cloche hats come from the decade before.

Roberta Schultz to wed Harvard law student

ROBERTA SCHULTZ

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schultz entertained at a family party in their Long Beach home to reveal the betrothal of their daughter, Roberta Deane, to David Benor, son of Dr. Ethel Benor of Los Angeles and Leon Benor of Jerusalem.

The bride-to-be, a senior at UCLA, is a graduate of Dominguez High School where she was voted outstanding senior and was editor-in-chief of the school newspaper.

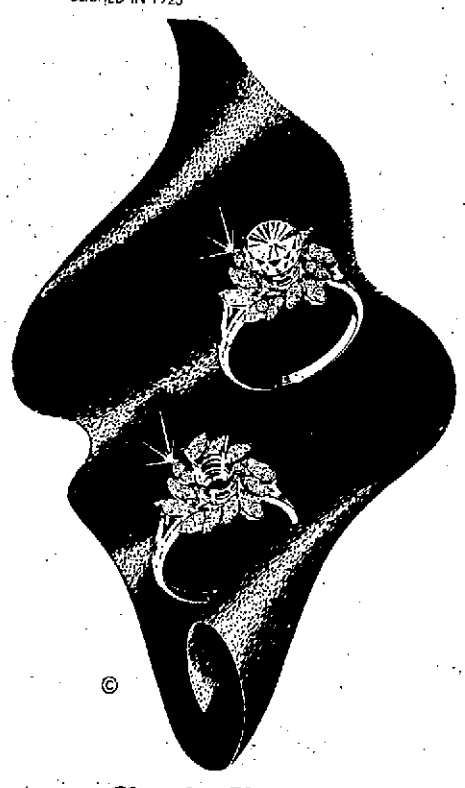

Her fiance was graduated cum laude from UCLA where he was president of the Pre-Law Society. Now in his first year at Harvard Law School, he is affiliated with Phi Beta Kappa and Pi Sigma Alpha.

A June 28 wedding is planned at Temple Beth Shalom where the bride-elect's father serves as president.

AT WIT'S END

Shear victory comes too late

By ERMA BOMBECK

I don't expect anyone to break out in a rash, but I have been looking for my scissors for three weeks.

I've checked all the obvious spots: the bread box, vegetable crisper and under the car battery. I've even checked my child-proof hiding places where items have been known to be relatively safe for years: under the dishtowel, under a bar of soap and behind the snow shovel.

Actually, losing control of my scissors is my own fault. One day I was desperate to find my comb so I said to my youngest, "If you tell Mama where the comb is, I'll tell you where I hide my scissors." At that time I revealed to him that I had hid my scissors in a box under the kitchen sink marked, "Rain Soaked Picnic Plates." It was like telling Fidel Castro where the missiles were hidden. I never saw the scissors again.

"Have you seen my scissors?" I asked my son.

"No, check whats-his-name. He borrowed them three weeks ago to cut his toenails."

"Have you seen my scissors?"

"No, bout two and a half weeks ago SHE grabbed them out of my hands to cut her bangs."

"SHE, have you seen my scissors?"

"Not since Daddy took them a couple weeks ago to cut some electrical wire in the garage."

"Have you seen my scissors?"

"No. Someone took them to chop up marshmallows for a salad, but that was a week and a half ago."

"SOMEONE. Where are the scissors?"

"What's-his-face borrowed them last Sunday to trim the dog, but Tuesday Daddy borrowed them to either clean out the lint trap in the bathroom or prune the mahonia bush."

"Have you seen my scissors?"

"On Wednesday, whats-his-name was cutting up a sheet for a parachute.

"Scissors?"

"A few hours ago SHE was sharpening her ice skates with them?"

"Have you?"

"They're gone! Rotten kid jerked them out of my hand to cut a sole off his shoe that was flapping."

"You got the scissors, Rotten?

"Sure what do you want them for?"

"I forgot."

Harriet Lees is bride in formal rite

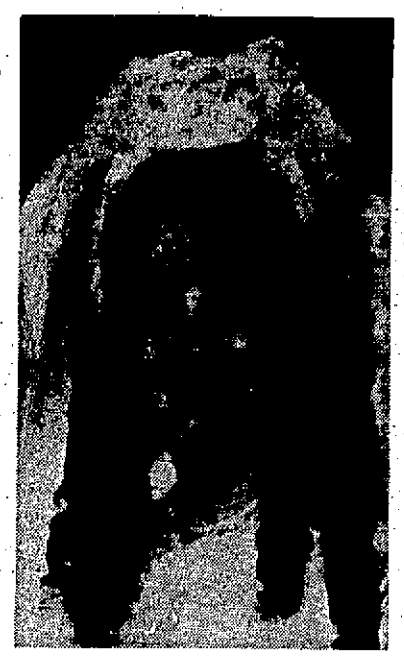

Harriet Kathryne Lees, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry James Lees, 4057 Pine Ave., exchanged wedding vows with Ralph Hamilton Rowland III of Fresno, during a Saturday evening ceremony in California Heights Methodist Church.

The bride chose a formal white satin gown featuring trained silk organza cage appliqued with white roses, for her marriage to the son of Ralph Hamilton Rowland Jr. and Mrs. Ralph Watson, both Fresno residents.

Elizabeth Ibbetson and Mrs. Jack Child were maid and matron of honor.

Lois Williams, Sandi Sorenson, Libby Rowland and Joan Watson, sisters of the bridegroom, were honor attendants. Rica Ibbetson was flower girl and Marc Sunderland, the bride's cousin, and Jack Watson, brother of the bridegroom, acolytes.

Mrs. Dean Sunderland, the bride's aunt, who also sang at the bride's parents' wedding, was soloist.

MRS. RALPH ROWLAND III

Peter Cooper Meux performed best man duties and 250 guests were ushered by James Lees, the bride's brother, Michael Menzies, Dennis Skinner, Scott Whitman and Timothy Totomuto.

A champagne reception, during which a musical trio entertained guests, followed in the Ebell Club of Long Beach.

Upon return from a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, the newlyweds will reside in Los Angeles.

CALIFORNIA SALUTE

Museum notes bi-centennial

In a salute to the state's bi-centennial, California Museum Foundation, a non-profit corporation dedicated to support of California Museum of Science and Industry, will entertain at an invitational open house reception Thursday at the museum in Exposition Park.

The MUSES, women's support group for the museum, and the Docents, women's tour guides, will hostess the gala affair with committee members dressed in authentic period costumes.

The 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. open house will bring together the ladies groups, advisory board, young men's consul group, board of trustees of the Museum Foundation and the state-appointed board of directors, their husbands and wives.

Sponsors of the museum's 19 permanent exhibits and the current temporary exhibitors also will be in attendance.

Following buffet dinner, highlight of the evening will be presentation of the yearly museum calendar, a silk-screened poster done by artist Earl Newman.

MUSIC BY MARIACHI bands will set a merry mood for tours throughout the museum. Special arrangements also have been made to view the Moon Rock, which now is on display at the museum on loan from NASA's Manned Space Center, Houston.

Among Long Beach Women participating as MUSES are Mmes. Llewellyn Bixby Jr., Llewellyn Bixby IV, William Broom, William Graham, William Klingensmith, Leo Vander Lans, Palmer Wentworth, Vaile Young and Donald Muchmore, wife of the Museum Foundation president.

Resorts lure two couples

Cash-Collins

Wedding vows were exchanged by Johnny Clark and Jeanne Michelle Collins Saturday evening at the Chapel of the Wedding Bells in Bellflower.

The former Miss Collins is the daughter of Mrs. Irene Collins, 3545 Lime Ave., and is a graduate of Jordan High School. Her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cash of Torrance.

The bride was attired in an Empire style white crepe gown accented with pearl cuffs and neckline. Her shoulder-length veil was held by a pearl crown headpiece.

Pamela Collins, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Marsha Ellis and Janet Long. Tess Scates was flower girl.

Carl Cash served as his brother's best man with Kenny Cash and Jimmy Cash as ushers. Jamie Cash was the ring bearer.

The newlyweds are honeymooning in Mammoth and will reside in Bellflower.

Lynch-Fisher

Honeymooning in Aspen, Colo., are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Lynch Jr. (Deborah Fisher), who exchanged wedding vows during Saturday noon nuptials in St. Matthew's Catholic Church.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fisher, 3836 E. Fifth St., wore a formal silk taffeta gown trimmed with daisy lace.

Rose Coats attended as maid of honor; Linda Connor and Mary Ann Rosvold were bridesmaids.

Daniel Parry was best man for the son of Mrs. Jim Ferrara of Imlay, Nev., and the late Mr. F. C. Lynch Sr.

The bridegroom's cousins, Richard and Joseph Bechler, seated 100 guests.

A luncheon buffet at the Long Beach Elks Lodge followed the ceremony.

Both young people are currently attending California State College at Long Beach, where the bridegroom is a member of Alpha Kappa Psi.

The newlyweds will reside in Long Beach.

Musical arts

Musical Arts Club will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Covenant Presbyterian Church, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue, for dinner and a program of operatic and light opera selections.

Soloists will be Shirlee Sawers, soprano, and Frank Politeo, tenor. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Fred Ohlendorf, 4220 Heather Road.

Love conquers all for Gwinn Girards

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

Measles: a simple childhood disease.

Not even a disease, really. For a child, German or three day) measles may mean a slight fever or rash. Nothing more.

But to the unborn child who's mother contracted rubella (the medical term for the disease) during the first few months of her pregnancy, it may mean a lifetime of heartbreak and hardship.

In 1964-65, California and the rest of the nation was beset by a measles outbreak of epidemic proportions.

The result: in California alone 1,500 children were born with severe hearing, sight and heart defects. Many of these suffered slight to acute mental retardation as well.

In some cases, couples with children plagued by not one, but many handicaps were unable to accept the financial and psychological burdens thrust upon them. Hundreds of rubella victims were turned over to the state. Their destinies: to lie helplessly in institutions for the rest of their lives.

One couple in Orange County, however, is doing what it can to help these youngsters. They are the 1970 Orange County March of Dimes poster family, the Gwinn Girards.

IN EXPLAINING how they became involved with rubella victims Mrs. Girard said, "When our four children got older, we decided to raise puppies as a spare-time hobby. We bought the dog, but when its first litter died we had second thoughts about the whole thing."

She continued, "We said to ourselves, 'We shouldn't be wasting our time raising puppies. We should be putting our experiences to better purposes.'" Girard is a retired Marine; his wife, a former registered nurse.

Today the Girards have two adopted children and nine other foster children living with them in their Santa Ana home. All were born with some kind of birth defect. Eight are rubella victims.

At first glance, the rubella victim is a pathetic sight.

The cowlick and slight mouth deformity common to most rubella babies is not the only external evidence of the disease. Even the tiniest child must wear extensive hearing equipment and strong corrective glasses.

And that's not the worst of it. While some of the Girard children romp playfully on hobby horses and build houses from colored blocks, others — those who were confined in institutions during their early years — lie listlessly in their cribs.

The annual Mothers March for March of Dimes — this year focusing on birth defects — will be conducted door-to-door throughout the Long Beach area Tuesday. Volunteers for the march still are needed, and interested individuals are urged to call the March of Dimes office, 424-0414.

"THESE CHILDREN, like any others, must be stimulated to develop," Mrs. Girard explained. "They must be encouraged and given love and made to do what they can for themselves.

"We've had children three years old come to us who were still drinking from bottles. One little three-year-old couldn't even raise her head," she added.

But there is hope. Hope for these children and for the hundreds of others like them.

Sitting a few steps away, studying with his tutor is the Girard's oldest rubella child, 10-year-old Chris.

An enthusiastic youngster who enjoys people and life, Chris was once just like the children in the other room. Yet now he speaks, reads and writes like any normal 10-year-old. He's an avid swimmer and enjoys craft activities. Once a week he attends meetings and outings sponsored by the Foundation for the Junior Blind.

It wasn't easy. It took a lot of patience and care and love — which the Girards have plenty of. But today the couple feel a certain satisfaction as Chris joins their oldest adopted child, 12-year-old Donald (who was born with an arm and hand deformity) for an outing to Disneyland.

As the youngsters are leaving, Chris asks Dad for some money.

"How come you only come to me when you want a little cash?" Girard asks the boy.

"Aw, Dad, come on," David replies as he smiles and hugs the elder Girard affectionately.

THE LOVE the Girards have given these children has paid off.

"In 1967 when we participated in the John Tracy Clinic for parents of rubella victims, Chris was a real inspiration. He was an example of what their children could develop into," Mrs. Girard said.

"There we met with members who had completely lost hope and were ready to give up. That's when we decided to open our home to others' babies. We believed we knew as much about caring for them as anyone."

The Girards quickly went to work, converting their garage into a seven-bed nursery and filling it with the things that any toddler would enjoy. Swing sets and a trampoline were added to the backyard.

Caring for their "family" is a full-time job. The day begins at 6 a.m. with devotionals, followed by breakfast. "It gets pretty messy," Mrs. Girard said, "but we're trying to teach them to care for themselves." The remainder of the day is filled with therapy, educational play and many, many visits to the various doctors who provide services for the Girards.

"But all this can be prevented," Mrs. Girard stated, "with a simple vaccination."

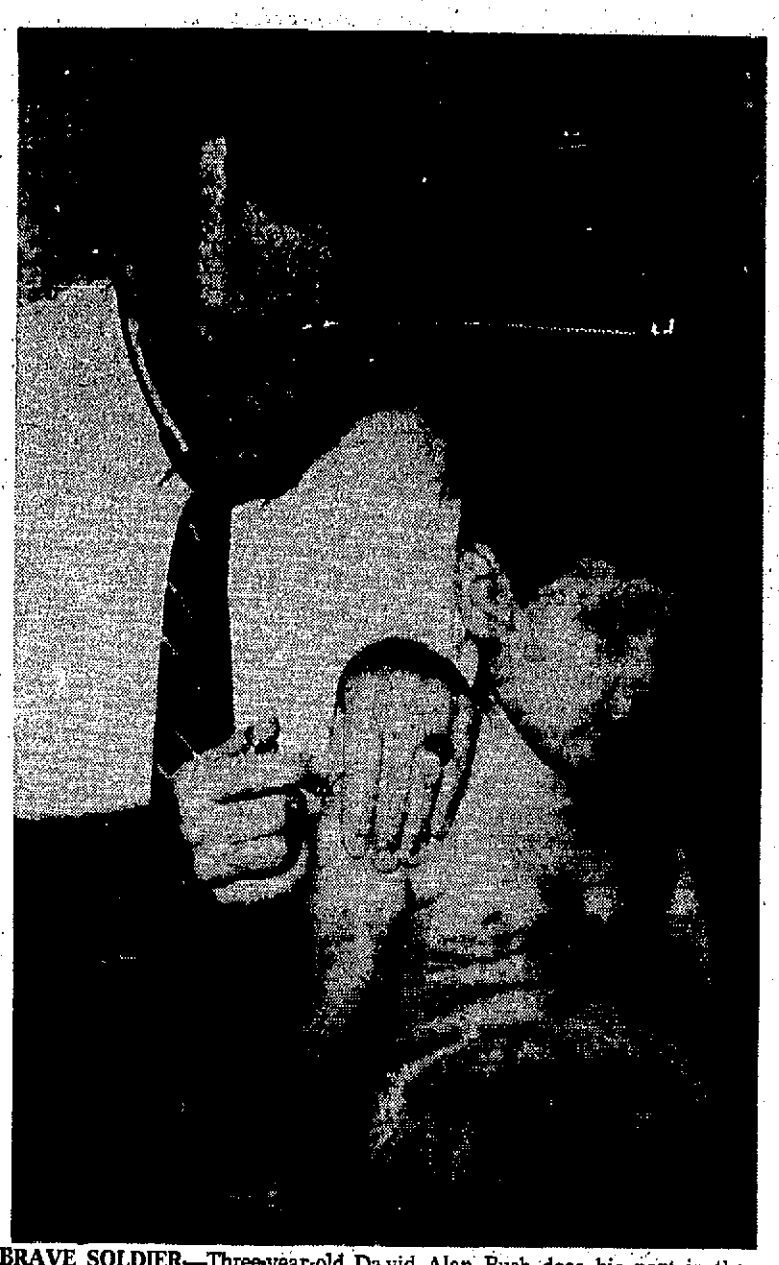

APPROVED and licensed last summer, the vaccine is now available for children ages 1 through puberty. It should not, however, be confused with the rubeola vaccine (for red or two week measles) given to children several years ago.

Even if your child has had three-day measles (doctors are not sure if there really is ammunity to the disease) or has had a measles shot, you should make sure he gets this new one.

Tuesday volunteers for the Mothers' March will distribute informative leaflets about the vaccine to every home. Though in comic book form, its message is no joke.

Another measles epidemic is expected in 1970-71.

The baby you save may be your own.

BRAVE SOLDIER—Three-year-old David Alan Bush does his part in the battle against birth defects by lining up early to receive the German (rubella) measles vaccination. Dr. John Mitchell, consulting physician for the March of Dimes, administers the vaccine.

Films, discussion slated for religious seminar

A day-long youth seminar "Wanted: Information Concerning the Whereabouts of God, Alias Jesus Christ" will be held next Sunday at Holy Trinity School, San Pedro.

All students from 9th through 12th grade and beginning college students are invited.

The day's activities will begin at 2 p.m. with films, discussions and communication sessions scheduled. A concelebrated Folk Mass, dinner and dance featuring the "Fifth Flight" will conclude the program.

MRS. RONALD CRANFORD

Cranford and Clark say vows

Honeymooning in San Diego after their marriage Friday at Los Altos Methodist Church are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lee Cranford (Shirley Diane Clark).

The couple's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Clark, 2903 Lomita Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. John P. Cranford. 4637 Hackett Ave.

The former Miss Clark was attired in a white chiffon gown with touches of lace and flower trim. Mrs. Lester Bender, the bride's sister, was matron of honor.

Lester Bender was best man and Owen Thurmond served as usher.

The new Mrs. Cranford was graduated from Millikan High School and Lakewood Beauty College. Her husband is an alumnus of Lakewood High School.

MRS. JAMES ROBINSON

MRS. JAMES MEYERS

MRS. T. J. ROWLEY III

Young couples take vows in solemn ceremonies

Robinson-Lona

Chapel of Memories in Norwalk was setting for the Saturday afternoon marriage of Linda Diane Lona to James Richard Robinson.

The couple's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Lona, 5615 N. Spahn Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley F. Robinson, 5853 Dagwood Ave. Both bride and bridegroom are students at California State College at Fullerton.

For her wedding day the bride chose a gown of Chantilly lace and satin with mandarin neckline and lace bodice and sleeves. Her matching headpiece held a three-tiered silk illusion veil.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Kenneth Stout and Karen Maxfield was the bridesmaid. Michael Fall was best man with Gregory Robinson, Fred Lona, Richard Lona, Michael Gavin and Ronald Hobson as ushers.

Following the ceremony the newlyweds were feted at a buffet reception at Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall in Norwalk. They will reside in Fullerton.

Meyers-Jenkins

Attired in a floor-length gown of candlelight silk with lace bodice and sleeves, Judith R. Jenkins became Mrs. James L. Meyers Saturday at the Alta Mira Hotel in Sausalito.

The new Mrs. Meyers' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Jenkins, 2024 Beverly Plaza. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Meyers of Fresno.

Sally Jenkins of Palo Alto was the maid of honor. Bruce Meyers served as his brother's best man with Bernard Barber, Basab Basu and Dan Simmons as ushers.

Following the ceremony the newlyweds were feted at a reception at the hotel. Presently honeymooning in Lake Tahoe, the couple will reside in San Francisco.

Rowley-Shaw

Honeymooning at Lake Tahoe following their marriage Saturday at St. Thomas of Canterbury Episcopal Church are newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Thomas John Rowley III (Linda Mary Saw).

The bride and bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Saw, 6153 Castana Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas John Rowley Jr. of Logan, Utah.

The former Miss Saw was attired in a Victorian gown of lace and organza with lace train. Her attendants were Mrs. James Mabary, matron of honor, and Susan Kelleher and Julie O'Hara, bridesmaids.

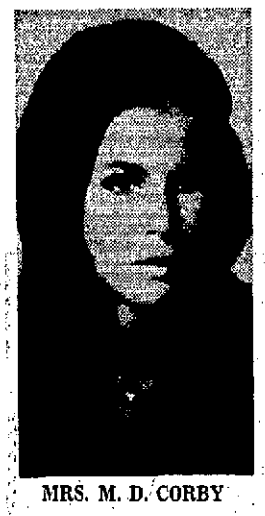

Dan Ford was the best man and Charles Short and James Mabaray were ushers.

The new Mrs. Rowley was graduated from Paramount High School and attended UC Santa Barbara. Her husband is a graduate of UC Berkeley.

Following the ceremony the newlyweds were feted at a buffet dinner at the Sierra Restaurant in Bellflower. The couple plan to reside in Bellflower.

Italian pianist

Maurizio Pollino, young Italian pianist, will perform with the Los Angeles Philharmonic today at 3 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion. With music director Zubin Mehta conducting, he will play Chopin's "Concerto No. 2" in F minor for piano and orchestra.

MRS. M. D. CORBY

Corbys to live in Germany

A first home in Germany, where the bridegroom in stationed with the U.S. Army, awaits newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Michael Donovan Corby (Mavourneen Maureen O'Brien) following a honeymoon trip to Lake Tahoe. The couple exchanged wedding vows Saturday morning in St. Anthony Catholic Church.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent P. O'Brien, 1400 Hellman St., wore a formal gown of white nylon and chiffon, featuring empire Venise lace bodice.

Mrs. Michael Reardon was her sister's matron of honor. Completing the bridal party were Mrs. Kanon Awni, Sheila and Patrice O'Brien, sisters of the bride, Maria Wood, Mrs. Roy Williams and Sahira and Thuraia Awni, the bride's nieces.

James Rucci was best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs John F. Corby Jr., 251 Claremont Ave.

Mark Wakeland, Daniel Conley, Michael Reardon, Thomas Campanelli and Richard Ewaskey seated 200 guests.

A champagne reception in the Hidden Village Room, Sam's Sea Food Restaurant, Huntington Beach, followed the ceremony.

Both young people are graduates of St. Anthony High School. The bridegroom also attended Long Beach City College.

ENGAGEMENTS TOLD

Wedding bells will ring

Jones-Davies

During a dinner party in their North Hollywood home, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Jones announced the engagement of their daughter, Georgie K., to Jeffery S. Davies. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Davies of Long Beach.

The couple set a December wedding date.

Wiltgen-Barnes

The engagement of Anita Catherine Wiltgen to John Anthony Barnes was announced recently at a dinner party by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Wiltgen of Long Beach.

Miss Wiltgen, a graduate of St. Anthony's High School and Long Beach City College, is currently attending California State College at Long Beach.

Her fiance, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Barnes of Long Beach, also graduated from St. Anthony's High School and attended Long Beach City College. He is currently a senior at the University of Nevada in Reno.

A late summer wedding is planned..

Milner-Teal

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Milner of Lakewood announce the engagement of their daughter, Teri Lin, to John Edward Teal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Courtney B. Teal of San Pedro.

Miss Milner is currently a senior at Lakewood High School. Her fiance is serving with the U.S. Coast Guard aboard the ice-breaker Southwind stationed in Baltimore, Md.

Crossman-Stoh

A mid-July wedding for Judith Ann Crossman and Ronald Paul Stoh has been announced.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Crossman of Long Beach. Her fiance is the son of Mrs. Michael Stoh of Fontana and the late Mr. Stoh.

Sisler-MacMaster

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Sisler of Long Beach announce the engagement of their daughter, Andrea Lee, to Ronald Paul MacMaster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacMaster of Boston, Mass.

Nixon-Wright

Wedding plans for Janice Nixon to Mark Wright are revealed by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Nixon of Long Beach. The bridegroom elect's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Wright, also of Long Beach.

A June 1971 wedding is planned.

Mullen-Padilla

June wedding plans for Robin Mullen and Albert Padilla are revealed by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.S. Mullen of Long Beach.

Miss Mullen is a senior at Lakewood High School. Her finance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Padilla of Norwalk, is a graduate of Plus X. High School, served four years with the U.S. Marine Corp and is currently a student at Orange Coast College.

Winter date set by pair

During a traditional candle-passing ceremony among her Kappa Alpha Theta sorority sisters, Charlene Strother announced her engagement to Mark Ebright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Ebright of Long Beach.

The bride-elect, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Flintridge, is an alumna of La Canada High School and attended UC, Santa Barbara. She will graduate in June from USC, with a degree in elementary education. Miss Strother was a Les Fleurette Debutante in 1966.

The benedict-elect, a graduate of Wilson High School, attended UC, Santa Barbara, where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha, and also attended California State College at Long Beach. He is currently serving a term of active duty with the U.S. Army Reserve at Fort Ord.

The young couple announced a December wedding date during an open house in the home of the bride-elect's parents.

California Mansions!

...new governor's residence has been a 30-year controversy

run as hard as he could toward the window, then jump."

"Well, needless to say, I was horrified. That did it!"

The next day she started looking for another house.

"I just couldn't fulfill my responsibility as the governor's wife and the mother of two children in that house," she said. "My husband and I are expected to travel and I could not go away and leave my children in a home that was unsafe.

"Everyone in Sacramento (and elsewhere in the state) threw up their hands and said, 'You can't do that — you can't move out of the governor's mansion.' "

But they did.

Within three months from the day they had moved into the 15-room structure, the Reagans moved at their own expense into a comfortable English-Tudor style home some two miles away from the bustling noise of the capital.

SINCE THE "big move" Mrs. Reagan has tried to head an effort to get a new governor's mansion for California.

"I think it's disgraceful that the largest state in the Union does not have a mansion everyone can be proud of. I don't care if I ever sleep in it a night—I am just dedicated to this," she said.

Mrs. Reagan explained she would like to see the stately residence built with funds contributed by everyone and not appropriated through the legislature.

At this point a member of the audience asked Mrs. Reagan why she didn't ask her husband to take the initiative to get something done.

"We did take the initiative," she said. "We moved out."

Building a governor's residence is not new to Californians. Efforts for funds were started more than 30 years ago.

Mrs. Reagan was asked what her preference in architectural style was for the new home.

She said she felt the residence should be Spanish reflecting the tradition and history of California.

But, as in many efforts, progress moves slowly.

At this point, there is no committee working on the project.

She noted that although everyone seems interested and agrees that there should be a new mansion, there's no central working committee.

The state does, however, now have the land on which the new mansion will be built.

Through donations from Californians, a committee bought 12 acres for $130,000 overlooking the American River outside Sacramento. The site was given to the state in 1967.

ENTERTAINING is one of the drawbacks in the home now occupied by the Reagans.

"When we moved into the house (Sacramento is not bulging with large homes) the dining room would seat eight people. There was no downstairs powder room and many a night our little boy was awakened by people going through his bedroom to use the rest room. The living room was small and if my husband wanted to do some work, he had to set his papers on the bed," she said.

STILL — IT'S somewhere to live . . . but, not long ago, the governor and his family came within two weeks of being evicted.

The owner of the house had financial difficulties and was being forced to sell. We didn't want to buy so I started looking for another home. But there just wasn't one available large enough for our needs," she said.

Two weeks before eviction into the street, a bipartisan group finally came to their aid and bought the house. Now the Reagans pay them the $1,250 a month rent.

"I think it's pretty Mickey Mouse for our largest state not to have a governor's mansion," she concluded.

At that point a voice from the audience said: "Why don't you stop paying your own rent, then California would have to do it."

With enthusiastic applause, the crowd agreed. She laughed.

...White House is bright and light

pliers, painters, electricians and craftsmen.

ONE TRAUMATIC experience dealt with fabric for the draperies and furniture in the living room.

"It was a beautiful shade of yellow print, Mrs. Nixon's color. We discovered only 12 yards were available."

A call to the factory in Scotland revealed that the firm was closing for vacation. They called back, agreeing to loom the fabric and we relaxed. A call from the airlines. The package had been lost somewhere enroute.

More calls. This time to Montreal where 74 yards of the original looming were located, and another to London which netted 56 yards. The job proceeded on schedule.

At last, all was ready—complete to flowers on the table and linen on the beds—and the Nixons were making their first visit.

At 3 that afternoon, the Cannell's phone rang, and they were invited to San Clemente at 5.

With his wife, in typical female fashion saying her hair was a mess and she had nothing to wear, they climbed in their car and traveled to the Western White House where they basked in an hour and forty-five minutes of First Family compliments.

Completing the well-rounded look at the interior of the home that snuggles privately on a cliffside overlooking the Pacific, were talks by Cleon Knapp, publisher of Architectural Digest in which the story is told, and by George Szanik, noted interior photographer who makes the house come alive in gorgeous color photographs.

WESTERN WHITE HOUSE living room is entirely done in shades of yellow and gold, with only a chair and footstool of blue to bring indoors the lovely ocean view seen from huge, arched windows. Drawing by Staff Artist Erwin DeGroot from photograph by George Szanik.

Karpin on bridge

by Fred L. Karpin

One of the better players in the theatrical world was the late Tallulah Bankhead. From a technical point of view, she was not a good bidder, primarily because she felt that life was too brief to spend time mastering the many types of specialized bids that, in her opinion, arose all too infrequently. However, she was an excellent player of the cards, as the deal today demonstrates. Miss Bankhead was in the South seat.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

When West's queen of clubs opening rode around to Miss Bankhead, she did not first win the trick and then pause for reflection. Instead, she reflected before playing to the first trick.

It was readily apparent that if either the king of diamonds or the ace of hearts were favorably located (in East's hand), then the fulfillment of the contract would be a cinch. But Miss Bankhead assumed, in the pessimistic fashion that is characteristic of the expert approach, that West possessed both of these key cards.

If, Miss Bankhead reasoned, the heart ace were located in West's hand, it was imperative that East be kept out of the lead, since a heart shift by him would enable the defenders to cash two heart tricks. And so Miss Bankhead geared her play to keeping East out of the lead — she permitted West's club queen to capture the opening lead.

WEST THEN continued with a low club, East's king falling to South's ace. The king of trumps was then led, and this was followed by a trump to dummy's ace. Next came the queen of diamonds and South finessed, losing to West's king. Hoping his partner held the heart king, West now cashed the ace of hearts, and then led another heart. As is evident, South took the rest of the tricks.

Had Miss Bankhead captured the opening lead with the club ace, she would have gone down. In this case, upon winning his diamond king, West would have led a low club to East's king. East would then have made the automatic shift to the heart queen, and the defenders would have cashed two heart tricks.

Elizabeth Boyer weds Army captain

Planning a delayed honeymoon trip to Europe this summer are Capt. John A. Di Muro, U.S. Army, and Mrs. Di Muro (Elizabeth M. Boyer), who were married Saturday afternoon during a Nuptial Mass in Ft. MacArthur Chapel, San Pedro.

The bride chose a white velvet Juliet style gown for her marriage to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Di Muro of Sherman Oaks.

Mrs. Ronald Hess was matron of honor for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Boyer, 2203 Vuelta Grande Ave. Attending as bridesmaid was Mrs. William Dager.

Mark Richards was best man and James Armstrong seated guests.

A reception in Ft. MacArthur Officers Club followed the ceremony.

The birde, a graduate of St. Anthony High School and Immaculate Heart College, Los Angeles, is currently employed as a stewardess with American Airlines in San Francisco. Her husband, an alumnus of Notre Dame High School, Sherman Oaks, also attended Santa Clara University. He is presently stationed at Ft. Ord.

The newlyweds will reside in Santa Cruz.

Miller-Sparks engagement told

Mrs. Cletus S. Miller of Long Beach announces the engagement of her daughter, Nancy Anne, to Charles T. Sparks III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Grasman of Long Beach. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Mr. Miller.

Miss Miller, an alumna of Lakewood High School and Long Beach City College, is now attending California State College at Long Beach.

Her fiance graduated from Lakewood High School and is now attending Long Beach City College.

LBAA dons new look for new venture

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Long Beach Art Association is an organization of Southern California artists who meet and exhibit in their gallery at 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

In recent weeks, many of the painters have forsaken canvas and other surfaces to spread their paint on walls of the gallery in a vast redecorating project.

Their purpose is to have the gallery renovated for initiation of a new undertaking — a rental gallery to operate in conjunction with the display gallery.

Both the rental program and a new show, "Painting Is Like Music," will open next Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

Eleanore Smith has headed the redecorating committee, assisted by Dorothy Harvey, George Jordan, Elaine Stone, Jean Hartt and Elizabeth Taylor. An ex-officio member, who made such pragmatic contributions as building cabinets and brushing paint, was Eleanore's husband, Municipal Court Judge Charles Smith.

To establish rules for the rental gallery, chairman Hilda Utecht, LBAA president Betty Anne Kirkpatrick and Lois Venne surveyed similar enterprises from San Diego to San Bernardino. All LBAA members are eligible to exhibit, but their work must have been juried in at least two shows. A variety of media and subject matter will be for rent and if a patron wants a kind of work not on display, every effort will be made to find it for him.

RENTAL FEES for a two-month period are set on a sliding scale — a minimum of $5 for work valued from $1 to $75, to $19 for work valued from $426 to $600. In addition to this two-month charge which goes to the artist, there is a $2 handling fee retained by the gallery.

The renter, of course, has the option to buy the art of his choice. "We think this is an ideal way for people to select art — to live with it in their home or office for a while before deciding whether or not they want to buy. After all, no artist wants anyone to buy his art and then to be unhappy with it," said Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

Rentals may be transacted during regular gallery hours — 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays and 7:30 to 9 p.m. the first and third Tuesdays of each month. The gallery is closed Mondays.

ONE-MAN shows opening Tuesday in the new Pasadena Art Museum, Colorado and Orange Grove Boulevards, include new and recent work by Richard Serra, Craig Kauffman and Robert Morris.

Also on display will be Japanese prints from the Frank Lloyd Wright collection; works from the permanent collection; new acquisitions; Blue Four and sculpture; work by architect-designer A. B. Heinsbergen; and Joseph Kosuth's conceptual art.

Serra, one of the important new sculptors from New York, is creating a massive sculpture within the museum galleries especially for the Pasadena show.

Morris will display metal sculpture and four large felt pieces which he has made at the museum.

Kauffman, West Coast artist who works primarily in biometric plastic shapes, has a survey of his series dating from 1966.

New museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays; noon to 5 p.m. Sundays; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays; closed Mondays. Parking is free.

THROUGH MARCH the Wayne Long Ethnic Art Collection may be seen at Otis Art Institute Gallery, 2401 Wilshire Blvd.

More than 400 objects from around the world include examples from Africa, the Pacific area, India, South America, Mexico, Japan, China, Iran, Cambodia, Thailand, England, Italy, Java, Tibet, the United States, the Australian Aborigine, the Northwest Coast Indian and the Eskimo.

Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays; 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays; closed Mondays. There is no admission charge.

MEMBERS OF Traditional Artists Guild of Paramount have been invited to exhibit in the California Museum of Science and Industry, Exposition Park, Los Angeles, from Saturday through March 15.

Young musicians in Debut Concert

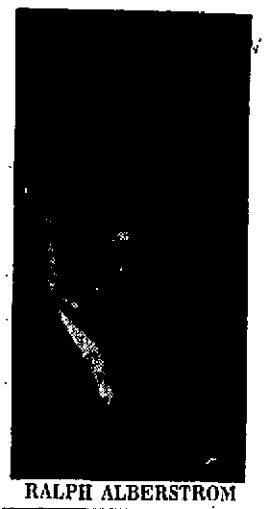

Two young musicians next Sunday will claim honors they won this summer when they earned first and second places in the 1969 Southwestern Youth Music Festival in Long Beach.

Ralph Alberstrom and Jenifer McKenzie will be soloists with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in the annual Debut Concert next Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium. Admission will be free.

With Alberto Bolet conducting, pianist Alberstrom, 18, will perform Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 4." First place winner in the Amateur Championship Division of the 1969 SYMF competition, Alberstrom had won first place in the Chamber Music Division in the 1968 SYMF competition and the 1969 Junior Bach Festival.

MISS MCKENZIE, who won second place in the amateur championships, has received numerous awards. Now 21, she has been studying the flute since the age of 10. A music major at California State College, Fullerton, she has performed with the Riverside Opera and the San Bernardino Symphony. In addition to her second place award in the 1969 SYMF, she won first place in the orchestral instruments competition that year. After graduating in June from CSCF, she will attend a conservatory to study for her master of music degree in performance.

Next Sunday she will play "Concerto for Flute and Orchestra" by Nielsen. Bolet also will conduct the orchestra in Three Dances from "The Bartered Bride" by Smetana.

YOUNG CHORISTERS SING IN ST. STEPHEN'S CATHEDRAL, VIENNA

Vienna Choir Boys mark silver anniversary in U.S.

The Vienna Choir Boys will make their silver anniversary appearance in the United States in two performances Saturday, Feb. 7, under auspices of S. Hurok. Programs are scheduled at 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion.

The choir, composed of 22 boys ranging in age from 8 years to just prior to the time of change of voice, will come directly from Vienna from an institution begun by royal Hapsburgh (Maximillian) decree in 1498.

Visitors to Vienna can hear the choir in the baroque Hofmusikkapelle, in St. Stephen's Cathedral, and often in performances requiring children in the Vienna State Opera.

The Walt Disney movie, "Almost Angels," dealt with a typical member of the choir. The vivacious youngsters have appeared often on major television programs and in a gala New Year's Eve production of "Die Fledermaus" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

FOR THEIR Los Angeles program they will perform a one-act comic opera, "Herr und Madame Denis," by Jacques Offenbach, a merry bedlam of mistaken identity, abductions from convents, and frustrated police who are taken in by impersonations.

Other numbers will be "The Blue Danube" by Johann Strauss, "Pastorale and Happiness" by Schubert, "Sound of the Trumpet" by Purcell, "Duo Seraphim" by Ludovico da Vittoria, "The Gypsy Chews Tobacco" by Kodaly, and "131st Psalm" by Anglberger.

Tickets are now on sale at The Music Center box office and agencies.

CSLB art faculty show is 'thoughtful'

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Nine members of the CSLB art faculty are exhibiting at the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave. The foyer show offers a fine opportunity to view this work without braving the perils of parking at the college.

Those familiar with the work at the college will find old-timers (John Martin, Orval Dillingham and Kenn Glenn) in new modes of investigation and will be interested in the work of newcomers Stephen Werlich (here about 5 years), Laird Plumleigh, Robert Harris, Richard Miller, Paul Donaldson and Pete Mendez; all but Plumleigh did their graduate work here.

It is interesting to see, for example, how closely sculptor Miller follows the idiosynratic treatment of the abdominal area, and to examine the elegant articulation of hands and feet of Stephen Werlich.

However, Miller really does his own thing in "Multiple Woman" in which six, 10-inch high identical figures fan out from their attachment at the head, with only one having feet on the ground. This non-rational composition suspends our disbelief.

WERLICH, whose bronzes are well within the traditional vein, never cloys or bores. His large figure, "Crouching Woman," is a play of one gorgeous volume against others. In "Expulsion" and "Man and Woman," the interpenetration of space is baroque, yet sparing and restrained.

Martin and Dillingham continue to investigate a way of seeing with which they have been, in a parallel sense, involved for the last several years. It is the juxtaposition of realities, the painterly real object, historical reference, painting from overexposed photos, and the painting of humble, everyday objects on a grand scale. Stenciled letters, and reminiscences of news shots, radar shots, and binoculars form an abstract pattern in John Martin's "The Wreck of the Nancy."

"MEMORY AND ME" is the title of Laird Plumleigh's only offering, a provocative penline. Memory is the subject and feeling of Paul Donaldson's several small washes.

Though Pete Mendez did all his work at CSLB, he doesn't work like anyone else. There is nothing tentative in his semi-surreal approach. I don't know why "The Old Bob Dylan" turns into a fanged jungle cat, or "Pocho Pete" has stripes like a tabby on one side of his face, but I'd like to know. "Dancing Cadavers" is a virtuoso view of forms upward, as though through a glass floor.

In this group show, there is a splendid opportunity to view peacefully a body of very thoughtful work. The show continues through Feb. 1, with viewing hours every day and evening except Friday night.

New Orleans has its new drummer for Mardi Gras

IMAGINATIONS RUN UNCHECKED in the design of hundreds of colorful floats paraded through the streets of New Orleans during Mardi Gras which this year will be held on Feb. 10.
(Delta Air Lines photo)

NEW ORLEANS — There he goes again: it's that different drummer New Orleans always marches to about this time of year. Playing that old familiar Mardi Gras tattoo, and oops, pardon me, coming through please, we'll try to keep the pace.

Thoreau's wisdom might have its applications to Mardi Gras even — but at Walden Pond Thoreau didn't have to, oops, fight the crowds.

Like Irving Berlin wondered who wakes the bugler up, at Carnival time one wonders who taught our different drummer that inane, carefree, joyous beat. The city is building toward the big day, Feb. 10. Mardi Gras, a day when New Orleans is out of step with normal routines and is enjoying the great free show it stages for its own people and anyone else who cares to see it.

Carnival fantasy actually takes to the streets with the first parade on Jan. 31. This year there will be 35 parades in 11 days, giving promise that Mardi Gras 1970 will be more exciting than ever. Last year one of the most extravagantly-staged parades ever seen by Carnival throngs made its debut. This was the Krewe of Bacchus, whose huge, animated floats created a sensation with New Orleanians. The new parade is expected to be even larger when it rolls the Sunday before Mardi Gras.

MOST VISITORS for Carnival arrive for the final four days, when no less than 14 parades will appear on the streets.

The New Orleans Tourist Commission suggests that visitors can have as much fun as Orleanians who have years of practice in the Mardi Gras art. Basic to this is planning to costume.

On Mardi Gras, Canal and Bourbon Streets become a crossroads of the bizarre. A band of gorillas roams behind an Abraham Lincoln, a living whiskey bottle and a group of court jesters. Other costumes may not be quite so literal, some may consist of body paint, plumes and sequins. Families may dress as clowns or a tribe of Indians. The masker cloaks his identity behind his fanciful garb and in this way even a conservative banker can have a fling.

Traditionally, each person can then become more reflective on the somberness of Lent, which begins next day, Ash Wednesday.

MUCH OF carnival's ritual is tucked away from the sight of visitors, however, These are the elaborate balls which are staged by the social organizations known as "krewes." Following its parade a Krewe will hold an elaborate ball at the Municipal Auditorium. The social season in New Orleans has become closely associated with Carnival and the season's debutantes are often presented to the mock royalty of the evening.

A high point of any debutante's year would be to belong to the court of the Mystic Krewe of Comus, most venerable of the Carnival krewes.

Comus appeared on the streets of New Orleans in 1857. with horse-drawn floats presenting the theme "Heathen Gods and Goddesses." Each year, then the Carnival krewes present a parade built around a different theme. The subject may range from mythology to literature to Mother Goose.

AND AS the parade season approaches, the most jaded New Orleanians feel their pulses quicken, even if only slightly. A Mardi Gras parade can tell an entire tale, can re-create chapters from childhood only dimly remembered. Mardi Gras is a diet of fantasy for 10 days and it takes a callous soul not to be moved by at least some part of the celebration.

Carnival in New Orleans is actually a living part of the city. The 10 days of parades could not be subtracted or removed as an element of the culture without actually damaging the remainder of the year. Without its few days of carnival there is no doubt that New Orleans would be much different at all other times. It might remain somewhat apart in its way all the same, but it would nevertheless be much different.

Any visitor should try to establish that sort of rapport with the festival and he would understand it better. It is after all nice to know that after it's over this time, next year it will roll around again.

Princess line realigns its top executives

LOS ANGELES — Ronald B. Ranes has been appointed general marketing manager of Princess Cruises, according to Scott W. McCausland, general manager of the Los Angeles-based cruise line.

Previously, Ranes was administrative assistant to Charles Tillinghast III, vice president of Boise Cascade Corp., Princess' parent company.

McCausland also announced that Gordon C. Oliver, formerly director of marketing, has become director of advertising and promotion. A. Robert Dean, previously sales manager, is now director of sales. Jaime Canedo has been promoted to reservations manager.

Princess Cruises operates the 754-passenger Princess Carla and 420-passenger Princess Italia on cruises to Mexico, Caribbean-South America and Alaska-Canada. The line's headquarters are at 3435 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, CA. 90005.

Senior citizens travel club seeks members

The 1970 membership drive for Golden Tours, a senior citizens' travel club sponsored by the Recreation Department, is now under way, according to Jack E. Dillon, supervisor of senior citizen activities.

The club arranges one-day and overnight tours to various educational and entertainment centers, and expenses are shared by those participating in a specific trip.

Previous Golden Tours trips have been to Marineland, Huntington Library, San Diego Zoo, the Pilgrimage Play, various national parks, and to Hawaii.

Membership costs $1 a year. Senior citizens may join by applying in person at the Golden Tours office, 350 E. Ocean Blvd., Dillon said.

DECATHLON ASPIRANTS APPLY HERE

You see them on every flight.

And think they're amateur wing-walkers.

They pace up and down the aisle, literally walking themselves to a destination such as on a Los Angeles - Dallas flight.

These pace-setters will really have their room unconfined when Delta Air Lines places the Boeing 747 into service next October.

A walk 13 times around the cabin interior equals one mile. Flying at 10 miles a minute, well, a passenger could walk around the airplane in an average time of 20 minutes to the mile.

The flight stewardesses will beat them all.

Bermuda floral event Apr. 16-18

HAMILTON, Bermuda — This mid-Atlantic island's Botanical Gardens will take on a fresh, spring face as floats made from thousands of Easter lilies and other fragrant blossoms take their place among the customary livestock, flower and vegetable exhibits at the annual Agricultural Exhibition scheduled April 16-18.

The colorful floats — representing the island's schools and parishes — will replace Bermuda's annual Floral Pageant, which has been suspended owing to dwindling numbers of available workers.

SIMBOL OF "GATEWAY PARIS" program the Arch of Triumph, recently cleaned and scrubbed to look like new. (French Government Tourist Office photo)

'Gateway Paris' drive launched to lure travelers

PARIS — The French Tourist Office, in cooperation with Air France, Air Canada, Air India and Olympic Airways, has inaugurated an ambitious program highlighting Paris as the prime gateway of arrival or departure for European travelers.

The plan offers a tempting array of incentives for U.S. travelers to make Paris their first or last point of contact with Europe during the period through April 30. Included are: one free night with breakfast in a hostelry in the French provinces (either a Chateau-Hotel, Realis de Campagne, Luxury hotel of the Cote d'Azur or Normandy), a complimentary ascent and refreshment at the Eiffel Tower, a gift at the Royal Opera perfume shop, tea and pastry at the Bon Marche department store, visit of the Louvre, visit of Versailles, and one free day of Avis car-rental for any three days of paid rental.

The "Gateway Paris" program is being conducted through U.S. travel agents and the above mentioned airlines from whom booklets are available describing all details of the plan. The agents give their customers certificates enabling them to partake of the various free gifts and services upon arrival in Paris or prior to departure from the French capital. Tourist officials have been delighted with the large numbers of U.S. visitors who have helped make 1969 a record breaking year. Now the "Gateway Paris" program provides a handsome bonus for those visitors who come early in the year and thereby start 1970 off toward even higher goals.

Driving the PanAm highway

By STAN DELAPLANE

GUATEMALA CITY — Friends of mine driving a camper down the Pan American highway report: "We crossed into Guatemala with a minimum of customs inspection — though it takes time for all the paperwork. There are several checkpoints along the way and Sanborn's Travelog is of terrific assistance." (Sanborn's Travel Service, McAllen, Texas. Free information on Mexico and Guatemala.)

"We put into the Motel Plaza here, $2 per night with electric hookup. Three supermarkets within two blocks of the motel. You can buy anything you would at home. Prices on U.S. goods about 25 per cent higher than at home. Imported wine and liquors impossibly high.

"More people speaking English here than we found in Mexico. Very kind and helpful."

I asked them to keep a record of costs — they are going on to Panama. Mexico was very cheap by camper. Probably increases as you go south. I flew these countries, stopping in each capital. PanAm runs a daily flight that stops in each country.

For me the countries become less interesting south of Guatemala. But maybe ground travel would improve the outlook. Good (but not touristy) hotels all along the way.

"We wrote as you suggested to European tourist offices for lists of camping places. Some didn't even bother to answer . . ."

THEN YOU have to go to their main office in the country when you arrive. Government tourist offices are usually civil service — and a landing field of political lame ducks. They turn on a lot of service for me. May short you.

"We will be doing our first skin diving on the island of Cozumel. People have told us you can get bad coral cuts that get infected."

Travel and RESORTS

CORAL CUTS always become infected unless you do something about them. The native remedy is to rub lime juice into them pronto. Wear light sneakers for walking around. And go out with somebody who can point out the dangerous stuff. Fire coral burns enough that you get a red patch on your skin.

In the South Pacific there's a cone shell on the reefs that carried a sting like a rattlesnake. Couple of children — natives — were killed by these last year.

"When is the best time to go to Tahiti?"

DRY WEATHER starts about June. (Friend of mine writes me from Bora Bora today: "Lot of rain, night and day and very hot and humid.") If you go to Tahiti during July you are in the gayest time — the Juillet. The French celebrate July 14. The Tahitians celebrate it the whole month.

Everybody comes in from the outer islands. Big competitions of Tahitian dance groups. That's the dancing where the girl looks like she had her hips in an electric blender. They do this in groups of twenty or thirty. And a group leader — an elderly vahine — walks up and down in the line like a tough drill instructor. Stopping once in awhile to do a bump and grind to show the kids what's what.

Lots of music. Lots of drinking. Lots of love making. Business comes to full stop. Everything stays open all night. People go to bed only when they are exhausted. I've never seen anything to match it — except the Carnival in Rio.

"What is a pension which you mention as cheap living in Europe?"

PENSION in France; Pensione in Italy; Pensao in Portugal. They can be anything from renting out the spare bedroom to a small charming inn. The idea is you get room and meals at a flat price. In Portugal by law the meals include free wine.

You have to take a taxi and shop for these after you get there. They aren't big enough to advertise or get listed with travel agents. But the Government tourist office usually has a list.

Japan lifts tax

The Tokyo Hilton reports that on the occasion of Expo '70 at Osaka, Japan, non-resident foreigners will not be charged tax on accommodations and food and beverage for the entire year of 1970. The tax exemption is only applicable to charges incurred by foreigner visitors at hotels where they are registered.

Norse adventure film on screen today in L.A.

Hjordis Kittel Parker, film producer and lecturer, will appear at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. today in the Ahmanson Theatre at the Los Angeles Music Center to narrate her two-hour color travel-adventure film "Norse Adventure," which she produced, researched and photographed over a two-year period. The film is the inaugural program of the new Explorama '70 series, and will be shown again next Wednesday and Thursday at 8:15 p.m. at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium.

EUROPE IN 1970!

See Europe at your own speed.

In your own Volkswagen.

It'll save you the aggravation of running to make a train or bus or connecting flight just when you're getting to like the place you're leaving.

You can have a VW waiting for you in more than 40 cities in 15 countries. Provided, of course, you tell us about it first.

We'll arrange everything from purchasing it here to picking it up there. And even tell you how to get it home again.

Any Volkswagen that's waiting for you in our showroom can be waiting for you in Europe, too. Beetle. Fastback. Squareback. Wagon. Even the Campmobile.

Which means you can see Europe at almost any speed.

The Hotel SS Mariposa is going places
Los Angeles to Alaska

Your choice of eight sailings on this exciting 13-day cruise-vacation, starting June 14.

Check into Matson's sea-going Hotel SS Mariposa right in Los Angeles. And from there, begin a great adventure.

Your itinerary is truly delightful. Your luxurious hotel cruises to Victoria, Juneau, Skagway, Glacier Bay, Sitka, Vancouver and San Francisco, before heading back to Los Angeles.

It's the perfect "two-week" vacation. The pace is leisurely, the fun continuous, the highlights many and memorable. Everywhere, the scenery is spectacular. For instance, you'll sail through the languid, deep blue waters of the famous Inside Passage. Not even the fjords of Norway can compare to its stately beauty. And, for sheer grandeur, you'll never forget sailing through Glacier Bay. Almost 3,600 square miles pierced by magnificent glaciers of immense proportions. Even your hotel staff will stand by the rail in awe. And they've seen it before.

What makes it all so enjoyable, of course, is the superb cuisine, the personal service, and the luxury that's part of a Matson cruise-vacation. Not to mention the simple convenience. You don't have to worry about packing and unpacking, or transportation from place to place, or more than one hotel reservation.

Matson's Hotel SS Mariposa sails for Alaska from Los Angeles June 14 and 27; July 11 and 24; August 6 and 19; and September 1. Matson's Hotel SS Monterey sails from Los Angeles for Alaska June 21.

Make your reservation now. Remember, the Hotels SS Mariposa and SS Monterey carry only a limited number of guests, which assures a congenial atmosphere. Fares for the 13-day cruise-vacation start at $730.

EQUITY BROKERS,

DEAR ABBY

Her exit should provide clue

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A married friend of my husband's is going around with the kind of woman you'd expect would openly go with a married man.

This couple dropped in unexpectedly one night. I was polite, but I told my husband that I did not want that woman in my home, so to please tell his friend not to bring her here again.

Well they dropped by again last night and my husband welcomed them with open arms!

Abby, this woman is rude and ignorant, and spent the entire evening filing her fingernails. The noise of that emery board got on my nerves so severely I finally got up and excused myself.

After they left I told my husband again how I felt, and he said that was "their way of life" and I should accept it. Well, I don't care what they do, or how they live, but I will not "accept" it, and I don't think I should be expected to entertain trash like that in my home. I'd like your opinion. — NEEDS SUPPORT

DEAR NEEDS: If your husband insists upon welcoming into his home people whose unconventional way of life is not acceptable to you, that would seem his "right." It is also your "right" to disapprove and to absent yourself from the company. That ought to tell somebody something; your husband, his friend, and the lady with the emery board.

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is getting along in years, has taken ill and is now confined to her bed. She lives with me, but my biggest problem is keeping some of her friends away from her.

Mother has always been a very sociable person and she loves company, but some of her friends have more time than brains, and after they've paid mother a visit, it takes her days to recover from the setback.

Mother said that one of her friends told her that if she didn't change doctors she was as good as dead, because her doctor didn't know what he was doing.

Other friends bring her the most depressing news about who else is sick, dying, or dead. I am not able to sit in there and monitor every conversation, so what should I do? — DIGUSTED

D E A R DISGUSTED: With "friends" like your mother has, she doesn't need any enemies. You would do your mother a service to quietly tell the offending visitors to bring only cheerful conversation or stay at home.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I got into a discussion on child-rearing and we disagree on a point we'd like you to settle.

When brothers and sisters get into a fight about something do you think the parents should stay out of it and let the kids settle it in their own way? Or should parents intervene and give the children the benefit of their mature judgment. — B AND L

DEAR B AND L: That depends upon the seriousness of the "fight," the age and sex of the "children," and the "way" they propose to settle it. Children should be taught that "might" does not make right, and the one who slugs the hardest isn't necessarily "right." Parents should use their "mature judgment" in determining whether or not they should intervene.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

JACK B. KRUEGER

Jack B. Krueger, President of Long Beach District Board of Realtors was born May 23, 1925 in Sioux City, Iowa, moving to Beverly Hills, California in 1939. Jack graduated from Beverly Hills High School, UCLA with major in Business Administration. Completed a course in shopping center operation and management offered by the international council of shopping centers at the University of Georgia.

A veteran of the second world war and Korea, Jack participated in 35 combat missions and holds the European Ribbon with 4 battle stars, air medal and 3 Oak Leaf Clusters, distinguished flying cross, presidential unit citation and the Korean service ribbon.

Jack has had a real estate broker's license for over 20 years. He owned and operated his own real estate firm in Beverly Hills specializing in the sale of syndicated interests in large income producing properties and during this same period, managed and aided in the development of 4 large shopping centers ranging in size from a neighborhood center to Regional Center of approximately 50 acres.

He currently is president of the Real Estate Store with four offices located in Lakewood and Long Beach.

Jack is realtor member of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors. Member of National Institute of Real Estate Brokers. Speaker and author on the subject of "interviewing and obtaining sales people" on the California Real Estate Association's Office Administration conference 1966. Formerly a member of the Real Estate Investment trust committee, CREA.

SUN SHINES ON CROSBY

Yancey Clings to Lead

SUNDAY Sports
INDEPENDENT PRESS TELEGRAM

SUNDAY, JANUARY 25, 1970

By DAVE LEWIS
Staff Writer

PEBBLE BEACH — Playing conservatively because he didn't "feel quite right," Bert Yancey grimly clung to a one-stroke advantage in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Classic Saturday with a 72 over the rugged Pebble Beach layout under surprisingly sunny skies.

The even-par round gives Yancey a 54-hole total of 209, one swing better than Bob Goalby, Rod Funseth and Don Massengale, winner of the 1966 Crosby.

Funseth had a 68 at Pebble Beach, Goalby a 71, while Massengale, playing Spyglass, continued to be the model of consistency as he posted his third consecutive 70.

Another stroke back at 211 is Bobb Dickson, former national amateur champion from Oklahoma, who had a 68 at Pebble, while defending champion George Archer is tied with George Knudson and Dave Stockton at 212. Stockton had the low round of the group — a five-under 67 at Cypress Point.

Arnold Palmer is among eight tied at 213, four strokes off the pace, after a par 72 at Spyglass.

Jack Nicklaus is at 214 following a par round of 72 at Cypress.

Billy Casper, the other member of this country's "big three," lags far behind at 218 despite a 71 at Spyglass.

The golfers appear to be "home free" weatherwise. Weather forecasts call for partly cloudy skies today and the only precipitation which might be recorded would be nothing more serious than a light shower or two.

All the leaders agreed, "it was a perfect day for golf" even though the courses were still quite soggy and muddy from a downpour during the night.

Related Story, Scores Pg. S-4

Yancey got off to a bad start when he bogeyed two of the first three holes and led to his decision to play conservatively.

He opened up with a bad tee shot and followed by putting his 5-iron approach in a trap as he bogeyed No. 1.

Bert bounced back to birdie the second hole after almost holing out a brilliant pitch. The ball stopped just two inches from the cup.

But he bogeyed No. 3 when he overshot the green. It took another spectacular effort by Bert to get him back even with par — a 75-foot putt from the far edge of the green on the 9th hole.

"I'm real happy to get a 72," he said. "I played much too conservatively. But I didn't quite feel right. I wasn't swinging too smoothly at the beginning, so I decided to play it a little on the safe side.

"As most everyone knows, the mark of this Pebble Beach course is that you can make a six or seven on virtually every hole . . . and I wanted to stay out of trouble."

Goalby, usually one of the better putters on the tour, had a hectic time on the bumpy greens at Pebble Beach, costing himself no less than five strokes by missing short putts — a pair of three-footers and three from four feet. Three of the misses cost him birdies while the other three led to bogeys.

But he still was pleased with his 71 at Pebble, "which has eaten me alive in previous years. I've never played the course very well in all the years I've competed in this tournament. I had a chance to win it one time until I took a seven in the last hole."

Massengale, who recorded his first PGA tour triumph in the '66 Crosby and then notched his only other win a few weeks later in the Canadian Open, is on the comeback trail after taking some time off last fall to work out the problems in his swing.

After making two bogeys in the first six holes, he recovered with birdies on No. 7 and No. 9, sinking a 30-foot putt on the latter hole. Don then posted back-to-back birdies on 14 and 15 — dropping in a 15-foot putt on the 14th — for his third sub-par round.

Funseth, the 36-year-old San Jose veteran whose only tour victory came in the 1965 Phoenix Open, had his second 68 in a row following a costly 74 on the opening round at Cypress Thursday.

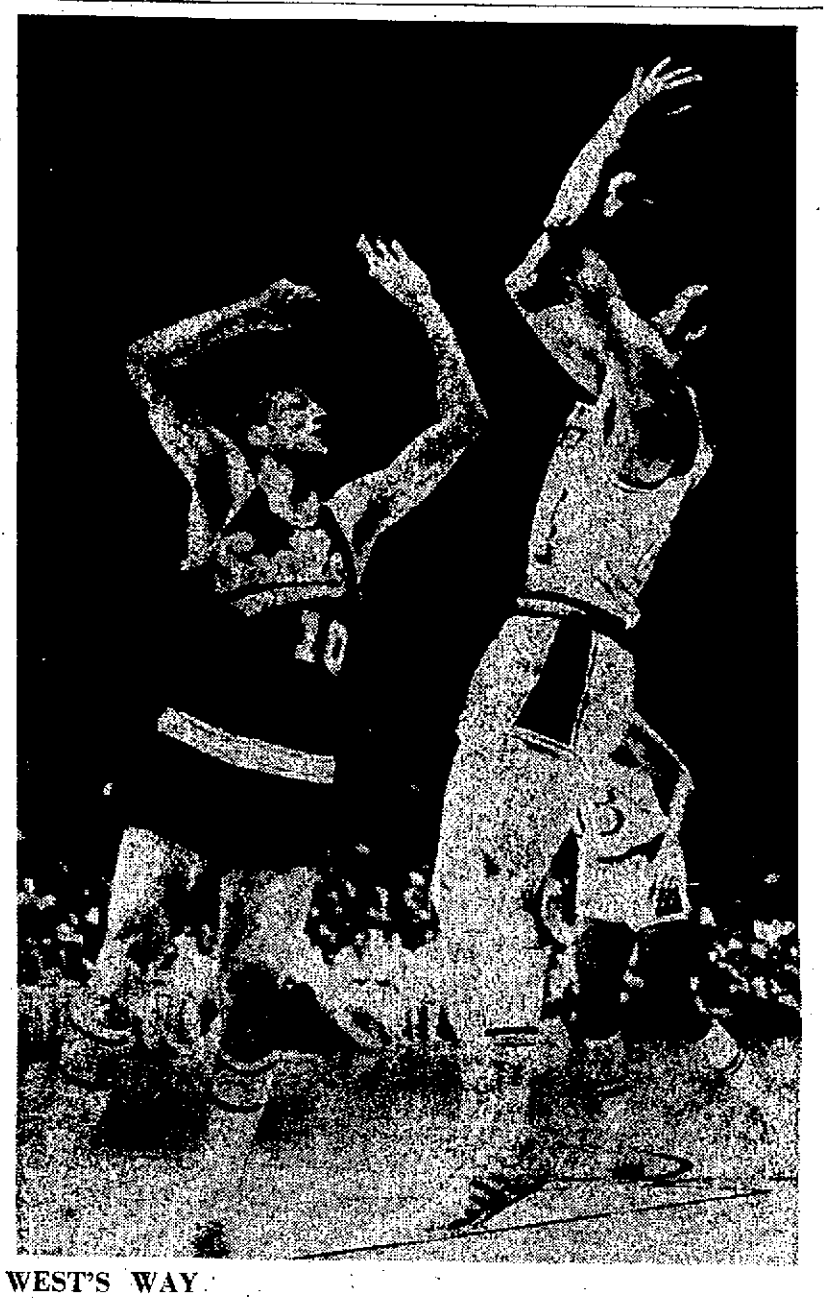

Bobby Rosburg and 49er quarterback John Brodie are ahead in the pro-am division with a best-ball score of 188.

WYOMING PRESSED, CLEANED

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

Wyoming coach Bill Strannigan had been there before — that is, in the jaws of the UCLA meat grinder.

"I knew before the game that we should be in an airliner headed back to Wyoming," said the graying Cowboy coach after his team had taken a 115-77 beating Saturday night before 12,486 fans at Pauley Pavilion.

Strannigan's Wyoming team came into Pauley with visions of sugar plums after a 10-point win over Stanford Friday night that boosted the Cowboys' record to 12-2.

But Wyoming was blown out of contention in the first 3 minutes and 41 seconds by a Bruin full-court press that cut off all avenues of escape. The score at that point was 12-2.

"It was just like at Corvallis three years ago," said Strannigan, recalling the 109-60 licking the Cowboys were given by the Bruins in the NCAA Far West regional tournament.

"The press did it," added the Wyoming coach, whose team was guilty of 18 turnovers on the press and seven others as a result of strong UCLA defense.

UCLA, preparing for a return to Pacific-8 action Friday night at Cal, remained undefeated in 14 games this season and 18 in a period extending back to last year.

Strannigan had been awed by the Bruins three years ago at Corvallis, but he accepted this humiliation philosophically.

"We shuffled hell out of them, didn't we?" he grinned, referring to the Cowboys' style of attack. "The Bruins have great quickness. I'm not so sure they aren't better than the Alcindor teams."

It was not much of a contest after UCLA had taken that early 10-point lead. The margin grew to 60-37 by halftime and kept growing steadily until Bruin coach John Wooden began substituting liberally.

UCLA's 115 points marked the fifth time it had scored more than 100 points. Forward Sidney Wicks, never more devastating, shot and passed sensationally in addition to making several interceptions as the deep man on the full-court press.

All five UCLA starters again were in double figures, adding evidence that the team has excellent balance. Forward Curtis Rowe had 25, making 10 of 14 shots, Wicks had 24, guard John Vallely 20, guard Henry Bibby 15 and center Steve Patterson 11.

Wooden credited "alertness" for the resurgence to form of the top-ranked Bruins, who had to struggle for an 89-80 victory over UC Santa Barbara Friday.

Wooden, however, wasn't totally happy.

"Patterson isn't in condition and he never will be," said the Bruin coach. "He doesn't eat right, he doesn't sleep right and he doesn't practice right. He's always the last man to practice."

It had been noted by observers that Patterson's best performances had been recorded in the first half of most games. Saturday night, for instance, he had eight points at halftime and made only three in the second half.

Wooden expressed pleasure with the Bruins' pressing defense.

"We were able to make some adjustments but Wyoming didn't play as well against us as Santa Barbara," he commented.

The UCLA coach hinted after Friday night's game that his team performs better against teams with good reputations.

The Bruins' romp Saturday night added to the evidence of his case.

UCLA shot at a blazing 56 per cent and outrebounded the Cowboys, 53-36.

Wyoming made .451 per cent of its shots, mostly from medium to long range. Three of the Cowboys showed major-college class, Stan Dodds getting 21 points, Carl Ashley 18 and Steve Popovich, from Warren High in Downey, 14.

"The shots we got were high-percentage tries against most teams," said Strannigan, shaking his head. "But not against this club. I'm surprised our percentage was that high."

Happy Leaves Lakers Smiling, Beats Sonics

SEATTLE (AP) — Happy Hairston's layup with one second left gave the Lakers a 122-121 overtime victory over the Seattle SuperSonics Saturday night in a National Basketball Assn. game.

Hairston, who had 20 points, took a lob pass from John Egan under the bucket, and jumped over Barry Clemens to score as time ran out.

Seattle had led by five points in the overtime, 116-11, with 2:53 to play. But the Sonics lost momentum when Bob Rule, who had 22 points, fouled out and the Sonics were ahead by only three points. Rule had scored the first seven points of the overtime before fouling out.

Keith Erickson sent the game into overtime when he hit a jumper with four seconds left in regulation play, tying the game 107-all. The Sonics appeared to have the game won, despite Jerry West's 39 points, when Lenny Wilkens sank a free throw for a two-point lead. After a time out, the Lakers hit Erickson for the tying basket.

Willie McCarter, the Lakers' No. 1 draft choice from Drake, will be out six weeks with torn ligaments in his right ankle.

The rookie guard was injured in the final minute of the Lakers' 128-100 victory over Seattle Friday night.

With only eight weeks remaining in the regular season, it is doubtful the 6-foot-3 McCarter will play any more in his first pro year.

He was taken to Centinela Hospital where a cast was placed on his leg.

The Lakers have been hit by a severe injury jinx this season. Wilt Chamberlain and Elgin Baylor have been the club's two biggest losses.

SANTA ANITA FACTIONS MEET

With the management-labor strike at Santa Anita entering its fifth week, employees have set up a negotiation meeting Tuesday.

Unions involved are inviting the owners of Santa Anita and representatives of the California Federation of Racing Assns. to attend a meeting with the service employees unions locals 280, 399, 193, 102 and 9 at the Roman Room of the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles.

The unions present will be ready and prepared to negotiate continuously around the clock until an agreement can be reached "so racing can resume in California."

Not only is the meeting at Santa Anita harpooned but also the Northern California meeting at Bay Meadows.

All involved public officials as well as Southern California news media have been invited to attend and observe the negotiations.

The horsemen, particularly, are getting restless as the parties appear about as far apart as ever.

With more Eastern tracks getting set to open, trainers and owners are ready to abandon their "wait and see" attitude.

The two feuding groups met two weeks ago in the grandstand to review the situation and listened as Santa Anita general manager Fred Ryan told them something would break in the next week or two.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

JACK B. KRUEGER

Jack B. Krueger, President of Long Beach District Board of Realtors was born May 23, 1925 in Sioux City, Iowa, moving to Beverly Hills, California in 1939. Jack graduated from Beverly Hills High School, UCLA with major in Business Administration. Completed a course in shopping center operation and management offered by the international council of shopping centers at the University of Georgia.

A veteran of the second world war and Korea, Jack participated in 35 combat missions and holds the European Ribbon with 4 battle stars, air medal and 3 Oak Leaf Clusters, distinguished flying cross, presidential unit citation and the Korean service ribbon.

Jack has had a real estate broker's license for over 20 years. He owned and operated his own real estate firm in Beverly Hills specializing in the sale of syndicated interests in large income producing properties and during this same period, managed and aided in the development of 4 large shopping centers ranging in size from a neighborhood center to Regional Center of approximately 50 acres.

He currently is president of the Real Estate Store with four offices located in Lakewood and Long Beach.

Jack is realtor member of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors. Member of National Institute of Real Estate Brokers. Speaker and author on the subject of "interviewing and obtaining sales people" on the California Real Estate Association's Office Administration conference 1966. Formerly a member of the Real Estate Investment Trust committee, CREA.

Striking Pari-Mutuel Clerk Has His Say

Santa Anita remains idle and some bookmakers are starting to work for a living because of the strike by pari-mutuel clerks. One of the latter — a perceptive Long Beach chap who prefers anonymity but is known for his veracity and sagacity — contends track management has received much undeserved public sympathy.

He claims that figures given out by Santa Anita on clerks' wages are misleading, that the sellers and cashiers fouled up on their last contract and are not about to pull a repeat performance — and that a mediator or arbitrator should be called onto the scene.

"The association (Federation of California Racing Assn., a group formed by all tracks in California) has turned down the services of a state conciliator and Joseph Alioto (San Francisco mayor), who is considered a fair and impartial arbiter in labor decisions," the clerk said.

"It has refused to consider arbitration, is adamant in that one-and-only offer and is bombarding clerks with 'dear employe' letters, calling wage demands unrealistic and even making odious comparisons on wages received between 1966 — when clerks were able to work only a total of 207 days — and 1969, when 270 days were available.

"The facts are that California paid clerks more in 1968 than did New York. But New York passed California clearly in 1969 in all categories except sellers (the difference was 30 cents) and will pass that in 1970. Fringe benefits are much better in New York, too.

"FOR MANY YEARS the pari-mutuel clerks enjoyed wages that were very fair in comparison to industry but, as wages rose, the clerks found themselves tied to a three-year contract giving them 50 cents per day per year, which finally resulted in their wages not rising in comparison to industry but being surpassed by pari-mutuel clerks in New York. For years California had paid much better.

"To our dismay, the association has hired Eastern labor negitiators of its own. They walked into what was believed to be a meeting and bluntly stated the association had decided to give the clerks $2 per day, to be used either as a pay increase or to apply on benefits. They then walked out and stated, as far as they were concerned, the meeting was over.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

"Many press releases have been put out, claiming wages of $51.85 per day for a cashier and $47.85 for a seller.

"BUT THE RELEASES FAILED TO SAY THIS MEANT WAGES PLUS BENEFITS WHICH INCLUDED MEDICAL CARE, HOSPITALIZATION, VACATION PAY, PENSION PAYMENTS, SOCIAL SECURITY, STATE DISABILITY, ETC."

The latter is the major reason for the race track clerks' strike.

"I KNOW OF NO OTHER GROUPS that publicly add all fringe benefits or legal payments to the employes wages and contend this is their 'wage.' Working people are interested in take-home pay.

"Normally, eight races constitute what was called for years a 'racing day' and it is on eight races that our expired contract was based and, for the record, the present rate is $37.10 per day for cashiers and $34.10 for sellers. (Ed. note: That fact is correct.)

"The tracks requested permission from the state to run a ninth race a few years and the state, ever eager to get its percentage, acquiesced but the clerks, instead of dividing their daily rate by eight races and arriving at a race rate, were paid a flat sum of $2.50 — almost one-half as much for overtime as they received on regular time, and a far cry from the normal time-and-a-half punitive pay enjoyed by nearly all workers in the United States."

"THE $2.50 WAS ARRIVED AT by going back many years historically when $2.50 was the acutal race rate. Selling or cashing daily doubles — a special feature that was put in racing about the time the $2.50 race rate was being enjoyed by the clerks — was kept the same and the $2.50 is paid for the ninth race and selling or cashing daily doubles."

The next point also is an important one to the mutuel clerks and doesn't involve Santa Anita but in the contract would concern other California tracks.

"The case of the clerks' plight is intensified when one thinks of the fairs which, in most cases, card 12 races. The regular rate prevails for the first eight. Then comes $2.50 for the ninth and, to add insult to injury, only $2 is paid for the 10th, 11th and 12th races — also the 13th when it is run as happened in 1968.

"The $2 was arrived at by being kind-hearted to the 'poor' fans who claimed they were 'struggling' to carry racing. And the clerks were foolish enough to agree to this fatuous thinking."

"AS YOU REALIZE, it will not be long before the entire State of California will have, besides the daily double, the 'predicta' or 'exacta' . . . and the association desires to pay substantial wages of $2.50 for these gimmicks, too. Confronted with these facts, a professional mediator or conciliator would probably hand down a decision in favor of the clerks.

"It seems strange that, with the state losing $300,000 per day for each race lost, the administration doesn't demand an arbitrator from the federal government to bring this intolerable situation to a halt."

It does seem strange, I must agree.

Kings Keep Road Mark Intact, Bow Again, 4-2

Combined News Services

PITTSBURGH — About the only thing one can say about the Kings on the road this season is that they are consistent — they always lose.

The sad pattern continued at Pittsburgh Saturday night as the Penguins, fighting to reach the Stanley Cup playoffs for the first time in their three-year history, used third period goals by rookies Nick Harbaruk and Bryan Hextall for a 4-2 triumph over the downtrodden tourists.

Pittsburgh's victory shunted them three points ahead of Oakland in the battle for the fourth and final playoff berth in the West Division of the NHL while the loss left the Kings mired in the cellar, a distant 12 points behind the Penguins.

Harbaruk's game-winner came early in the period. Kings' goalie Wayne Rutledge kicked out a hard drive by Wally Boyer only to have Harbaruk pounce on the rebound and slam in a 10-footer for his third goal of the season.

Hextall clinched it for the Penguins, converting passes from Dean Prentice and Joe Watson midway through the period and sending the Kings down to their 20th road loss this season. They have won only twice on foreign ice.

Rookie Butch Goring gave the Kings an early lead, poking home Ted Irvine's rebound three minutes into the game. But Prentice's 16th goal of the year and 312th of his career and another tally by Boyer sent the Penguins out in front in the second period.

Goring's second goal of the night and eighth of the season created a 2-2 tie heading into the final period.

The Kings tackle the New York Rangers in New York tonight.

BING CONTINUES POINT SPREE

Davis 76er FT Hero

Combined News Services

Rookie guard Mike Davis sank a game-winning free throw with 19 seconds to play as Baltimore edged Philadelphia, 112-111, Saturday night.

The 76ers overcame an 18-point Baltimore lead in the first half, scored 11 consecutive points to go ahead 111-107 with 1:02 remaining.

But Earl Monroe sank a field goal for the Bullets and then fed Wes Unseld for the tying basket with 33 seconds remaining.

After Gus Johnson rebounded an Archie Clark shot, Davis was fouled and made good on one of his two attempts.

Dave Bing and Jimmy Walker combined for 51 points and five other Detroit players scored in double figures as the Pistons handed Chicago a 128-122 loss.

Bing, who was plagued during the first half of the season by knee and foot injuries which required surgery, drilled in 30 points, marking the ninth successive game in which he has scored 20 or more points.

Little St. Mary's Stings Houston

Combined News Services

Little St. Mary's of San Antonio, Texas, proved that on a given night a college division team can always stay on the court with a university division powerhouse.

The Rattlers were ferocious Saturday night, stinging Houston's 7th-ranked Cougars, 76-66. St. Mary's, rated 13th among college teams, took the lead at 44-43 and never trailed after that.

Ollie Taylor scored 21 points for the losers, who trailed by as many as 12 markers the second half.

The remaining top 10 teams seeing action found the going a bit easier. Kentucky, rated second, rocked LSU, 109-96, despite Pete Maravich's 55-point effort — moving him to No. 2 on the all-time scoring list with 2,905 points.

Fourth-ranked St. Bonaventure rode Bob Lanier's 32 points and 18 rebounds to a 62-49 nod over stalling Canisius while No. 5 New Mexico State fought off stubborn arch-rival Texas-El Paso, 93-77.

North Carolina State and Davidson were both severely tested. State needed many of Van Williford's 25 points to erase an 11-point first-half deficit and gain a tense, 77-76 win at Duke. Randy Denton scored 32 for the losers.

Doug Cook and Jerry Kroll tallied all 11 overtime points for Davidson in its rallying, 71-64 decision over Princeton. Ohio U. notched its 12th win, 77-68, at Kent State while Penn nipped St. Joseph's, 63-56, in overtime.

Nevada-Las Vegas scored a decisive, 107-91 WCAC win over Nevada-Reno with former Orange Coast College star Bruce Chapman scoring 27. Oregon's zone dumped Oregon State, 79-64.

Layton's 41 Spark Trojans

Combined News Services

TEMPE, Ariz. — Dennis Layton returned to Arizona Saturday night and poured in 41 points as the Southern California Trojans scored a come-from-behind 108-95 victory over Arizona State.

Layton, who played his junior college ball at nearby Phoenix College, connected on 18 of 25 shots from the floor and converted all five of his free throw attempts as the Trojans claimed their sixth successive victory and ran their season record to 12-3.

"We're as good right now as we've been all year," said Trojan coach Bob Boyd. "Layton was anxious to do a good job for obvious reasons. He's been in a slump but he did a heck of a job tonight."

ABA STARS AVERT STRIKE

11,932 See West's Victory

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — The West, behind Larry Jones' 30 points and a devastating fast breaking attack, overpowered the East Saturday, 128-98, in the third American Basketball Assn. All-Star game, before 11,932 fans, an All-Star game record.

The West, winning this extravaganza for the second year in a row, also grabbed the No. 1 individual prize when rookie Spencer Haywood of Denver won the "most valuable player" award.

The nationally televised game itself was in doubt until only an hour before the scheduled 11 a.m. PST tipoff when the ABA's players association balked, seeking recognition.

Three hours before the tipoff, ABA commissioner Jack Dolph said he had notified CBS "there may not be a game."

Only after Dolph agreed to determine whether the association actually has signed a majority of the league players, did the game get the green light. The association claimed to have signed 80 to 85 per cent of the players.

Jones, a slick 6-3 guard from Denver, who played his college ball at Toledo, pumped in 20 points in the first half and saw only limited action in the second.

The East never could catch up after falling behind in the first couple of minutes, 9-1. The West led 34-18 at the first stop and 61-41 at the half.

The East closed the gap to five points three times in the second half, but then the West spurted away and put the game on ice.

Seven players scored in double figures for the West. Haywood getting 23 and Rick Barry of Washington, recently recovered from a knee injury, 16, and Steve Jones of New Orleans 14.

Larry Jones' 30 points established an all-star record, eclipsing the 22 by Daniels, then of Minnesota, in the first game here two years ago. Haywood and Larry Jones also eclipsed Daniels' mark of nine field goals by cashing in 10 apiece.

Jones set another game record with 10 free throws, bettering the eight by Darel Carrier of Kentucky last year.

Flood Admits 2nd Thoughts

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Curt Flood, admitting he is having second thoughts about his civil suit against baseball's reserve clause, said Saturday his attorney, Arthur Goldberg, has told him he probably won't play ball next season.

Flood said Goldberg, a former U.S. Supreme Court justice, had told him the suit might take two years.

"Yeah, I've had second thoughts about my suit," Flood said. "But I think I'm on the right track."

He said he had received a flood of letters, of which 90 per cent are favorable. But he confessed the other 10 per cent is causing him to lose sleep.

"I'll toss and turn and try to evaluate what I've done," he said. "In my mind I'm doing the right thing."

One letter said to the former Cardinal centerfielder, "once you were compared with Willie Mays. Now you will be compared with Benedict Arnold."

Another called him "a jerk."

But he thinks the other letters more than balance out that kind of criticism. One praised him for his "vision, courage and determination. Keep punching."

After the Cards traded Flood to Philadelphia Oct. 7 he decided to go to court to challenge the clause that binds a player to a club until he is traded, sold or released. He says it is treating people like pieces of property.

"Some of the owners contend it will end baseball," Flood said, "but the 600 players say we'll have a chance to make more money."

"I'm not trying to create chaos or end baseball," the 32-year-old Flood added. "I just want to stand up like a human being. I want something we can live with."

Big Payoff for Soutar in Showboat

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Dave Soutar of Gilroy won the biggest purse of his career Saturday when he took the $11,111.11 first place prize in the $77,777.77 Showboat Invitational bowling tournament.

Soutar, 28, whose first title was the national championship nine years ago, threw seven successive strikes in the nationally-televised championship game to crush Don Glover, a Bakersfield lefthander, by a 257-214 score.

Soutar finished in fifth place in the 40-game qualifier that preceded Saturday's final matches. He had to defeat three opponents before facing Glover, whose average of 220 plus in the elimination phase earned him the right to be seeded into the final games.

PORTLAND CAN'T ACCEPT NBA TERMS

PORTLAND (AP) — A Portland group trying for a National Basketball Assn. franchise said Saturday it would not accept new terms proposed by an NBA expansion committee earlier in the week.

Harry Glickman, Portland sports promoter and spokesman for the group, said that the increased price of the franchise and other changes in the ground rules made it impossible for the group to submit a bid.

"Our people were upset as much by the apparent lack of integrity on part of a minority of owners in the NBA as they were by the changes in the terms," Glickman said.

It had been reported that backers of the Portland bid were planning a regional team called Oregon.

Rockets Tackle Phillies at Blair

The Long Beach Rockets resume action today hosting the L.A. Phillies in an exhibition baseball game at 1:30 p.m. at Blair Field.

Due to the beginning of practice for collegiate players, the Pasadena Yankees, who won the championship of the league's traveling division, have been forced to withdraw making the Rockets the champions of the American Winter Semipro baseball league.

An attempt is now being made to arrange a playoff with the National League but this may not be possible as that league's champion has not been determined.

Worst Seattle Loss--Money

Combined News Services

The city of Seattle has its back up and is clawing at the fading Seattle Pilots. Whether the American League franchise is a business, a sport, or a state of mind, it's one thing for sure — money.

"I think a major league ball club has an initial impact of about $10 million a year from the indications I've seen, said James G. McCurdy, president of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. "That's just in sales, payroll, concessions and the like.

"And that impact is multiplied three or four times to businesses like hotels and restaurants because of the tourists and visitors attracted because of baseball. I'm told 35 to 40 per cent of the people who attended Pilots' games last year were from out of town."

"I cannot overemphasize the fact that Seattle has too much invested in the Pilots to permit them to leave now," Mayor Wes Uhlman said. "After a $3 million taxpayer expense, Seattle deserves more than a one-year turn at bat."

Dallas-Fort Worth's bidding for the Seattle franchise moved along on millionaire Lamar Hunt's soft-sell approach, but civic leaders remained poised to join the battle if Hunt beckons.

Hunt and Tommy Mercer, his Fort Worth partner in operation of a minor league baseball franchise midway between the two cities, have refrained from asking for any help from the civic "wheels" in either city in all of their previous dealings with the major leagues.

Hunt and Mercer have the machinery ready to start moving immediately to enlarge Turnpike Stadium's 10,000-seat capacity to between 22,0000 and 25,000 by the opening of the 1970 season — if the pendulum finally swings this way after three previous failures.

The temporary enlargement presents no particular structural problem since the stadium originally was designed for quick expansion. It could be permanently enlarged to near 50,000 by the 1971 season with equal ease.

Milwaukee hasn't given up hope. Radio station WOKY sent telegrams to all American League club owners and president Joe Cronin Saturday asking the Pilots be moved to Milwaukee.

"The world's greatest baseball fans urge you to put the Pilots in Milwaukee," the telegram said. "Remember the miracle of Milwaukee. It can happen again."

RIVERSIDE (AP) — Mike Davis, former University of Utah running back, was selected Saturday as assistant to football coach Pete Kettela at the University of California at Riverside.

SAYS STOMACH CRAMPS STOPPED FIGHT

'Not to Blame'--Little

An apologetic Freddie Little Saturday blamed "excruciating" stomach cramps for his eight-round disqualification for "not fighting" in a non-title bout Friday night in Rome against Eddie Pace of Los Angeles.

The world junior middleweight champion from Las Vegas was waiting for his manager to try to retrieve a $6,000 purse that was confiscated by the boxing commissioner immediately after Pace was declared the winner.

"It was a lousy fight. But nonetheless I think the official was a little hasty in stopping it at that time."

SPORTS BEAT

EIGHTEEN - year - old Jesse Stuart of Glasgow, Ky., Saturday set a new national high school indoor shotput record with a toss of 71 feet, 11 inches at the USTFF Midwest indoor championships.

Stuart, a 6-foot-2, 250-pound senior, broke the old record of 67-2½ set in 1968 by Doug Lyon of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

A NATIONAL high school swimming record fell Saturday when John Kinsella, 17, swam the 400-yard freestyle in 3:36.5.

Kinsella, of Hinsdale, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, broke the old mark of 3:38.0 held by Mark Spitz two years ago.

SCHOLASTIC Magazine announced its 19th all-America high school football team Saturday with six California players on the 100-man squad.

Quarterback Mike Sullivan and lineman Rich Prigge of Concord, running back Jim McAlister of Pasadena's Blair High, and ends Art Parker of Sacramento, Greg Hudson of Los Angeles and Lynn Swann of San Mateo are on the squad.

CHICAGO Bears' running back Gale Sayers has been selected to receive the 1969 George Halas Award by the Professional Football Writers of America.

THE WEST German team of Horst Floth and Pepi Bader took a commanding lead at the halfway point Saturday of the world two-man bobsled championships at St. Moritz with the United States in fourth place.

JOHN BARNHILL will retire July 1 as the athletic director at the University of Arkansas after serving the school 24 years in that capacity.

FORMER Seton Hall star Bob Davies and Navy coach Ben Carnevale have been elected to the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame.

Training Center for L.B. Rowing Assn.

The U.S. Olympic Rowing Committee announced plans to establish rowing training programs at nine rowing clubs, including the Long Beach Rowing Assn., across the nation to help oarsmen seeking places on the 1970 World championship team.

The announcement came from Victor H. Michalson, chairman of the Olympic Rowing Committee.

THE PRICE OF BEING BRUIN STAR

Vallely Sits, Suffers and Sweats, Too

"Whatever anybody writes or thinks about you is all fine, but you have to prove it every day. You have to say to yourself, 'You know, you're not that much.'" — John Vallely.

A person can learn a lot about himself by watching somebody take his place.

"This is what happened against Oregon State," says John Vallely, the No. 1 scorer on the No. 1 college basketball team in the country. "I fouled out of the game and had to sit on the bench and watch the rest of the guys play. That really takes a lot out of you."

It was two weeks ago that UCLA trailed Oregon State by four points with 2½ minutes to play, and all Vallely could do about it was sit, suffer and sweat as the Bruins pulled it out, 72-71, on a shot by sub John Ecker.

Vallely has finished many other games on the bench but under different circumstances.

"I sit out half the game, usually," he says. "So does every other starter when we have a rout 'cause (coach John) Wooden is going to play the rest of the kids, and that's only fair."

VALLELY ADDS that "they all want a chance to play, so you can't really be upset," but this modest 17.5-point scoring average doesn't truly measure his ability when stacked against the averages of the one-man run-and-gun shows.

"It's a funny thing about most of these big scorers," John says, "like (LSU's Pete) Maravich and (Notre Dame's Austin) Carr. They all stay in there until the last second and they get maybe 30 or 15 points during the garbage time.

"I mean, anybody could do that. You take any kid off our team, put him on one of those teams and he'd score 40 points a game. Carr was getting something like 34 a game and we both scored 24 that night. But he scored 15 against me and I scored my 24 while he was in there."

Likewise, Maravich totaled 38 points to Vallely's 14, but it was a Bruin runaway all the way and ol' droopy socks was sheer futility until the UCLA regulars departed at halftime.

That's the price Vallely pays for being a star among stars, but there is a deep personal conviction to the Bruins' current season coming off three consecutive national championships with Lew Alcindor.

"My goal is to win another one," John says, "Without Lew, I never dreamed of being on a national championship team but I think we have a better team this year in that all five players are working together. We relied so much on Lew that it took a lot from the game."

It also took a lot of credit away from Alcindor's teammates.

"It has to take something away," Vallely says. "You know that he couldn't have done it by himself. He had to have us out there. But I had no idea we would be playing as strong as we are right now. Everybody stuck together instead of thinking, 'Well, we can't do it without Lew.' This year we're proving that we had great talent on last year's team, besides Lew."

VALLELY, A 6-FOOT-3 senior guard, came to UCLA as a junior from Orange Coast College and Corona del Mar High, collecting enough all-thises and all-thats to paper Pauley Pavilion. He was almost beginning to believe he was invincible when he tried out for the United States Olympic team, prior to enrolling at UCLA.

John was working with the national junior college team at Hutchinson, Kan., under Jerry Tarkanian, now the Cal State Long Beach coach, when he became ill.

"It was a combination of things," he says. "I had the flu and diarrhea and the doctor said either the red or white blood cells were eating the other ones. I can't remember which, but my body was just deteriorating. I lost 12 pounds in about a week-and-a-half.

"Then they stopped me eating completely. I'd just take shots in my arms and I was trying to play basketball with these guys that were really great athletes. I hung in there for awhile but then the coach said, 'You'd better go home before you die.'"

The experience taught Vallely one thing: He wouldn't want to live in the Midwest.

"Kansas just turned me off. I couldn't stand that place. All I did was dream about home. I've always lived by the water and I couldn't see any pretty trees."

Vallely spent last weekend in Chicago for two games, adding, "I didn't like Chicago at all. Everything's black and dirty and there's trash everywhere. Plus, I don't like the cold that much, except to go skiing."

New York, where the Bruins won the Holiday Festival last season, appealed to Vallely for its "great night life" and he also liked Louisville, Ky., where UCLA won the national title and he earned all-NCAA tournament distinction.

"That was one of my better trips," he smiles.

OTHERWISE, HE WOULD be content to sun and surf and play volleyball on the beach, where you'll always find him in the off-season.

"Last summer I started playing a lot better so I knew how to play with guys that are good. We play all the beaches up and down the coast from San Diego to Santa Barbara. Tournaments are always on Saturday and Sunday. You pay your $2 and maybe it's a 64-team bracket."

The teams are two men each (doubles) and Vallely claims, "There's just as much pressure as there is in a basketball game."

It doesn't matter that there are no national rankings, little publicity and no 12,000 people in the stands.

"When I play basketball," John says, "there might as well be 10 people as 12,000."

Ernie Nevers: Unforgettable

PEBBLE BEACH — Ernie Nevers is a product of the golden era of sports — the 1920's — which gave us so many of our legendary athletic heroes.

In fact, no other man had the unique distinction of competing against Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Harry Heilmann, Eddie Collins and other hall of famers in Baseball as well as the likes of Jim Thorpe, Red Grange, Bronko Nagurski and other immortals of pro football.

A concensus all-America at Stanford in the mid-1920s, Nevers has been listed on most all-time teams and was among the first to be admitted to the College Hall of Fame as well as its pro counterpart, the NFL shrine in Canton, Ohio.

Pop Warner, his coach at Stanford, often said that Ernie was the greatest all-around athlete he ever coached, including Jim Thorpe.

Today, at the age of 66, Ernie still looks like he could give a good account of himself on the playing field.

Now a partner in a thriving food service in the Bay Area, he is making his annual appearance in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am tournament here. Ernie is a nine-handicapper.

TWO NEGATIVE aspects of his career often creep into his recollection of the old days. Against USC, for instance, he punted five times and all five kicks were blocked by the Trojans.

And two of Ruth's home runs in 1927, the year the Babe walloped 60, were off Nevers at old Sportsman's Park in St. Louis. The first was the Bambino's eighth of the season on May 11, and the other was the 42st on August 27.

Nevers, of course, pitched several seasons for the St. Louis Browns and says, "I think I could have become a real good pitcher or outfielder if I had given up football. My baseball days ended after I injured my back in football."

Ernie reveals that the three college games he most remembers were Stanford's Rose Bowl meeting with Notre Dame in 1925, and the '25 California and USC games.

The Rose Bowl game climaxing the '24 season is singled out as Nevers' greatest collegiate performance. He played the entire game on two injured ankles — fractures which barely had healed.

Until the bowl game, Ernie had played only three minutes of the '24 season after his left ankle was broken in a September scrimmage.

In the next-to-last game of the season against Montana in November, Ernie was in the lineup for the first time. Three minutes after the contest started, he was carried off the field with a broken right ankle.

When Stanford was chosen to play in the Rose Bowl against the Irish and the immortal Four Horsemen, Nevers walked through plays in practice on crutches.

WHEN THE CAST finally was taken off, Ernie had only four days of active practice before the game. He went into the Rose Bowl battle with his legs taped up to his knees.

Warner figured Ernie would last about 10 minutes, but Nevers played the entire game and at the end, the crowd gave him a standing ovation.

He carried the ball 34 times — a record in those days — and gained almost as much yardage as the victorious Notre Dame team.

On defense, he was in on nearly four out of five tackles and intercepted a pass to start the Indians on the way to a third-period TD.

Nevers still thinks Stanford would have won the game but for a questionable call by the referee. The late Walter Eckersall was head linesman and he threw up his hands and put the ball on the one-inch line where Notre Dame held for downs.

"If we had made that touchdown, the score would have been 20-17 and being only three points behind, we would not have had to gain so much with our passing," Ernie says. Notre Dame finally won, 27-10.

In his first pro appearance, Ernie got $25,000 for one post-season game against Grange's All-Stars in Jacksonville. That was late in '25 after his senior year at Stanford.

THE FOLLOWING YEAR, 1926, he signed to play football with the Duluth Eskimos for $20,000 and baseball with the Browns.

The football season, Ernie played 29 games, an average of one every four days. In one stretch, he performed in five contests in eight days, going the full 60 minutes in each. In fact, he missed only 27 minutes of action all season.

He was stricken with appendicitis two days before the Eskimos' key game with Green Bay. The doctors told him not to play, but he went ahead anyway and threw a record 62-yard touchdown pass to Joe Rooney, longest ever thrown in pro football up to then.

In 1927, Nevers set a new pro record by completing all 17 passes he threw against Pottsville. In another game, he kicked a record five field goals in as many attempts against Hartford.

But it was on an icy field in Chicago in 1929 that Nevers set the record of which he is the most proud.

Then with the Chicago Cardinals, he led his team to a stunning 40-6 victory over the champion Bears, scoring all of his team's 40 points — a mark never equalled on six touchdowns and four extra points.

Quite an athlete was Ernie Nevers.

Rangers Bury Bruins

New York Romps, 8-1; Boosts Lead

Combined News Services

The New York Rangers scored four power play goals, three of them while Boston's John Bucyk was serving a five-minute majority penalty midway through the second period Saturday and went on to rout the Bruins 8-1 in a National Hockey League game.

The victory moved New York four points ahead of Boston in the NHL's Eastern Division race.

In other games, Andre LaCroix scored one goal and got two assists and reserve goalie Doug Favell got his first shutout as the Philadelphia Flyers blanked the Minnesota North Stars, 6-0; Gary Unger scored his 20th and 21st goals of the season to lead the Detroit Red Wings to a 5-2 win over the Western Division-leading St. Louis Blues and Bobby Rousseau's 25-foot drive in the first period stood up the rest of the way and proved to be the winner as the Montreal Canadiens defeated the Chicago Black Hawks, 4-1.

Bucyk was sent to the penalty box at 6:21 of the second period for drawing blood while high sticking Ranger Brad Park. At 8:32, Vic Hadfield took a lead pass from Jean Ratelle and scored the first of three Ranger goals within a 3:21 span which blew the game open.

At 10:41 Ratelle scored on a 15-foot slap shot, and eight seconds later Ratelle knocked in a rebound to give New York a commanding 5-1 lead.

WHAT BIRDIES ARE MADE OF

Not every birdie comes after a booming fairway shot. Dave Hill had to excavate his approach from trap Saturday. Hill got within 10 feet of cup and dropped putt for birdie on Pebble Beach's second hole. Hill is four shots behind leader Bert Yancey. —AP Wirephoto

Crosby Leader Bert Yancey Protects Elbow With Bracelet

PEBBLE BEACH — It seems Bert Yancey, who earlier in the week revealed that one of the reasons for his fast start in the Crosby clambake was due to his new "image" of having fun while playing golf, also has another gimmick going for him.

He's wearing a bracelet on his left wrist . . . but it's not from superstition, nor does it carry any sentimental value, and it doesn't signify an old love such as the tattoo on Lee Trevino's arm which the El Paso Mexican star now keeps covered with a Band-Aid.

It's made of pure copper and Bert wears it because of a "tennis elbow."

"It is designed to absorb the calcium from the deposit on the elbow," Bert explained. "It's also good for arthritis, they tell me. Anyway, I'll sure endorse it because it works for me. I believe in it."

Yancey revealed he learned of the copper bracelets "when I first went to work at Whitemarsh Valley Country Club in Philadelphia several years ago. I noticed several members wore them. One close friend, a real good golfer, got so he couldn't swing a club, but the copper somehow cured him and he was able to play as good as ever.

"After I saw the two Australians — Roche and Newcombe — wearing the bracelets in the U.S. National Tennis Championships at Forest Hills, I asked them about it and they also swore by it.

"So," Bert went on, "when I played in the Kaiser tournament last October in Napa, I asked the tennis pro if he could get me one. He ordered it and sent it to me and I've been wearing it ever since the Heritage the last week in November and it sure has worked.

"Yes," he admitted with a grin, "they call it a voodoo bracelet on the box, but I understand they're going to change the name of it to 'Absorba' or something like that."

Attendance records continue to fall in the Crosby. Thursday's crowd of 11,600 was the largest opening-day turnout in the history of the event; 12,000 more showed up Friday despite the miserable weather, while a record 17,500 checked in Saturday resulting in one of the worst traffic jams ever seen here.

Gross gate receipts for the first three days hit $146,500 and the all-time record of $171,000 is sure to be surpassed today.

Jack Nicklaus, tied for 17th at 214, five strokes off the pace, needs to pass 10 players ahead of him today to become the third man to push his all-time money winnings over the $1 million mark.

Jack's total right now is $996,524.

Arnie Palmer was the first to go over a million late in 1968, and Billy Casper went over the top two weeks ago when he captured $20,000 first money in the Los Angeles Open.

There were several "name" casualties who failed to make the cut in the Crosby.

It took 219, four over par, to make the field for today's final 18 holes.

Among those who barely missed at 220 were Gene Littler, Gay Brewer and Johnny Pott, who won the 1968 Crosby from Casper in a sudden death playoff when he holed out a 20-foot chip shot from off the green.

Among those at 221 were Julius Boros, Al Geiberger and Hale Irwin, while at 222 were Frank Beard, leading money winner of 1969, and Dave Douglass, winner of last week's Phoenix Open.

Two others who failed to make it were Don January and Dan Sikes at 222

Kathy Schmidt Paces L.B. Track Club

Kathy Schmidt finished first in the discus and in the shotput to lead the Long Beach Track Club in the SPAAAU sponsored Inland Empire meet at Edgemont High Saturday.

Miss Schmidt, of Wilson High, threw the discus 129-10. Debbie Nolan was second in the discus. Sue Bruning, in her first track meet, finished fourth in the mile and fourth in the 880.

Keino Shakes Liquori

Carlos Remains Undefeated in 50

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kipchoge Keino, the popular Kenya Olympic champion, made a shambles of the field Saturday night, capturing the mile run in 4:00.6 at the third Philadelphia Track Classic.

The much-heralded duel between Villanova's Olympian Marty Liquori, and the 1,500-meter Olympic champion never materialized as the flashy Kenyan, took the lead after the half-mile mark and opened up a 50-yard edge on his nearest competitor, John Baker of Maryland.

Liquori, America's premier miler, was a well-beaten third, 80 yards back. Keino, leading a parade of meet and Civic Center marks that went crumbling, raced around the 12-lap boards to the approval of a standing crowd of 7,150.

Keino's time was the second fastest ever on a 12-lap track and was one of 10 meet marks that went tumbling.

Earlier John Carlos, the United States' top sprinter broke the meet mark in the 50-yard dash with a 5.2 clocking. The Olympic medalist, winning his fifth successive race of 1970, nipped fellow Olympian Charlie Greene of the U.S. Army at the tape.

Other marks falling were the 50-yard high hurdles, when Olympic runnerup Erv Hall of the Philadelphia Pioneers nipped Leon Coleman of the Southern California Striders and Bill High of Tennessee in 6.0.

Juris Luzins, formerly of William & Mary, also ran the fastest 880 yards ever over 12 laps en route to his record 1:50.9 victory.

Martin McGrady of Sports International romped to a five-yard victory over Villanova's Larry James in the 600-yard run in 1:11.7 as the indoor record holder at this distance broke the meet record.

Angels Chart Early Workouts

Manager Lefty Phillips announced Saturday the Angels, beginning Feb. 9, will start Monday, Wednesday and Friday preliminary workouts. Spring training for the full Angel squad will begin at Holtville Feb. 23.

General manager Dick Walsh has signed 12 players. The latest to ink contracts were pitchers Lloyd Allen, Bob Foderaro, Joe Henderson and Greg Washburn, outfielder Roger Repoz and infielder Doug Griffin.

Awards Await the Absentees

Those award winners who were unable to accept their trophies at the Long Beach Century Club's Awards Banquet Thursday night may pick them up at the Pacific Coast Club, 850 E. Ocean Blvd.

Trophies are being held there for Phil Keller, Harriet Glanville, Bill McCormick, Gary Albilz, Randy Leavenworth, Gary Pike, Tom McKibbon, John Van Blom, Susie Atwood, Kimla Brecht, Gary Hall, Gary Bennett, Earl O'Neill, Jr., Dennis Trout, and Jim Montrella.

Exhausted Ralston Tackles Ashe

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Dennis Ralston, who outlasted John Newcombe in a 93-game match, the longest in Australian big-time tennis, will meet Arthur Ashe in an all-American semifinal which boosted the United States' chance to win the Australian crown for the first time in 11 years.

Ralston, coach of the U.S. Davis Cup team, defeated Newcombe, Australia's No. 2 rated player, 19-17, 20-18, 4-6, 6-3, in a marathon which lasted four hours, 41 minutes. The match, which began under lights Friday night at the White City Club, was interrupted after the third set because of heavy midnight dew on the turf.

The sixth-seeded professional from Bakersfield took only 21 minutes to win the fourth set when play was resumed Saturday afternoon in the combined New South Wales and Australian Open championships.

Ashe, from Richmond, Va., lost the first set but he had a much easier time in eliminating Australian Davis Cupper Ray Ruffels 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Richard Crealy, the promising Australian Davis Cup hopeful, plays the winner of the Tony Roche-Roger Taylor match in the other semifinal.

Dodgers' Mound Trio to Appear

Dodger pitchers Joe Moeller, Alan Foster and Ray Lamb will appear in Long Beach next Sunday when the National Leaguers play the Major League All-Stars in a benefit game at Blair Field. All three Dodger players are products of Southern California high schools.

Moeller, who was called on 23 times by manager Walt Alston in 1969, will be pitching his seventh year with the Dodgers. The 6-6, 225-pound righthander attended Mira Costa High.

Foster, who graduated from Los Altos High, figures to be the Dodgers' fourth starter this season. Alan replaced Don Drysdale in the starting rotation last year and registered back-to-back shutouts against the Mets and Padres while compiling a 3-9 record.

Lamb appeared in 10 games in relief while posting a 1.80 ERA. Ray attended Glendale High.

Proceeds go to the medical fund of the Southern California Baseball Assn. Tickets for the season's first exhibition game will be on sale today at the Blair Field box office from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. All grandstand tickets are priced at $2. Youngsters under 12 will be admitted for $1. Tickets also will be sold next Friday and Saturday at Blair Field.

Motor Homes 1642

more than a camper, a compact motor home.

NEW 1969
The Minihome:™

It has a complete kitchen, and dining/lounge area. It has its own water system, ice box, even optional furnace and toilet. It can sleep four, and has plenty of storage. The fiber glass roof is full-height and full-length. Beneath it all is the strength and reliability of a Ford Super Econoline.

And when you're not off on vacation and long weekends, the Minihome serves as a second car and station wagon.

Come see the Minihome™ today. You'll see what campers can be when somebody wants to make you really comfortable.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY
Has toilet, 2-tone paint, WSW tires, extra bunks, custom equipment package. Motor #747.

Pro Football Eyes College Grab-Bag Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro football's great equalizer, the annual grab-bag of college talent, gets under way Tuesday with 442 players to be drafted and two quarterbacks and two defensive tackles among the prime candidates.

Quarterbacks Terry Bradshaw of Louisiana Tech and Mike Phipps of Purdue and tackles Mike McCoy of Notre Dame and Mike Reid of Penn State are the names mentioned most often.

But there could be some surprises when the 26 teams — banded together for the first time as the National and American Conferences of the merged National Football League — sit down for the first of 17 rounds.

By virtue of a 1-13 record and a victorious coin flip with the equally bad Chicago Bears, the Pittsburgh Steelers have the No. 1 pick.

"It's no secret we could use a good running back," says Dan Rooney, vice president of the Steelers. "But," adds Coach Chuck Noll, "I still believe in drafting the best available player, regardless of position."

Barring a last-minute trade involving their No. 1 pick, the Steelers are expected to go for either Bradshaw, who passed for 6,598 yards during his career, or Reid, a quick 248-pounder who might be shifted to defensive end or linebacker.

The Steelers have been trying to deal off their No. 1 pick for a number of established players and are known to have turned down a trade with St. Louis involving quarterback Charley Johnson. The Cardinals then dealt Johnson to Houston.

The available running backs are headed by Oklahoma's 215-pound Steve Owens, the Heisman Trophy winner, who set national three-year records of 3,867 yards rushing and 56 touchdowns.

Other notables in the running back contingent include Bob Anderson of Colorado, Jim Otis of Ohio State, Charlie Pittman of Penn State, Arthur James of East Texas State and Hubert Ginn, Florida A&M's best runner in 10 years.

Ted Koy of Texas is rated highly, along with two other Southwest Conference runners who were hampered by injuries — Larry Stegent of Texas A&M and Norman "Boo" Bulaich of Texas Christian.

The Bears, desperate for a quarterback, were expected to make the second choice either Bradshaw or Phipps. But they traded their pick last Wednesday to the Green Bay Packers for linebacker Lee Roy Jah Pitts and center Bob Jah Pitts and cinter Bob Hyland.

The rest of the order of selection for the first round goes like this: Miami, Boston, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, San Francisco, New Orleans, Denver, Atlanta, New York Giants, Houston, San Diego, Green Bay (their own pick), San Francisco again (obtained from Washington for tackle Walter Rock), Baltimore, Detroit, New York Jets, Cleveland, the Rams, Dallas, Oakland, Minnesota and the Super Bowl champion Kansas City Chiefs.

A 15-minute time limit will be in effect for each selection in the first two rounds and five minutes per selection thereafter. The draft is expected to last two or three days with no round to be started after 9 p.m., EST.

The Cardinals have the most selections, 22. Atlanta has 21; Green Bay and the New York Jets 20, Buffalo and Pittsburgh 19; Houston, Kansas City and San Francisco 18 each; Baltimore, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Oakland and Washington 17; Chicago, Denver, Miami, New Orleans and San Diego 16; Detroit and Minnesota 15; Boston, New York Giants and Philadelphia 15 and the Rams 13.

Coin flips were required to determine 11 positions among teams that finished with identical records. Pittsburgh will draft first on all odd-numbered rounds and Chicago on the even-numbered ones.

Promoter Parnassus Still Going

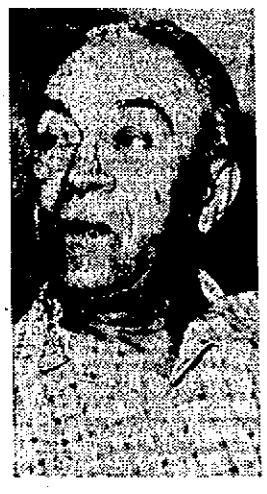

By ALEX KAHN
UPI Sports Writer

Two years ago veteran boxing promoter George Parnassus was on the verge of retirement but today at the age of 74 there are no thoughts of quitting in his mind as he lines up fights for his international shows at the Forum.

The Greek-born fight promoter is being honored next Wednesday by the famous Friars Club of Beverly Hills at a testimonial gathering to pay tribute to his more than 50 years in the boxing game.

In the past year and a half Parnassus has staged a dozen bouts, five of them world championship events, that have grossed better than $1.5 million.

Currently the attraction

GEORGE PARNASSUS
Going Strong

Parnassus is working on is the world welterweight championship fight Feb. 14 between titleholder Jose Napoles of Mexico and Ernie Lopez of Los Angeles.

"Everything is going fine," Parnassus said with a grin at his new offices in the Elks Club. "I think we have another fine attraction; the fight fans are interested and it should be a good show."

Parnassus has friends in all walks of life. When he opened his new offices last week, three members of the California Athletic Commission, Sheriff Peter Pitchess, the assistant mayor of Los Angeles, and numerous other dignitaries turned out for the affiar.

"It's a great honor to be the guest of the Friars because it's a tribute to the sport of boxing," Parnassus says. "It should be a lot of fun."

Parnassus takes hobnobbing with theatrical celebrities in stride. A renowned traveler as an international boxing promoter, Parnassus has an international coterie of friends in all walks of life.

The secret of Parnassus' success as a promoter is his willingness to offer large purses for top attractions and his ability to gauge the interest of Latin boxing followers in certain bouts.

Latin boxers have always been responsive to Parnassus from the days when he started out as a fight manager in Arizona through his lengthy period as a highly successful matchmaker and then as a promoter.

When Parnassus came to this country from Greece as a youth he settled in Phoenix, Ariz., and like so many of his countrymen he became a restaurant owner. It was not long until his clients numbered many boxers and he responded to their pleas to manage some of them. Handling boxers took up so much of his time he was forced to quit the restaurant business.

Parnassus speaks Spanish as fluently as he does English — or Greek. He learned the language from having married a Spanish-speaking bride in Arizona and from having managed so many Latin boxers.

Although now he spends most of his time promoting fights locally, Parnassus used to travel more than 100,000 miles annually staging fights in all parts of the world. He is a well known and cordially received figure in Europe, Latin America, Australia and the Orient.

Despite his world wanderings, the white-haired promoter found time to raise two sons, one of whom became a doctor and the other a priest. He chuckles that he's well protected physically and spiritually in his own family.

WHO SAYS I'LL RETIRE?
Pancho Gonzales relaxes in his New York hotel room Saturday as wife Madelyn pours coffee. The 41-year-old pro said he was surprised as anyone by the stamina which helped him upset Rod Laver in $10,000 winner-take-all match at Madison Square Garden.

BREAKS SNELL'S 1,000 MARK

Doubell Gets Record

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Australia's champagne-sipping Ralph Doubell broke a seven-year-old indoor mark in the 1,000 yard run and Cathy Hammond of Sacramento, Calif., erased the women's indoor mark in the 600-yard run in the Albuquerque Invitational Indoor track meet Saturday night.

Doubell, who says he practices on champagne, ran the 1,000-yard distance in 2:05.5 to crack the mark of 2:06.0 set in 1963 by the great Peter Snell of New Zealand.

Miss Hammond ran the 600 event in 1:22.7, breaking the mark of 1:22.9 set in 1969 by Lois Drinkwater of Phoenix.

Newlywed Bob Seagren and Dick Railsback failed in a quest to break the indoor pole vault record of 17-6 set last year by Seagren. They settled for a 17-foot performance with Seagren second on more misses.

In earlier action, the University of Colorado's Cliff Branch tied the 60-yard dash record of 5.9 seconds, held by eight others.

Willie Davenport was upset for the second week in a row in the 60-yard high hurdles by Gary Power of the Striders.

Doubell stayed in the pack for the first lap and a half of his 1,000-yard performance, content to trail Tom Von Ruden of the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach. But he swept past Von Ruden with a fantastic kick that left the rest of the field well behind.

Lee Evans of San Jose turned in a strong performance in the men's 600-yard run, touring the track in 1:09.6.

Power ran the event in 6.9, tying Davenport's meet record, just a tenth of a second off the world indoor record.

Former University of New Mexico distance runner George Scott won the mile run in a time of 4:11.5, three seconds slower than the meet record.

Dennis Hextall Sent to Montreal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dennis Hextall, 26-year-old forward for the Kings, was sent to the Montreal Canadiens late Saturday to complete a deal made Friday by the Kings for Dick Duff, veteran wing.

Coach John Wilson said it was a straight player deal with nothing else involved. Hextall in 28 games this season with the Kings scored five goals and seven assists.

Royal Denies Meet With Black Coach

Associated Press

Five prominent college football coaches, including Darrell Royal of top-ranked University of Texas, denied Saturday night that they met with black coaches in Washington Jan. 12.

Royal also branded statements attributed to him as "a vicious invention."

Besides Royal, the coaches included, John Pont of Indiana University, Lloyd Eaton of Wyoming, Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama and Cal Stoll of Wake Forest.

Tom Caldwell, head coach of predominantly black Elizabeth City, N.C., State, had told Associated Press that black coaches had invited the five major college coaches to meet with them to discuss the possibility of getting blacks named to post-season all-star coaching staffs.

Jan. 12 was the eve of the opening of the American Football Coaches Assn. convention in Washington.

Royal said he was in Austin, Tex., that night attending Texas' annual football banquet and that he did not arrive in Washington until the afternoon of Jan. 13.

Royal said he was "deeply disturbed" over the statements attributed to him.

"I was quoted," Royal said in a statement Saturday, "as telling the black coaches at this meeting, 'You have not been publicized by your public relations people and the black coach has not reached the point where his coaching is as scientific as it is in the major colleges.'

"Such thoughts are not in my heart, and I could not have made these statements.

"The whole thing is a vicious invention."

Royal and Pont not only said they did not attend but had not received an invitation.

"The only two of the five coaches in Washington when the meeting was reportedly held were Cal Stoll and myself," Pont said. "I was having dinner that night with my brother and Stoll also had another engagement."

Bob Greene of the Milwaukee Bureau of AP said Saturday Caldwell approached him at the coaches convention hotel in Washington the night of Jan. 12 and described what Caldwell said had occurred at a meeting of the five white coaches and several coaches.

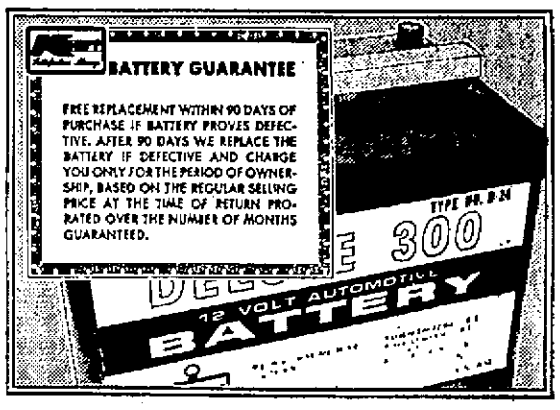

Greene said the details given to him by Caldwell includes quoted material attributed to Royal.

Greene said Caldwell introduced him to two other black men who wore tags bearing the names, Cy (Jack) McClaren of Bethune-Cookman, Fla., College and Eddie Robinson of Grambling. Greene said these two men reiterated everything that Caldwell had told him.

Greene said Caldwell also told him the American Football Coaches Assn. executive committee had attended and that the committee said it would study the proposal to hire blacks for all-star coaching positions.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Sportsmans Club Begins 34th Year

John Greenwood, the youngest man ever to take the office of president of the Long Beach Sportsmans Club, assumed that job Saturday night at an installation and dinner at the clubhouse, 3623 Santa Fe Ave. The occasion marked the start of the club's 34th year. He succeeded Bill Willborn.

Greenwood, who has been a member of the Sportsmans Club for six years, works for Allstate Insurance Company, with offices in Torrance, but he and his wife and family live at 10551 Rambleswood Dr., Stanton. He and his wife, Ava, have two teen-age daughters, Jo Ann, 14, and Karen, 13, and it seems that the entire family shares John's interest in the outdoors.

JOHN GREENWOOD
Adjusts to New Office

The Greenwoods do much camping and fishing, particularly along the Colorado River and on the lakes formed by that stream. John prefers fresh-water fishing, likes to hunt deer and all kinds of wild birds, but finds little time for ocean fishing.

John, born in Washington State, moved to California at an early date and went to school in the San Francisco Bay area. He spent four years in the U.S. Armed Services in Korea.

He became interested in insurance adjustment work nine years ago, worked as an adjuster, then became supervisor for a large area served by Allstate.

He wants the LBSC to give stronger support than ever to Ducks Unlimited and to the Ocean Fish Protective Assn. in 1970.

TAKING OFFICE WITH GREENWOOD were Bill Coleman Jr., vice president; Tom Skidmore, secretary; Bob Nehr, treasurer, and Herb Nau, sergeant-at-arms. Directors: Cliff Sewell, Bob Wright, Skip Buford and Hal Powell.

The club used most of the surplus in its bank account and much time of its members this year to add another room to the facility which fronts on Santa Fe Avenue. It is one of the most valuable pieces of property on the west side of long Beach.

The club members hope to recoup their funds this year with the third annual carnival, something that always has drawn big crowds and created fun and excitement in the summer period.

The Long Beach Sportsmans Club was formed as a nonprofit group to provide a meeting place for sportsmen of all walks of life, to assemble socially and exchange tales of their experiences with anybody who would listen.

One thing that can be said about the LBSC is that all its members have worked hard to make the club one of the best. In doing that, they have put their hands to the wheels, so to speak, not figuratively, but literally, to build walls, barbecue pits, fireplaces and even a casting pool. And the latest room has a pool table and can be classed as a recreational hall.

FRED AUSTIN, MASTER OF THE BARGE Islander, off Belmont Pier, must have a secret formula for baiting bonito. The Islander totals for that fighting fish have been soaring daily for more than a week. In addition, some small barracuda are showing.

Patrons of the barge have been coming ashore with sacks and sacks of bonito. Apparently the area where the Islander is anchored is ideally situated for bonito and the water has cleared since the recent rainstorm. Even so, other boats fishing surface water are not finding many bonito.

A "sand dab special" sounds a bit weird, but Pierpoint Landing's fleet manager, Cookie Cook, says that there has been such a demand for that type of fishing that the Pierpoint, stable old 65-footer of the landing's fleet, will make the run every Saturday and Sunday departing at 7 a.m. and returning at 3 p.m. Sand dabs are excellent fare for the table, but catching them is like pulling up pieces of paper.

Pierpoint also is starting a perch derby, with prizes each week. Fish can be caught anywhere, but the anglers must register at Pierpoint, then return there for the weigh-in of the fish. George Hart is in charge of that operation.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — Members of the Long Beach Spin-Fishing Club, taking a good, hard look at the anchovy situation as created by the silly decision of the Fish and Game Commission, has voted to double its donation to the Ocean Fish Protective Assn., the group that is carrying the ball for the sportsmen in the present fight to preserve anchovies for bait fish.

Gus Newman, Lake Havasu City publicist, finally has recovered from the aftermath of the Outboard World Championship to take a look at the fishing picture on that lake. Perhaps the outboards seared the fish so much that they still are hiding. Some anglers have hooked striped bass near Parker Dam in deep water, but no one has been able to land one. Weighted lures and waterdogs are getting the largemouths in water from 20 to 50 feet deep.

The California-Nevada chapters of the Wildlife Society and the American Fisheries Society will meet in Fresno Jan. 30-31 to study the impact of population pressures on fish and wildlife resources. Ray Arnett, director of the California Department of Fish and Game, will deliver the keynote address. Principal speaker at the annual banquet will be Charles H. Meacham, commissioner of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Possibly one of the most interesting features of the two-day meeting will be a panel on pesticides and wildlife.

FISHIN' FACTS

GEORGE TOUGHEST IN TIGHT GOING

Cal State Rivals Caught in a Trapp

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

The Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. scoring statistics rank Cal State Long Beach's lone representative—George Trapp—in a lowly tie for 10th.

It is a most unlikely position for a 6-foot-8 athlete who matriculated to Cal State after all-CIF honors at Monrovia High and all-State honors at Pasadena City College.

That 14.5 scoring mean, however, is of little concern to Trapp, or his current coach, Jerry Tarkanian.

"Scoring isn't everything," says Trapp, pointing out the obvious. "If I had to choose between winning and scoring, I'd take winning every time. That's what the game is really about—winning."

For Cal State Long Beach, Trapp's scoring and the 49ers winning usually has a direct correlation.

The two foremost examples are Trapp's 27-point effort in Cal State's 94-75 conquest of Pacific and his 22 points in last weekend's 83-77 decision over Cal State L. A.

"In those games," says Tarkanian, "George's real talents were on display. He dominated both those games, when he had to.

"Against Pacific, he scored 17 points in the second half although he played less than 10 minutes. It was an outstanding performance.

"Against L. A., he dominated the game for a four-minute period toward the end and it enabled us to stay close enough to win it."

Trapp's contributions to a 49er victory aren't always that noticeable.

Against Lamar Tech, for example, Trapp took only 10 shots, seven from the floor and three from the foul line. Yet he made them all and finished with 17 points in a 92-78 victory.

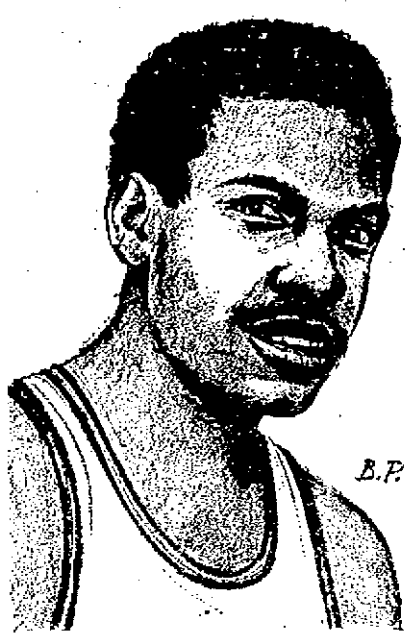

Last week against UC Santa Barbara, Trapp was 6 of 7 from the floor and finished with 14 points.

His contributions in the UC Santa Barbara and Cal State L. A. victories earned Trapp PCAA player of the week honors. He was similarly accorded by Southland basketball writers for his performance against Pacific.

Yet Trapp's timely ability to score isn't his only talent.

"George is actually one of our most consistent performers," reports Tarkanian. "George has played very well since the Houston game.

"He is also one of our more intelligent players on the court—he has good basketball sense."

CAL STATE'S GEORGE TRAPP
Figures Can Be Deceiving

Unlike most basketball players, who prefer to shoot, Trapp even enjoys playing Tarkanian's zone defense.

"The zone has been good to us," admits Trapp. "It keeps other clubs from getting the good percentage shot against us."

Why is the zone tougher one time than the next?

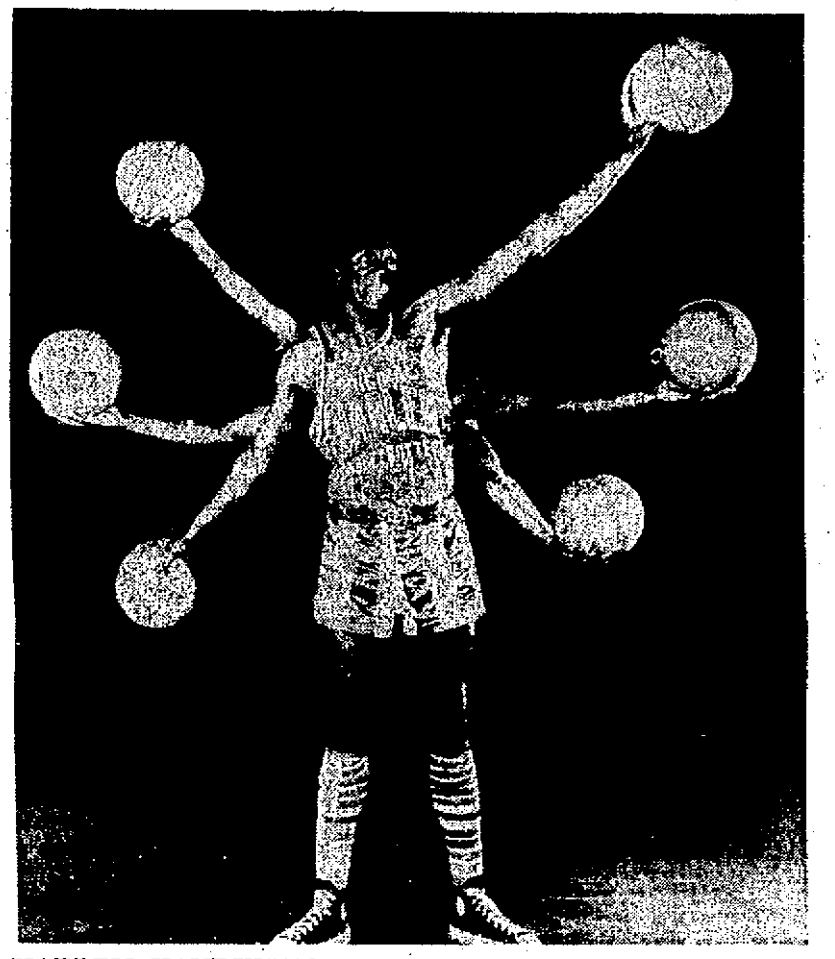

"Because of the way we play it," Trapp admits with a slight smile. "It's hard to score on us when the game is late and close because that's when we play it the hardest.

"You have to work hard in a zone defense and there are times when we get lazy."

Did the pressure of two close games last weekend bother the 49ers?

"You feel the pressure some of the time," admits Trapp, "but you have to get used to it. You have to ignore it. In the end, the team that wants to win the most, the team that works hard to win, usually does."

Perhaps one of the main reasons the 49ers are 13-3 this season is that Trapp does most of his work when the game is still to be decided.

HARLEM HANDYMAN
Meadowlark Lemon, clown prince of famed Harlem Globetrotters, only uses two arms when he plays, but they are enough to create plenty of comedy. Trotters appear Wednesday night at Long Beach Arena. They played before sellout crowd in Anaheim last week.

Arizona's 'Paradise' Booms Big

Combined News Services

West Coast race track labor problems promise to make todays annual Turf Paradise Handicap one of the state's most glamorous races.

Five Santa Anita entries are included in the 12-horse field for the $12,000-added mile and one-sixteenth classic.

California horses and jockeys, here because labor disputes forces closure of Santa Anita and Bay Meadows, have turned the winter season into a record setter.

California entries in today's handicap are Governor's Party, Elect the Ruler, Proper Proof, California and David Boy.

At Miami Saturday, Fast Hilarious held on gamely in the drive carrying top weight of 124 pounds at Hialeah to capture the 25th running of the $32,450 Royal Palm Handicap of seven furlongs. Fast Hilarious returned $8.60, $5 and $3.80.

At Bowie, Md., Juvenile John, winner of the $100,000-added John B. Campbell Handicap at Bowie tuned up for next month's renewal by narrowly winning the $29,100 Bowie Handicap.

Jacobsen the Recruiter Has Big Selling Point

By DAVE DANIEL
Staff Writer

Gary (Jake) Jacobsen has been head football coach for one month now and fortunately for Long Beach City College, it appears that he knows what he's doing.

Jacobsen, 31, took over Dec. 22 when Paul Chafe resigned to pursue administrative duties. Jake had been on Chafe's staff as defensive coach for four seasons.

He inherits a team that went 3-6 last year but still managed to finish in a respectable third-place tie in the rugged Metropolitan Conference.

His first month on the job has found him looking for replacements to a team hit hard by graduation on both offensive and defensive units and to help place his sophomores in four-year schools.

"We've been recruiting hard," he said. "We've been every place in the city and have seen almost every kid.

"Our challenge is to encourage the kids to come over here and play before they go on to a four-year school. We show them what advantages there are in playing 20 games in their freshman and sophomore years as opposed to maybe four games as a freshman in a four-year school.

"Also, the average sophomore in a university plays only 13 minutes a season, according to NCAA statistics."

But besides selling playing time, Jake is most proud of the fame LBCC graduates have gained after they've left the Carson Street campus.

"We've had more than 159 athletes go on to scholarships from here in the last 10 years," he says.

"For example, there were 17 players that made it good from last year's (1968) team. Look at Dennis Dummit and Rick Wilkes at UCLA. I don't have to say anything about them.

"There's Jeff Severson at Cal State Long Beach. How many interceptions did he get last year? 15? Other starters for (Jim) Stangeland were John Kahler, Phil Dunaway and John Courdy.

"Jay Morrison was first team all-WAC at the University of New Mexico. Dale Didur was a starter at Nebraska and Denny Mayfield was the starting tight end at Texas-El Paso."

The sophomores that played last season will be announcing where they are heading as soon as the new semester gets under way. Then all Jacobsen has to worry about is when the high school seniors will be doing the same.

★ ★ ★ ★

NORSE NOTES: Jacobsen also inherits a rugged pre-season schedule against state runner-up Fullerton, arch rival Cerritos, and Rio Hondo. The site of the Fullerton game is still undecided and it is possible that LBCC could have only three home games next year and six on the road. The Vikes had only four home games, and two of those on Friday nights, last season. Jake will soon announce the completion of his staff, "I have to find someone to replace me," he said.

COMPUTER CORNER

Knicks' Frazier Figures Charity Begins on Court

By BUD GOODE

The way he passes the ball around you could call the New York Knicks' Walt Frazier 'Mr. Lend-Lease.' Frazier leads the Knicks in assists, and the Knicks lead the league in the won-lost column.

What is the key to NBA leadership this year? According to the Sports Computer, total team assists this season make for championship play. New York and Atlanta are the NBA leaders in assists per game. Both teams lead their divisions.

The following table shows the teams in order of their standing plus the Univac sports computer figures on assists per game:

EASTERN DIVISION	Assists/Game	WESTERN DIVISION	Assists/Game
New York	27.4	Atlanta	26.0
Milwaukee	25.5	Chicago	24.3
Baltimore	23.6	Lakers	24.2
Philadelphia	25.4	San Francisco	22.1
Cincinnati	23.4	Phoenix	23.0
Boston	21.3	San Diego	21.9
Detroit	19.5	Seattle	25.8

The Knicks lead the league in assists per game. Frazier keeps the ball in circulation with 8.7 assists per contest. Walt Hazzard is the Care package man at Atlanta with 7.2 assists. Keep the melon in the family, men. It will make for a fat dessert at the end of the season.

Sizemore Joins L.B. Clinic

Ted Sizemore of the Dodgers, voted National League Rookie of the Year in 1969, will be one of many speaker featured at the Long Beach Unified School District's ninth Baseball Coaches Clinic.

The all-day affair, Saturday, Jan. 31, in the men's gym of Long Beach City College, will also present speeches by manager Preston Gomez of the San Diego Padres, Padre first-base coach Dave Garcia, scout Harry Minor of the New York Mets, pitcher Paul Doyle of the Angels and Dodger trainer Bill Buhler.

The clinic is offered free and is open to all baseball coaches at any institutional level. More than 400 attended last year's coaching clinic and drew guests from California, Arizona and Nevada.

Registration starts at 8:30 a.m. with the first lecture scheduled for 9. There will also be free refreshments.

ACCLAIMED

Jim Brownfield of Long Beach, football coach at Loyola, has been selected Coach of Year by National Club Football Assn. Lions won NCFA title last year.

SCATS Slate 2 Exhibitions at Alamitos

The Southern California Acro Team, better known as the Long Beach SCATS, will put its gymnastic prowess on display today with a pair of performances at Los Alamitos High School.

The SCATS, featuring Olympians Cathy Rigby and Wendy Cluff, will perform at 2:30 and 8 p.m. All seats to the matinee event are priced at 50 cents with the evening show scaled at $2 and $1.

Both shows are designed to raise money for the team to support its national and international competition. Eight members of the University of Nevada's NCAA champion girls gymnastic team will also take part in the program.

Signs of Spring

Tigers — Announced the signings of Willie Horton and Wayne Redmond.

Braves — Signed relief pitcher Hoyt Wilhelm for his 19th season.

Reds — Signed shortstops Woody Woodward and Darrel Chaney, infielder Kurt Bevacqua and outfielders Al Crawford and Danny Godby.

Senators — Signed outfielders Del Unser and Lee Maye and infielder Zoilo Versalles.

Pirates — Signed outfielder Willie Stargell.

Giants — Signed pitcher Gaylord Perry, catcher Jack Hiatt, infielder Bob Heise and rookies Gary LaVelle, Mike Sadek and Jim Howarth.

Nixon Outlines Goals for Decade

By DON HASTINGS
Staff Writer

The Nation

President Nixon delivered his first State of the Union message Thursday and outlined his administration's goals for the new decade. He gave top priority to securing world peace, beginning with a just settlement of the war in Vietnam, but his major emphasis was on domestic problems.

The President proposed a $10-billion, five-year program to check pollution of the environment and pledged continued efforts to reduce living costs, reform welfare and tax systems and to halt the spread of crime.

The address was generally well received in the Congress, which had convened its election-year session Monday.

THE DAY AFTER THE PRESIDENT'S call for a war on crime, the Senate overwhelmingly approved tough legislation designed to crack down on the Mafia and keep it from infiltrating legitimate business. The measure which, among the other things, allows judges to impose sentences of up to 30 years on habitual criminals, was adopted, 72 to 1. It faces an uncertain future in the House.

EARLIER IN THE WEEK, the Senate challenged the threat of a presidential veto by passing, 74 to 17, a $19.7-billion appropriation for health and education programs. Nixon has called the figure inflationary.

RETURNING FROM a 21-day tour of the Far East, Vice President Spiro Agnew reported the United States "is admired and respected" in Asia.

A FLORIDIAN WAS NOMINATED by President Nixon to fill the vacancy on the U.S. Supreme Court. He is U.S. Circuit Court Judge G. Harrold Carswell, 51, of Tallahassee. Civil rights groups spokesmen expressed opposition to the nomination, saying Carswell is a segregationist, but his decisions in racial bias cases have hewed to guidelines set down by the Supreme Court.

THE COST OF LIVING shot up .6 per cent in December, capping a year in which the increase was the largest since the Korean war year of 1951, the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics announced last week. Nationally, the cost index rose 6.1 per cent during 1969, to 131.3. This means that in December it cost $13.13 to buy the same goods and services that could have been purchased for $10 in the 1957-59 base period, or for $12.52 in December 1968.

INTEREST RATES BANKS may pay on savings accounts were raised by the Federal Reserve Board, a move it said should increase the money available for the depressed housing industry. Maximum interest banks on passbook savings accounts was raised to 4½ per cent from 4 per cent Banks also were authorized to issue one-year and two-year securities with single maturity dates bearing interest of 5½ per cent and 5¾ per cent respectively.

THREE MEN WERE ARRESTED in Cleveland, Ohio, and charged with the murder of United Mine Workers Union executive Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski, his wife, Margaret, and their daughter, Charlotte, in their Clarksville, Pa., home. Arraigned and held in lieu of a quarter-million-dollars bail each, were Paul Eugene Gilley, 37; Aubran Wayne Martin, 23, and Claude Edward Vealey, 26. The Yablonskis apparently were slain to prevent him from testifying before a grand jury investigating alleged irregularities in the December election Yablonski lost to UMW President W. A. (Tony) Boyle.

A CORONER'S JURY RULED the killing of two Illinois Black Panther Party leaders in a Chicago police raid Dec. 4 was "justifiable homicide."

THE PRESIDENT OF THE CHURCH of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, David O. McKay, died in Salt Lake City at 96. He had headed the church since 1951. Joseph Fielding Smith, 93, Mormonism's foremost theologian, succeeded McKay.

The West

Ruling in the first federal school discrimination trial on the West Coast, a U.S. District Court judge in Los Angeles ordered the Pasadena Board of Education to desegregate all of its 38 schools by the opening of school in September. Dist. Judge Manuel Real also ordered representatives of the school system to submit a plan for implementation of the order by Feb. 16.

Pasadena is split sharply into black and white residential sections and the basic policy of the school district has been to assign children to schools in their neighborhoods. A group of parents sued the district, contending that children in majority Negro schools are not receiving educations equal to those in majority white schools.

THE LEADER OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC Archdiocese of Los Angeles, James Francis Cardinal McIntyr, retired Wednesday, He was succeeded by Archbishop Timothy J. Manning, 60.

SAYING HE PLANS TO RETURN to private law practice, California's Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch, the only Democrat to survive the statewide Republican victory in 1966, announced he will not seek re-election.

The World

Israeli troops seized a small Egyptian island in the entrance to the Gulf of Suez Thursday, then dismantled and carried away a radar station used to shadow ships and aircraft and Israeli forces operating out of the Sinai Desert. The invaders swooped down in helicopters and secured the island of Shadwan after a four-hour battle. They claimed 60 Egyptian defenders were either killed or captured.

Twenty-four hours later, the Israeli troops and the pieces of the dismantled radar station were helicoptered out.

In other Mideast fighting, Israeli tanks and troops struck several miles into Jordan and attacked a military installation just south of the Dead Sea. The 23-hour battle was described as the heaviest action between the two countries since March 1968. Israeli warplanes ranged into Egypt hitting targets within 15 miles of Cairo.

You'll enjoy this fabulous, inexpensive way to get the latest cosmetics and enhance your beauty!

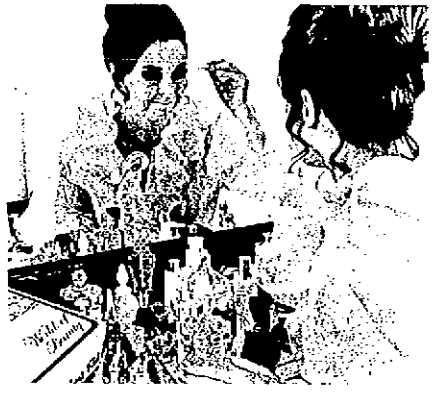

$10.00* WORTH OF COSMETICS FOR JUST $1.00

PLUS...A BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED FREE BEAUTY GUIDE MAGAZINE FEATURING THE NEWEST TRENDS AND HOW TO ADAPT THEM FOR YOUR INDIVIDUAL APPEAL.

THE BEAUTY HAPPENING OF THE YEAR! What's happening in make-up today is so flattering, so exciting, you've got to get in on it. Because the look of today is totally different than five years ago—or even one year ago! Eyebrows are lighter, lashes are thicker and more flattering, foundation is luminous, lipstick is pearly and gleaming! Today's moisturizers were unheard of a few years back. Today's cosmetics and beauty products are designed to make the most of the beauty that is individually yours.

How about you? If you'd love to get in on all the excitement of today's cosmetics, come join the World of Beauty Club. Over 1,000,000 women have sent for their introductory Beauty Kits. You get generous size cosmetics —top toiletries, lavish lotions and beauty aids—from the most famous and respected cosmetic companies in the world—all for only $1.00 as your introduction to membership in this exciting new club.

You get Free Beauty Guide Magazines, too! You pay nothing extra. As a member you receive with each new kit, a different, beautifully illustrated Beauty Guide Magazine, featuring advice on the art of make-up; guidance on the care of your face, hair, complexion; hints to assist you in the ever-changing fashion world.

EACH KIT IS FILLED WITH LOVELY SURPRISES

You receive the kind of cosmetics every woman wants and needs. New eye make-ups . . . bath oils . . . blushers . . . perfume . . . lipstick . . . moisturizers . . . bath powder . . . facial cream . . . hair conditioners . . . body lotions . . . make-up foundations . . . eye shadow . . . cologne. The finest products from the finest cosmetic people—at wonderful savings.

You'll receive a marvelous new kit approximately every ten weeks —entirely on approval. Each kit will be guaranteed worth at least $10, and often even more. Yet you pay only $1.98 for each kit plus shipping and handling for those you decide to keep. Send any kit back for full credit if it doesn't please you.

There's no obligation on your part, ever, to continue. You are free to cancel anytime you want with no questions asked. So mail the attached envelope with your $1.00—or if you prefer, we will bill you later for $1.00 plus 98c shipping and handling. Do it today!

*Based on manufacturers' suggested retail prices.

Let cosmetic magic bring out the clear beauty of your complexion.

Learn secrets of curve, color, shine, shape for lovelier lips.

See your eyes sparkle with new products, colors, techniques.

Find new fragrances to create your own aura of loveliness.

Women of all ages love the World of Beauty Club℠ and the exciting surprises they receive in each kit

Here are a few typical notes from thousands of happy members.

"The kits alone are fantastic, but the special bonus offers given to members are unbelievable."

Mrs. Ronald A. Lane, Paducah, Ky.

"I guess all people have their doubts when they send in for memberships to different clubs especially at your introductory rate, but those doubts were soon erased."

Miss Linda Fulweider, Lebanon, Tex.

"I'm so delighted with all those beauty aids that I'm beside myself with joy . . . I just never knew how sweet and feminine I could feel."

Miss Bertha Johnson, N. Miami Beach, Fla.

"I can honestly say this last kit made me feel I was getting more than my money's worth . . . a feat not easily accomplished, I assure you."

Mrs. Michelle R. Nemec, Culver City, Cal.

"The first 'World of Beauty Club' Kit which I received today has pleased me very much. If all the kits are similar to this one in quality, you have a life-long member."

Dolores Stark, Matawan, N.J.

"Your kits are fabulous! They give me courage to try something different. My teenage daughters are delighted with assisting the experiment they call 'Developing Mom.'"

Mrs. Loretta T. Cole, Highland, N.Y.

Tim Conway Flies Again

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Comedian Tim Conway has reached the point of diminishing returns as a television star with the start of his new series "The Tim Conway Show."

As a co-star in "McHale's Navy," Conway survived after 17 weeks.

Last year as the star of "Turn-On," he bombed out after one show.

"If I show any consistency," the chubby, balding actor said, "this new series should be cancelled after 15 minutes."

Conway will find out Friday when his latest attempt to scale the Nielsen rating is flung at innocent viewers at 8 p.m., Ch. 2.

SOMEHOW, it is meet and fitting that Tim Conway is a former longtime resident of Chagrin Falls, Ohio. It

Lowell Thomas in New Guinea

Lowell Thomas, who has been taking journeys to remote corners of the world since 1914, takes viewers to New Guinea and describes expeditions which found natives who have never been exposed to civilization, at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Ch. 4.

'The Front Page'

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

The Xerox Corp., one of the most enlightened sponsors in television history, has pulled off another prestigious coup, to the benefit of home viewers.

On Saturday, Xerox will present, on a specially-created nationwide network, a production of one of the best and most delightful of all American plays, "The Front Page." It will air locally at 9:30 p.m., Ch. 11.

An all-star cast headed by Robert Ryan and George Grizzard will present the heralded Plumstead Playhouse production which sparked a revival of "The Front Page" on Broadway last fall. It was originally given a brief revival run on Long Island before moving to Broadway, where it is still playing to great notices.

The astounding thing is how the three major tele-

GEORGE ERES, Editor

PAN AND FAN MAIL

NOW that we've rid ourselves of the violence in TV, it's time we started to work on the illiteracy.

While we're praising "Hee-Haw" for being good, clean and non-violent, the show is getting away with "literary murder." The dialogue is so "slopped - up" with "I seens," "ain'ts" and bad "outhouse, haystack and cornfield" jokes that it could have more direct influence on the human personality than the movie "Bonnie & Clyde."

If violence (on TV) can make an individual more violent, then certainly colloquial slang and mind-warping "bathroom jokes" can make us more illiterate and perverted.

First violence, then controversy; what we have left is a bunch of dumb, absurd, supposedly entertaining situation comedies that stimulate nothing other than the human characteristic to use only a fraction of our cerebral capacity.

Ralph Hann,
Lakewood

I THOUGHT "The Survivors" was terrible and am not surprised that it's off, but Lana Turner was always a favorite of mine. Why don't they have a series with her. She was wooden in this series, but is usually a good colorful actress. She also has more sex in her little finger than Mae West ever had in her whole body. Lana's is a subtle sex; it's just there. Mae West flaunts her sex.

Kenneth Wilson,
Long Beach

I WISH to commend CBS for its made-for-TV movie, "Sole Survivor." It was excellent entertainment, and many of my friends thought so too.

If CBS has hesitated to get its feet wet, this movie should really get them off the diving board. The cast was excellent and the end was perfect. I was torn between watching "Name of the Game" and "Sole Survivor" with the latter winning. I was not disappointed.

Is there a chance of the TV movie being re-run?

M.F.
Long Beach

(You can bet on it).

I AM very disappointed in Ch. 11. All one week it was "They Won't Believe Me," with Robert Young, and the next week, "Mr. 880", with Burt Lancaster. Are they really that hard up for movies?

I stay up every night and watch the late movie. Because the talk shows bore me, and it seems that's all there is any more, talk, talk. They all try to out-do each other . . .

Why the same movie every night on Ch. 11?

Why so many talk shows? There are people who still stay up to watch a good movie.

K.R.R.,
Long Beach

(Ch. 11 tried the idea of the same movie every night, but effective Jan. 31 is going back to different movies each night. The talk shows — some like them — came along as an alternative to showing old movies).

The Don Adams to beware of is the Adams that's smiling —then he's deadly serious.

The Art of the Comic

The Don Adams above is the Adams who is about to say something funny.

United Press International

Inside every successful comedian is a serious dramatic actor who couldn't get work.

At least that's the way Don ("Get Smart") Adams sees it.

Adams cannot visualize Bob Hope as King Lear, Red Skelton as Hamlet or Jackie Gleason as Julius Caesar — not unless it's for laughs.

Yet every year some baggypants funnyman, a tear glistening in his eye, bemoans his fate and announces that he is a greater leading man than Gregory Peck.

Usually he is as drunk as an owl.

'MOST COMEDIANS want to be actors," said Adams, whose real last name is Yarmy. "But they are limited by their physical appearance or size."

Don falls considerably short of 6 feet and has yet to be mistaken for Rock Hudson. He has learned to live with these deficiencies.

"The big difference between a comedian and an actor is timing," Adams said. "The rhythm of delivering a line is not the same at all.

"Actors who have come on this show in the past five years have no sense of timing for comedy. They're brilliant at acting, but when it comes to humor they burlesque Milton Berle or Gleason.

"COMEDY is a different craft. When you say something funny you do it with a straight face. When your face is twisted into a comic mask, then you speak your line straight. But you never say something funny and look funny at the same time.

"Now you take a comedian out of comedy and put him in a drama. The first thing he does is over-act — but without the subtleties of a professional actor."

ADAMS admits he yearned to be an actor but settled for comedy when the movies were hiring Clark Gable, Tyrone Power and Robert Taylor for leading men. The competition discouraged Adams.

"I became a comic 20 years ago because the field was less crowded," he said wistfully.

"I thought being a stand-up comedian would open doors for me in other entertainment fields. But it didn't.

"I get offers to do other work in movies, but they are all the same kind of comeedy, the basic character of Maxwell Smart that I play in the series. See what's the point in doing them?"

Hope still stirs in Adams breast, however.

"There is a revolution going on now in movies," he said. "Films are no longer just for beautiful people. They're casting actors who look like everyday human beings.

"If Dustin Hoffman can make it as a hero, then there's hope for me."

CBS Starts Sunday Night News

By FRED FERRETTI
New York Times Service

The Columbia Broadcasting System will inaugurate a prime-time evening newscast at 6 p.m. Sunday.

The CBS televised football season ended last Sunday thus a broadcasting conflict was averted, but only temporarily.

The "CBS Evening News with Roger Mudd" will meet the National Football League head-on in the fall, when football doubleheaders are broadcast. Something will have to give.

CBS NEWS President Richard Salant is known to be adamant about the time placement of the newscast.

He reportedly told associates recently that he would not let the Sunday evening news program "become another Frank McGee show."

The apparent reference was to the National Broadcasting Company's Sunday evening news program, devoted mainly to feature stories and short documentaries, which is broadcast on a schedule which can be called sporadic. During the football season, McGee is a victim of Sunday afternoon football on television.

It is understood that Salant agreed to allow the news to run a seventh night only with the understanding that it not be periodically bumped by football. But, as one network source noted, "winter resolution can't possibly stand up to football revenue."

ONE FACTOR not to be overlooked, however, is

Tim Conway Flies Again

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Comedian Tim Conway has reached the point of diminishing returns as a television star with the start of his new series "The Tim Conway Show."

As a co-star in "McHale's Navy," Conway survived after 17 weeks.

Last year as the star of "Turn-On," he bombed out after one show.

"If I show any consistency," the chubby, balding actor said, "this new series should be cancelled after 15 minutes."

Conway will find out Friday when his latest attempt to scale the Nielsen rating is flung at innocent viewers at 8 p.m., Ch. 2.

SOMEHOW, it is meet and fitting that Tim Conway is a former longtime resident of Chagrin Falls, Ohio. It

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

The Xerox Corp., one of the most enlightened sponsors in television history, has pulled off another prestigious coup, to the benefit of home viewers.

On Saturday, Xerox will present, on a specially-created nationwide network, a production of one of the best and most delightful of all American plays, "The Front Page." It will air locally at 9:30 p.m., Ch. 11.

An all-star cast headed by Robert Ryan and George Grizzard will present the heralded Plumstead Playhouse production which sparked a revival of "The Front Page" on Broadway last fall. It was originally given a brief revival run on Long Island before moving to Broadway, where it is still playing to great notices.

The astounding thing is how the three major tele-

TV Movie Cuts

Plea for Less Senseless Butchering

By JACK GOULD
New York Times Service

In Washington there is much to-do, if not much action, on the issue of honest labeling of consumer goods, of forthrightly representing the content of a product offered to the public in packaged form. Where the national purse is concerned, such solicitude is welcome and overdue — but why should the application of such criteria stop there?

In television there exists a form of misrepresentation that has long been a prime viewer annoyance and thus far no one, not the courts, the Federal Communications Commission or the hapless set owner, has been able to do a thing about the problem: the butchering of movies on the home screen.

MANY INDEPENDENT television stations have fallen heir to excellent movies, but these stations are capitalizing on the appeal of a familiar title and then chopping it up. Such people as Judith Crist, writing in TV Guide, or Howard Thompson, who does advance capsule reviews for the New York Times, base their evaluations on having seen the originals in theaters; they have no way of knowing what cuts may be made in the televising.

By coicidence, two readers have submitted details on specific examples of such mutilation, both of which occurred on the same day: Mrs. Elizabeth Bogert, of Princeton, N.J., tuned in on the half of "Rebel Without A Cause," starring James Dean, which was shown on WNEW-TV on the afternoon of Jan. 11. Mrs. Bogert held a stopwatch on the performance and these are her figures on the way the film was broken up for spot commercials:

3:58 — Movie; 4:05 — commercial; 4:08 — movie; 4:16 — commercial; 4:18 — movie; 4:28 — commercial; 4:30 — movie; 4:37 — commercial; 4:39 — movie; 4:45 — commercial; 4:50 — movie; 4:56 — commercial and program's end.

MRS. BOGERT reasons that the insertion of so many commercial interruptions is ridiculous and unfair to the viewer. Only WNEW-TV knows precisely how much of "Rebel Without a Cause" was cut to make room for the spot announcements, but such reckless disregard for the film's continuity is madness. For the viewer, the practice is infuriating.

Jerold M. Bloom of New York City cited the case of "The Prize," starring Paul Newman and Edward G. Robinson, which was shown that evening on WOR-TV. Bloom had seen the film before and agreed with Howard Thompson that it was "first rate." But, Bloom said, on TV whole scenes were "whacked out in their entirety, one of them absolutely necessary for plot development."

For those who had not seen the film before, much of the cut motion picture was virtually unintelligible, Bloom observed.

SUCH COMPLAINTS are not novel, of course, but in the economic and legal structure of TV show business there apparently is no barrier to cutting a film arbitrarily to make room for commercialism.

The basic difficulty, particularly with some of the older pictures, is that the production firm, as the sole owner of the property, can sell it to TV under any terms it chooses.

Bloom proposes that publications insist that stations advise them in advance if a film has been cut and by how many minutes. At least the viewer would have some warning and would watch at his own risk, he said. But statistics alone would not indicate to a viewer unfamiliar with a particular film what specific cuts were made in the narrative or their over-all importance.

ACTUALLY, THE primary responsibility rests with the licensed stations, which should disclose publicly that they have edited or altered the content of a film. Use of the original title carries the implication that a viewer is going to see the original.

As for the incredible profusion of commercials during movies shown on independent stations — and the networks themselves have not always been angels in this regard — television is coming precariously close to the saturation point in spot announcements. As costs continue to spiral upward, the worst may still lie ahead.

This condition is a growing national problem which could erode the viability of the home screen for advertiser and viewere alike. It happens that superior movies are one of the few attractions for the audience that television needs most — the so-called light or occasional viewer.

Of all the complaints that cross this desk, those concerning the distortion, interruption and compression of movies probably rank second only to the perennial viewer worries over the effects of TV on children.

CRITICS' CORNER

MY SWEET CHARLIE, aired Tuesday, Ch. 4.

"My Sweet Charlie," NBC's made-for-television film feature was a venture that, in terms of story quality, calibre of acting and certainly in perception and meaning, was far out of the routine mold.

It has been a long time since the television production lines have turned out anything in the dramatic line that might be counted as a small classic. Certainly the vast majority of the movies-for-TV have been at best standard action shows which while diverting and well producted have been loaded with stock characters and had all the earmarks of B features.

But this two hour production was something else. It opened in deceptively l e i s u r e l y style, showing a y o u n g girl—played by Patty Duke—obviously running away. Frightened and worried, she attempts a hitchhike, is given food by a friendly storekeeper and, caught in a storm, takes refuge in a closed summer house on the shore near New Orleans.

Eventually the girl, pregnant, is joined by another fugitive, a Northern black man, played by Al Freeman Jr. They gradually became companions in misery.

The black man, it turned out, was a successful New York lawyer who had come South to see the black-white confrontation himself and to "look for my roots." He joined a protest march, got into a fight and fled, thinking he had killed a white man.

The girl, casually educated daughter of a Southern farmer, began with all the traditional prejudices, gradually coming to appreciate the black man as an individual. It was a fine, pure relationship that, inevitably, ended in tragedy.

The performances of Miss Duke and Freeman were superb-sensitive and pignant. While it was essentially a story of a black-white relationship in a Southern background, it was even more a story of a human relationship and one without deliberate villains.

—Cynthia Lowry, AP

ENGELBERT H U M P E R D I N C K, J O H N N Y CASH, aired Wednesday, Ch. 7.

The only real problem Engelbert Humperdinck has is his name. It's hard to imagine anyone with that name as a matinee idol — until you've seen him perform and heard him sing. But a matinee idol is what he is, all right. He's the real goods.

. . . Once you've got over the shock of his faceful of gorgeous teeth, I think you will find him a most attractive singing and personal addition to television.

Because of that monicker, which is bound to become a misspelled household name, everything sensible and nice about Mr. Humperdinck comes as a surprise. And there are many things sensible and nice about him. Above all, I think, is his graciousness, which is truly surprising in one so young. . .

Engelbert's show originates in London, following the path of a fellow singer from the British Isles, Tom Jones, who also has a weekly musical hour on ABC-TV. My personal preference, by far, is for Engelbert because Jones is endlessly high-powered, while video takes much more kindly to the attractive low-key approach of Mr. Humperdinck. Both fellows are actually rather nice, but Engelbert is better with comedy bits, and I prefer his easy-going (and good) voice and manner. As I have indicated, he is awfully handsome, and seems a natural for movies.

Humperdinck's well-produced debut was a tasteful outing that included solid guest spots from Tony Bennett, Leslie Uggams and Donald O'Connor. Engelberg wore a tuxedo and generally eschewed fancy singing g i m m i c k s. He doesn't need them. He's all right.

A N O T H E R all-right singer, Johnny Cash, who had a summer series on ABC-TV, returned to the network with a new regular hour entry each week. And the hulking, handsome country-folk star, who handles a guitar like a toothpick, looks like a circuit p r e a c h e r and sounds like John Wayne singing, picked up nicely from where he left off last summer. As with Humperdinck, Cash's guests also contributed heavily to the hour's success — Arlo ("A l i c e 's Restaurant") Guthrie, Jose Feliciano and Bobbie Gentry.

Guthrie, particularly, was magnificent in an outrageously funny and witty tall tale delivered in musical form.

—Rick DuBrow, UPI

HERE'S LUCY . . . aired Jan. 19, Ch. 2.

It was Lawrence Welk night on "Here's Lucy." While Welk, the smiling orchestra leader, may very well be the least likely candidate for comedy guest star, somehow it worked out very nicely.

That was largely because the plot was as old and familiar as the series itself, which goes back two decades. And because Lucille Ball and Vivian Vance in combination can perform miracles. There was Lucy, currently the TV mother of two teenagers, g e t t i n g into her weekly mess because old friend Viv has arrived for a visit, largely to meet Welk. L u c y has bragged that she knew him.

Vivian is conveniently so near sighted without glasses she can't tell the real Welk from a wax museum dummy. But the real Welk turns up unexpectedly and everyone winds up dancing the polka.

That outline certainly sounds dreary, but somehow Lucille Ball's ability and Lawrence Welk's ingenuous delight at being an actor communicated itself pleasantly.

When "Laugh-In" on NBC first arrived, "Here's Lucy" suffered a drop-off of audiences. This season, with "Laugh-In" losing a bit of its novelty and steam, "Here's Lucy" has returned to the top of the Nielsen list, bobbing regularly between fourth and 14th position in the top 20 shows.

GEORGE ERES, Editor

PAN AND FAN MAIL

NOW that we've rid ourselves of the violence in TV, it's time we started to work on the illiteracy.

While we're praising "Hee-Haw" for being good, clean and non-violent, the show is getting away with "literary murder." The dialogue is so "slopped - up" with "I seens," "ain'ts" and bad "outhouse, haystack and cornfield" jokes that it could have more direct influence on the human personality than the movie "Bonnie & Clyde."

If violence (on TV) can make an individual more violent, then certainly colloquial slang and mind-warping "bathroom jokes" can make us more illiterate and perverted.

First violence, then controversy; what we have left is a bunch of dumb, absurd, supposedly entertaining situation comedies that stimulate nothing other than the human characteristic to use only a fraction of our cerebral capacity.

Ralph Hann,
Lakewood

I THOUGHT "The Survivors" was terrible and am not surprised that it's off, but Lana Turner was always a favorite of mine. Why don't they have a series with her. She was wooden in this series, but is usually a good colorful actress. She also has more sex in her little finger than Mae West ever had in her whole body. Lana's is a subtle sex; it's just there. Mae West flaunts her sex.

Kenneth Wilson,
Long Beach

I WISH to commend CBS for its made-for-TV movie, "Sole Survivor." It was excellent entertainment, and many of my friends thought so too.

If CBS has hesitated to get its feet wet, this movie should really get them off the diving board. The cast was excellent and the end was perfect. I was torn between watching "Name of the Game" and "Sole Survivor" with the latter winning. I was not disappointed.

Is there a chance of the TV movie being re-run?

M.F.
Long Beach

(You can bet on it).

I AM very disappointed in Ch. 11. All one week it was "They Won't Believe Me," with Robert Young, and the next week, "Mr. 880", with Burt Lancaster. Are they really that hard up for movies?

I stay up every night and watch the late movie. Because the talk shows bore me, and it seems that's all there is any more, talk, talk, talk. They all try to out-do each other . . .

Why the same movie every night on Ch. 11?

Why so many talk shows? There are people who still stay up to watch a good movie.

K.R.R.,
Long Beach

(Ch. 11 tried the idea of the same movie every night, but effective Jan. 31 is going back to different movies each night. The talk shows — some like them — came along as an alternative to showing old movies).

The Don Adams to beware of is the Adams that's smiling —then he's deadly serious.

The Art of the Comic

The Don Adams above is the Adams who is about to say something funny.

United Press International

Inside every successful comedian is a serious dramatic actor who couldn't get work.

At least that's the way Don ("Get Smart") Adams sees it.

Adams cannot visualize Bob Hope as King Lear, Red Skelton as Hamlet or Jackie Gleason as Julius Caesar — not unless it's for laughs.

Yet every year some baggypants funnyman, a tear glistening in his eye, bemoans his fate and announces that he is a greater leading man than Gregory Peck.

Usually he is as drunk as an owl.

'MOST COMEDIANS want to be actors," said Adams, whose real last name is Yarmy. "But they are limited by their physical appearance or size."

Don falls considerably short of 6 feet and has yet to be mistaken for Rock Hudson. He has learned to live with these deficiencies.

"The big difference between a comedian and an actor is timing," Adams said. "The rhythm of delivering a line is not the same at all.

"Actors who have come on this show in the past five years have no sense of timing for comedy. They're brilliant at acting, but when it comes to humor they burlesque Milton Berle or Gleason.

"COMEDY is a different craft. When you say something funny you do it with a straight face. When your face is twisted into a comic mask, then you speak your line straight. But you never say something funny and look funny at the same time.

"Now you take a comedian out of comedy and put him in a drama. The first thing he does is over-act — but without the subtleties of a professional actor."

ADAMS admits he yearned to be an actor but settled for comedy when the movies were hiring Clark Gable, Tyrone Power and Robert Taylor for leading men. The competition discouraged Adams.

"I became a comic 20 years ago because the field was less crowded," he said wistfully.

"I thought being a stand-up comedian would open doors for me in other entertainment fields. But it didn't.

"I get offers to do other work in movies, but they are all the same kind of comeedy, the basic character of Maxwell Smart that I play in the series. See what's the point in doing them?"

Hope still stirs in Adams breast, however.

"There is a revolution going on now in movies," he said. "Films are no longer just for beautiful people. They're casting actors who look like everyday human beings.

"If Dustin Hoffman can make it as a hero, then there's hope for me."

ROGER MUDD

CBS Starts Sunday Night News

By FRED FERRETTI
New York Times Service

The Columbia Broadcasting System will inaugurate a prime-time evening newscast at 6 p.m. Sunday.

The CBS televised football season ended last Sunday thus a broadcasting conflict was averted, but only temporarily.

The "CBS Evening News with Roger Mudd" will meet the National Football League head-on in the fall, when football doubleheaders are broadcast. Something will have to give.

CBS NEWS President Richard Salant is known to be adamant about the time placement of the newscast.

He reportedly told associates recently that he would not let the Sunday evening news program "become another Frank McGee show."

The apparent reference was to the National Broadcasting Company's Sunday evening news program, devoted mainly to feature stories and short documentaries, which is broadcast on a schedule which can be called sporadic. During the football season, McGee is a victim of Sunday afternoon football on television.

It is understood that Salant agreed to allow the news to run a seventh night only with the understanding that it not be periodically bumped by football. But, as one network source noted, "winter resolution can't possibly stand up to football revenue."

ONE FACTOR not to be overlooked, however, is

SPECIAL

FACE THE NATION (2), 10 a.m. — Series expands to a full-hour for a special edition, coming three days after President Nixon's State of the Union address, which spotlighted the erosion of our environment. Guests are HEW Sec. Robert H. Finch, Sec. of Interior Walter J. Hickel and Presidential adviser Daniel P. Moynihan who will field questions about alleviation of pollution of resources and deterioration of urban areas.

MIRROR & THE MIRAGE (2), at 4 p.m. — A filmed portrait of distinguished British artist Graham Sutherland features his thoughts, ambitions and accomplishments; including informal chats between the contemporary artist and critic-historian Douglas Cooper, and with Mrs. Sutherland. Causes and effects are demonstrated by inter-cutting between his drawings and the actual subject matter.

TV Movie Cuts

Plea for Less Senseless Butchering

By JACK GOULD
New York Times Service

In Washington there is much to-do, if not much action, on the issue of honest labeling of consumer goods, of forthrightly representing the content of a product offered to the public in packaged form. Where the national purse is concerned, such solicitude is welcome and overdue — but why should the application of such criteria stop there?

In television there exists a form of misrepresentation that has long been a prime viewer annoyance and thus far no one, not the courts, the Federal Communications Commission or the hapless set owner, has been able to do a thing about the problem: the butchering of movies on the home screen.

MANY INDEPENDENT television stations have fallen heir to excellent movies, but these stations are capitalizing on the appeal of a familiar title and then chopping it up. Such people as Judith Crist, writing in TV Guide, or Howard Thompson, who does advance capsule reviews for the New York Times, base their evaluations on having seen the originals in theaters; they have no way of knowing what cuts may be made in the televising.

By coicidence, two readers have submitted details on specific examples of such mutilation, both of which occurred on the same day: Mrs. Elizabeth Bogert, of Princeton, N.J., tuned in on the half of "Rebel Without A Cause," starring James Dean, which was shown on WNEW-TV on the afternoon of Jan. 11. Mrs. Bogert held a stopwatch on the performance and these are her figures on the way the film was broken up for spot commercials:

3:58 — Movie; 4:05 — commercial; 4:08 — movie; 4:16 — commercial; 4:18 — movie; 4:28 — commercial; 4:30 — movie; 4:37 — commercial; 4:39 — movie; 4:45 — commercial; 4:50 — movie; 4:56 — commercial and program's end.

MRS. BOGERT reasons that the insertion of so many commercial interruptions is ridiculous and unfair to the viewer. Only WNEW-TV knows precisely how much of "Rebel Without a Cause" was cut to make room for the spot announcements, but such reckless disregard for the film's continuity is madness. For the viewer, the practice is infuriating.

Jerold M. Bloom of New York City cited the case of "The Prize," starring Paul Newman and Edward G. Robinson, which was shown that evening on WOR-TV. Bloom had seen the film before and agreed with Howard Thompson that it was "first rate." But, Bloom said, on TV whole scenes were "whacked out in their entirety, one of them absolutely necessary for plot development."

For those who had not seen the film before, much of the cut motion picture was virtually unintelligible, Bloom observed.

SUCH COMPLAINTS are not novel, of course, but in the economic and legal structure of TV show business there apparently is no barrier to cutting a film arbitrarily to make room for commercialism.

The basic difficulty, particularly with some of the older pictures, is that the production firm, as the sole owner of the property, can sell it to TV under any terms it chooses.

Bloom proposes that publications insist that stations advise them in advance if a film has been cut and by how many minutes. At least the viewer would have some warning and would watch at his own risk, he said. But statistics alone would not indicate to a viewer unfamiliar with a particular film what specific cuts were made in the narrative or their over-all importance.

ACTUALLY, THE primary responsibility rests with the licensed stations, which should disclose publicly that they have edited or altered the content of a film. Use of the original title carries the implication that a viewer is going to see the original.

As for the incredible profusion of commercials during movies shown on independent stations — and the networks themselves have not always been angels in this regard — television is coming precariously close to the saturation point in spot announcements. As costs continue to spiral upward, the worst may still lie ahead.

This condition is a growing national problem which could erode the viability of the home screen for advertiser and viewere alike. It happens that superior movies are one of the few attractions for the audience that television needs most — the so-called light or occasional viewer.

Of all the complaints that cross this desk, those concerning the distortion, interruption and compression of movies probably rank second only to the perennial viewer worries over the effects of TV on children.

SPECIAL

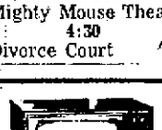

CAN YOU Top This? (5), 6 p.m. — Wink Martindale is host for Morey Amsterdam's televersion of Senator Ford's old-time radio show, as guest comedians try to top (on a laugh-o-meter) jokes sent in by viewers. Initial week's panelists are Danny Thomas, Stu Gilliam and Amsterdam. (Show moves Steve Allen to 6:30 p.m. and "Stump the Stars" to 4 p.m. as "The Movie Game" shifts from channel 9 to KTLA's 8 p.m. slot.)

IT TAKES a Thief (7), 7:30 p.m. -- Bette Davis makes one of her rare TV appearances as an aging, arthritic, destitute jewel thief who was an inspiration to Mundy in his early years. Al tries to rehabilitate her by inventing a caper in Majorca -- where Mundy catches up with Wally Powers, and Bessie (Miss Davis) recognizes a former lover who caused her to go to jail. She also gets a chance to demonstrate that she still has her touch with a safe.

NIXON NEWS Conference — If held today, as originally announced, confrontation with the press will preempt regular network programming.

CRITICS' CORNER

MY SWEET CHARLIE, aired Tuesday, Ch. 4.

"My Sweet Charlie," NBC's made-for-television film feature was a venture that, in terms of story quality, calibre of acting and certainly in perception and meaning, was far out of the routine mold.

It has been a long time since the television production lines have turned out anything in the dramatic line that might be counted as a small classic. Certainly the vast majority of the movies-for-TV have been at best standard action shows which while diverting and well producted have been loaded with stock characters and had all the earmarks of B features.

But this two hour production was something else. It opened in deceptively leisurely style, showing a young girl—played by Patty Duke—obviously running away. Frightened and worried, she attempts a hitchhike, is given food by a friendly storekeeper and, caught in a storm, takes refuge in a closed summer house on the shore near New Orleans.

Eventually the girl, pregnant, is joined by another fugitive, a Northern black man, played by Al Freeman Jr. They gradually became companions in misery.

The black man, it turned out, was a successful New York lawyer who had come South to see the black-white confrontation himself and to "look for my roots." He joined a protest march, got into a fight and fled, thinking he had killed a white man.

The girl, casually educated daughter of a Southern farmer, began with all the traditional prejudices, gradually coming to appreciate the black man as an individual. It was a fine, pure relationship that, inevitably, ended in tragedy.

The performances of Miss Duke and Freeman were superb-sensitive and pignant. While it was essentially a story of a black-white relationship in a Southern background, it was even more a story of a human relationship and one without deliberate villains.

—Cynthia Lowry, AP

ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK, JOHNNY CASH, aired Wednesday, Ch. 7.

The only real problem Engelbert Humperdinck has is his name. It's hard to imagine anyone with that name as a matinee idol — until you've seen him perform and heard him sing. But a matinee idol is what he is, all right. He's the real goods.

. . . Once you've got over the shock of his faceful of gorgeous teeth, I think you will find him a most attractive singing and personal addition to television.

Because of that monicker, which is bound to become a misspelled household name, everything sensible and nice about Mr. Humperdinck comes as a surprise. And there are many things sensible and nice about him. Above all, I think, is his graciousness, which is truly surprising in one so young. . .

Engelbert's show originates in London, following the path of a fellow singer from the British Isles, Tom Jones, who also has a weekly musical hour on ABC-TV. My personal preference, by far, is for Engelbert because Jones is endlessly high-powered, while video takes much more kindly to the attractive low-key approach of Mr. Humperdinck. Both fellows are actually rather nice, but Engelbert is better with comedy bits, and I prefer his easy-going (and good) voice and manner. As I have indicated, he is awfully handsome, and seems a natural for movies.

Humperdinck's well-produced debut was a tasteful outing that included solid guest spots from Tony Bennett, Leslie Uggams and Donald O'Connor. Engelberg wore a tuxedo and generally eschewed fancy singing gimmicks. He doesn't need them. He's all right.

ANOTHER all-right singer, Johnny Cash, who had a summer series on ABC-TV, returned to the network with a new regular hour entry each week. And the hulking, handsome country-folk star, who handles a guitar like a toothpick, looks like a circuit preacher and sounds like John Wayne singing, picked up nicely from where he left off last summer. As with Humperdinck, Cash's guests also contributed heavily to the hour's success — Arlo ("Alice's Restaurant") Guthrie, Jose Feliciano and Bobbie Gentry.

Guthrie, particularly, was magnificent in an outrageously funny and witty tall tale delivered in musical form.

—Rick DuBrow, UPI

HERE'S LUCY . . . aired Jan. 19, Ch. 2.

It was Lawrence Welk night on "Here's Lucy." While Welk, the smiling orchestra leader, may very well be the least likely candidate for comedy guest star, somehow it worked out very nicely.

That was largely because the plot was as old and familiar as the series itself, which goes back two decades. And because Lucille Ball and Vivian Vance in combination can perform miracles. There was Lucy, currently the TV mother of two teenagers, getting into her weekly mess because old friend Viv has arrived for a visit, largely to meet Welk. Lucy has bragged that she knew him.

Vivian is conveniently so near sighted without glasses she can't tell the real Welk from a wax museum dummy. But the real Welk turns up unexpectedly and everyone winds up dancing the polka.

That outline certainly sounds dreary, but somehow Lucille Ball's ability and Lawrence Welk's ingenuous delight at being an actor communicated itself pleasantly.

When "Laugh-In" on NBC first arrived, "Here's Lucy" suffered a drop-off of audiences. This season, with "Laugh-In" losing a bit of its novelty and steam, "Here's Lucy" has returned to the top of the Nielsen list, bobbing regularly between fourth and 14th position in the top 20 shows.

DOLORES DEL RIO and Robert Young play scene in the 10 p.m., Tuesday, segment of "Marcus Welby, M.D.," Ch. 7.

SPECIAL

CIRCUS HIGHLIGHTS (4), 7:30 p.m. — Dale Robertson is host for a salute to the 100th anniversary of the Greatest Show on Earth, featuring the world's leading circus acts — including several from Iron Curtain countries. Unicycles, high wire motorcycling and pole balancers are shown, as well as elephants, bears, dogs and clowns, as Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey performs at St. Petersburg. A 22-foot-high birthday cake featured, as is a capsulized re-creation of the circus' first 100 years, with Robertson on horseback.

THE DAY They Had to Close the Schools (2), 10 p.m. — Daniel Schorr looks into the problem of why, for the first time in history, American voters are deciding they can no longer pay the taxes necessary to support public education in their communities . . . and schools from Ohio to Hawaii have narrowly avoided closing down. Interviewed will be HEW Sec. Robert Finch, educator James Conant, and Governors Ronald Reagan (Calif.), John Burns (Hawaii) and William Milliken (Mich.), with the spotlight on community involvement on behalf of its schools in Fremont, Ohio.

★ SPECIAL

FACE THE NATION (2), 10 a.m. — Series expands to a full-hour for a special edition, coming three days after President Nixon's State of the Union address, which spotlighted the erosion of our environment. Guests are HEW Sec. Robert H. Finch, Sec. of Interior Walter J. Hickel and Presidential adviser Daniel P. Moynihan who will field questions about alleviation of pollution of resources and deterioration of urban areas.

MIRROR & THE MIRAGE (2), at 4 p.m. — A filmed portrait of distinguished British artist Graham Sutherland features his thoughts, ambitions and accomplishments; including informal chats between the contemporary artist and critic-historian Douglas Cooper, and with Mrs. Sutherland. Causes and effects are demonstrated by inter-cutting between his drawings and the actual subject matter.

DALE ROBERTSON is the host for the show marking the 100th anniversary of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Baily Circus show at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Ch. 4.

SPECIAL

CAN YOU Top This? (5), 6 p.m. — Wink Martindale is host for Morey Amsterdam's televersion of Senator Ford's old-time radio show, as guest comedians try to top (on a laugh-o-meter) jokes sent in by viewers. Initial week's panelists are Danny Thomas, Stu Gilliam and Amsterdam. (Show moves Steve Allen to 6:30 p.m. and "Stump the Stars" to 4 p.m. as "The Movie Game" shifts from channel 9 to KTLA's 8 p.m. slot.)

IT TAKES a Thief (7), 7:30 p.m. — Bette Davis makes one of her rare TV appearances as an aging, arthritic, destitute jewel thief who was an inspiration to Mundy in his early years. Al tries to rehabilitate her by inventing a caper in Majorca — where Mundy catches up with Wally Powers, and Bessie (Miss Davis) recognizes a former lover who caused her to go to jail. She also gets a chance to demonstrate that she still has her touch with a safe.

NIXON NEWS Conference — If held today, as originally announced, confrontation with the press will preempt regular network programming.

Danny Thomas Presents Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow

YESTERDAY'S FRONT PORCH
Juliet Prowse, Bob Hope

Danny Thomas stars as performer and "impresario" of a variety hour that will present some of the most famous personalities in the world of show business — Bob Hope, Carol Channing, Juliet Prowse, Dionne Warwick and Tim Conway — along with surprise guests and Marjorie Lord and Angela Cartwright from the "Make Room for Daddy" family in a program of comedy, music and dance at 9 p.m., Wednesday, Ch. 2.

Entitled "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," the format of the variety show is described by Thomas in his introduction, as "an affectionate look at yesterday, a quizzical look at today and a hopeful look at tomorrow," interpreted in song, comedy sketches and dance numbers.

CBS Begins Sunday News

that the number of football games on television will increase greatly next season when the American Broadcasting Company begins broadcasting a regular Monday night prime-time football game. This could lessen the number of doubleheaders.

The "CBS Evening News" is broadcast weekday nights with Walter Cronkite. Mudd is on the air Saturday nights now. A report that expansion of the news to Sunday nights would result in cancellation of the late night news program, anchored by Harry Reasoner, was denied by a network spokesman.

If Salant's resolve holds, CBS will become the only major network with prime-time news seven nights each week. NBC's Huntley-Brinkley report is aired six nights a week, and McGee's program is a sometimes seventh news night. The American Broadcasting Company's network news is broadcast Monday through Friday nights.

SPECIAL

LOWELL THOMAS In New Guinea (4), 7:30 p.m. — In his "Patrol into the Unknown," the veteran globe-trotter takes viewers with him on recent twin expeditions into remote corners of Australian-controlled New Guinea for views of natives who have never before been seen by civilized men and for the first TV filming of ancient tribal rituals. The Nomad expedition traveled 100 miles on foot through jungles occupied by the cannibalistic Biami tribe to find the Hisus still living in the Stone Age. And the Highlands group worked among the Enga tribe to film rites initiating boys into manhood, negotiations for marriage, and a sorcerer's efforts to find which spirit causes a tribesman's illness. (The Engas, incidentally, believe women are dangerous and destructive.)

SPECIAL

CIRCUS HIGHLIGHTS (4), 7:30 p.m. — Dale Robertson is host for a salute to the 100th anniversary of the Greatest Show on Earth, featuring the world's leading circus acts — including several from Iron Curtain countries. Unicycles, high wire motorcycling and pole balancers are shown, as well as elephants, bears, dogs and clowns, as Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey performs at St. Petersburg. A 22-foot-high birthday cake featured, as is a capsulized re-creation of the circus' first 100 years, with Robertson on horseback.

THE DAY They Had to Close the Schools (2), 10 p.m. — Daniel Schorr looks into the problem of why, for the first time in history, American voters are deciding they can no longer pay the taxes necessary to support public education in their communities . . . and schools from Ohio to Hawaii have narrowly avoided closing down. Interviewed will be HEW Sec. Robert Finch, educator James Conant, and Governors Ronald Reagan (Calif.), John Burns (Hawaii) and William Milliken (Mich.), with the spotlight on community involvement on behalf of its schools in Fremont, Ohio.

TV NOTEBOOK

THE FEDERAL Trade Commission has announced the makers of Baggies have agreed to stop using a television commercial purporting to show that their plastic bags can withstand a dunking in water while rival products will leak.

The FTC had objected to the Colgate-Palmolive Co. commercial, saying that "dunking the sealed bags in a sink of water and swishing them vigorously for three to five seconds during which time the closure of the competitive bag is forced open sufficiently to allow water to enter" was deceptive.

It said the water demonstration commercial was not evidence of Baggies' ability to keep food fresh or its superiority over competitive wraps.

The commission announced it had provisionally accepted a consent order prohibiting Colgate-Palmolive and its advertising agency, Maslus, Wynne-Williams, Street & Finney, Inc., of New York, from using "deceptive tests, experiments or demonstrations to sell its products."

TWO MAJOR NBC-TV executives spoke out recently on the currently sensitive subject of television journalism.

Julian Goodman, president of NBC, told the Hollywood Radio and Television Society:

"If every television camera went blind, not one problem in this country would disappear. If all the media reported only happy news, not a single issue would fade away. They would fester in darkness, and they would erupt. But the public would be ignorant of the causes and not sufficiently aware of the consequences to take effective action."

Reuven Frank, president of NBC News, told an Omaha television station's annual public service award dinner:

"The newsman's prime responsibility is the news business itself, with its standards and traditions . . . the alternative — the only alternative — is the newsman as a conscious instrumentality of social control. To me, that is frightening and abhorrent idea. I hope it is to you. But in one form or another it is often suggested. Those who suggest it are rarely aware of this implication of their suggestion. . . ."

ABC, looking at an overnight Nielsen rating for the first change in its second season schedule is encouraged by the showing made with its new Monday night movie. A quick sampling of viewers indicated ABC ratings had increased 78 per cent over the previous week — but of course the movie, "How To Steal a Million," with Peter O'Toole and Audrey Hepburn, was a big one.

The real test will come in subsequent weeks.

A $500,000 goal has been set for the second annual KCET (Ch. 28) Auction to be held May 31 through June 6.

Last year's auction raised $150,000 for the educational TV station.

Celebrity auctioneers will be enlisted to demonstrate donated items after which viewers at home can immediately telephone their bids to volunteer operators. Winning bidders will be announced on the air.

The auction will originate at KTTV (Ch. 11) studios, through the courtesy of Metromedia Television, and will be aired on channel 28 via remote. Space limitations at KCET necessitated the move to the larger facilities at KTTV.

SPECIAL

THE WORLD of the Beaver (4), 7:30 p.m. — Henry Fonda is off-camera narrator for a look at the life of the furry creature who is a lumberjack, a construction engineer, a wildlife conservationist, a drainage expert, an architect and a landscape engineer. Filmed by Australians Des and Jen Bartlett in the Rockies near Jackson Hole, hour follows the beaver from infancy through parenthood.

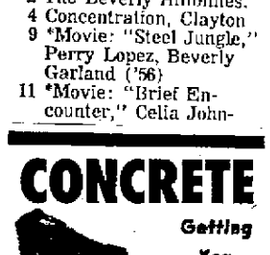

TIM CONWAY Show (2), 8 p.m. — Premiere. Conway and Joe Flynn, previously teamed in "McHale's Navy," play a pilot and president respectively of a one-plane air service that is always moments away from bankruptcy, with Anne Seymour as the owner of a rival airline and Fabian Dean as operator of the airport lunch counter. Opener features Ernie Anderson ("mystery" guest of Carol Burnett) and Frank Ramirez, as our heroes think they have a Cuban plane hijacker for a passenger and during the grappling the pilot locks himself out of the cockpit. (Series is filmed at Bracket Field near Pomona.)

SPORTS TODAY

Tim Conway Flies Again

Is as if the name of the hamlet ordained Tim's attitude and posture in wicked Hollywood.

This time out he expects success but is prepared for a fall.

In "McHale's Navy" he played a bungling Navy officer. In "Rango" he was a bungling sheriff. He simply bungled in "Turn-On."

In the new CBS situation comedy he plays a bungling pilot employed by a one-plane airline — anywhere anytime airlines — whose president and co-pilot is played by Joe Flynn.

Those with long memories will recall that Flynn was the choleric Captain Binghamton of "McHale's Navy" who reveled in bellowing at Conway.

"I THINK Joe and I can recapture the relationship we had in our first series together," Conway said. "He's as caustic as ever and I'm as dumb as ever in this very serious drama.

"It's a sort of Laurel and Hardy time. Instead of playing in the same scene together for maybe 15 minutes per show, we'll have 30 minutes to work out our comedy."

As added insurance, Anne Seymour will play the owner of the airlines, a barracuda of no small dimensions who nags both of the stars.

CONWAY, a timorous soul at best, has been aloft in the show's airplane but once. It is patched with cardboard and other unsubstantial material. Originally — in 1951 — it was a twin-engine Beechcraft.

"It glides like an anvil with wings," Conway said unhappily.

"I really wasn't afraid to go up in it. What really frightened me was the thought of keeping it up.

"I don't like to put down our plane, but it doesn't go more than 10 miles without refueling. It has no rest rooms, so we have to make a lot of stops at comfort stations."

As a mid-season starter, "The Tim Conway Show" has as good a chance as any to catch the public fancy. If it doesn't, Conway will be adequately informed.

"The critics will let me know," he signed. "So will the viewers, the ratings, the network, the sponsors, the ad agencies, several bartenders and my wife."

vision networks let this production get away. I saw Ryan and his cohorts in "The Front Page" in New York just before Christmas, and I urge you to cancel whatever plans you may have for the night of Jan. 31 in order to stay home and see this marvelous comedy by the late Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur.

In addition to its superb structure, "The Front Page" is fascinatingly pertinent, and even ironically contemporary, in its irreverent telling of the strained relationships between the press and the politicians and police of Chicago. It is not too farfetched to suggest that the notion of a rousing production of "The Front Page" in Chicago today has the seeds of a charming controversy in it.

There is real bite, adult abrasiveness and uproarious cynicism in "The Front Page," and its combination of comedy and melodrama is the prototype for all similar newspaper tales ever since. And one hopes there is no softening of the impact or earthiness when Xerox presents the play through the facilities of the Hughes TV Network.

Danny Thomas Presents Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow

YESTERDAY'S FRONT PORCH
Juliet Prowse, Bob Hope

Danny Thomas stars as performer and "impresario" of a variety hour that will present some of the most famous personalities in the world of show business — Bob Hope, Carol Channing, Juliet Prowse, Dionne Warwick and Tim Conway — along with surprise guests and Marjorie Lord and Angela Cartwright from the "Make Room for Daddy" family in a program of comedy, music and dance at 9 p.m., Wednesday, Ch. 2.

Entitled "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," the format of the variety show is described by Thomas in his introduction, as "an affectionate look at yesterday, a quizzical look at today and a hopeful look at tomorrow," interpreted in song, comedy sketches and dance numbers.

CBS Begins Sunday News

that the number of football games on television will increase greatly next season when the American Broadcasting Company begins broadcasting a regular Monday night prime-time football game. This could lessen the number of doubleheaders.

The CBS Evening News" is broadcast weekday nights with Walter Cronkite. Mudd is on the air Saturday nights now. A report that expansion of the news to Sunday nights would result in cancellation of the late night news program, anchored by Harry Reasoner, was denied by a network spokesman.

If Salant's resolve holds, CBS will become the only major network with prime-time news seven nights each week. NBC's Huntley-Brinkley report is aired six nights a week, and McGee's program is a sometimes seventh news night. The American Broadcasting Company's network news is broadcast Monday through Friday nights.

NOW HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING

Plug in for cold rooms or connect permanently for complete home, apartment or office heating.

For years heating engineers have known hot water heat is superior Hot water heat is soft, gentle. And—according to a world recognized university authority—provides the most uniform, floor-to-ceiling warmth of any heating tested. But for years properly-installed hot water heat has been a luxury few could afford. For it required the expensive installation and maintenance of a central boiler, plumbing system, special valves, controls, etc

Can you heat your home economically?

Yes, you now can heat your entire home economically because these remarkable heaters give off warmth from the warmed water even after the built-in thermostat has shut the electricity off They also adjust the amount of heat given off according to how cold the room is And they're absolutely safe because the electric element is inside the permanently sealed copper tubing containing water and anti-freeze solution! You can put these heaters behind drapes, furniture a child can stuff tissue into them .. all without the slightest danger Come filled never need refilling

LOWELL THOMAS in New Guinea (4), 7:30 p.m. — In his "Patrol into the Unknown," the veteran globe-trotter takes viewers with him on recent twin expeditions into remote corners of Australian-controlled New Guinea for views of natives who have never before been seen by civilized men and for the first TV filming of ancient tribal rituals. The Nomad expedition traveled 100 miles on foot through jungles occupied by the cannibalistic Biami tribe to find the Hisus still living in the Stone Age. And the Highlands group worked among the Enga tribe to film rites initiating boys into manhood, negotiations for marriage, and a sorcerer's efforts to find which spirit causes a tribesman's illness. (The Engas, incidentally, believe women are dangerous and destructive.)

TV NOTEBOOK

THE FEDERAL Trade Commission has announced the makers of Baggies have agreed to stop using a television commercial purporting to show that their plastic bags can withstand a dunking in water while rival products will leak.

The FTC had objected to the Colgate-Palmolive Co. commercial, saying that "dunking the sealed bags in a sink of water and swishing them vigorously for three to five seconds during which time the closure of the competitive bag is forced open sufficiently to allow water to enter" was deceptive.

It said the water demonstration commercial was not evidence of Baggies' ability to keep food fresh or its superiority over competitive wraps.

The commission announced it had provisionally accepted a consent order prohibiting Colgate-Palmolive and its advertising agency, Masius, Wynne-Williams, Street & Finney, Inc., of New York, from using "deceptive tests, experiments or demonstrations to sell its products."

TWO MAJOR NBC-TV executives spoke out recently on the currently sensitive subject of television journalism.

Julian Goodman, president of NBC, told the Hollywood Radio and Television Society:

"If every television camera went blind, not one problem in this country would disappear. If all the media reported only happy news, not a single issue would fade away. They would fester in darkness, and they would erupt. But the public would be ignorant of the causes and not sufficiently aware of the consequences to take effective action."

Reuven Frank, president of NBC News, told an Omaha television station's annual public service award dinner:

"The newsman's prime responsibility is the news business itself, with its standards and traditions . . . the alternative — the only alternative — is the newsman as a conscious instrumentality of social control. To me, that is frightening and abhorrent idea. I hope it is to you. But in one form or another it is often suggested. Those who suggest it are rarely aware of this implication of their suggestion. . . ."

ABC, looking at an overnight Nielsen rating for the first change in its second season schedule is encouraged by the showing made with its new Monday night movie. A quick sampling of viewers indicated ABC ratings had increased 78 per cent over the previous week — but of course the movie, "How To Steal a Million," with Peter O'Toole and Audrey Hepburn, was a big one.

The real test will come in subsequent weeks.

A $500,000 goal has been set for the second annual KCET (Ch. 28) Auction to be held May 31 through June 6.

Last year's auction raised $150,000 for the educational TV station.

Celebrity auctioneers will be enlisted to demonstrate donated items after which viewers at home can immediately telephone their bids to volunteer operators. Winning bidders will be announced on the air.

The auction will originate at KTTV (Ch. 11) studios, through the courtesy of Metromedia Television, and will be aired on channel 28 via remote. Space limitations at KCET necessitated the move to the larger facilities at KTTV.

SPECIAL

THE WORLD of the Beaver (4), 7:30 p.m. — Henry Fonda is off-camera narrator for a look at the life of the furry creature who is a lumberjack, a construction engineer, a wildlife conservationist, a drainage expert, an architect and a landscape engineer. Filmed by Australians Des and Jen Bartlett in the Rockies near Jackson Hole, hour follows the beaver from infancy through parenthood.

TIM CONWAY Show (2), 8 p.m. — Premiere. Conway and Joe Flynn, previously teamed in "McHale's Navy," play a pilot and president respectively of a one-plane air service that is always moments away from bankruptcy, with Anne Seymour as the owner of a rival airline and Fabian Dean as operator of the airport lunch counter. Opener features Ernie Anderson ("mystery" guest of Carol Burnett) and Frank Ramirez, as our heroes think they have a Cuban plane hijacker for a passenger and during the grappling the pilot locks himself out of the cockpit. (Series is filmed at Bracket Field near Pomona.)

SPORTS TODAY

PAC-8 BASKETBALL, 8 p.m. (5), finds Dick Enberg courtside at Berkeley for a live telecast of the contest between UCLA and California.

vision networks let this production get away. I saw Ryan and his cohorts in "The Front Page" in New York just before Christmas, and I urge you to cancel whatever plans you may have for the night of Jan. 31 in order to stay home and see this marvelous comedy by the late Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur.

In addition to its superb structure, "The Front Page" is fascinatingly pertinent, and even ironically contemporary, in its irreverent telling of the strained relationships between the press and the politicians and police of Chicago. It is not too farfetched to suggest that the notion of a rousing production of "The Front Page" in Chicago today has the seeds of a charming controversy in it.

There is real bite, adult abrasiveness and uproarious cynicism in "The Front Page," and its combination of comedy and melodrama is the prototype for all similar newspaper tales ever since. And one hopes there is no softening of the impact or earthiness when Xerox presents the play through the facilities of the Hughes TV Network.

Tim Conway Flies Again

is as if the name of the hamlet ordained Tim's attitude and posture in wicked Hollywood.

This time out he expects success but is prepared for a fall.

In "McHale's Navy" he played a bungling Navy officer. In "Rango" he was a bungling sheriff. He simply bungled in "Turn-On."

In the new CBS situation comedy he plays a bungling pilot employed by a one-plane airline — anywhere anytime airlines — whose president and co-pilot is played by Joe Flynn.

Those with long memories will recall that Flynn was the choleric Captain Binghamton of "McHale's Navy" who reveled in bellowing at Conway.

"I THINK Joe and I can recapture the relationship we had in our first series together," Conway said. "He's as caustic as ever and I'm as dumb as ever in this very serious drama.

"It's a sort of Laurel and Hardy time. Instead of playing in the same scene together for maybe 15 minutes per show, we'll have 30 minutes to work out our comedy."

As added insurance, Anne Seymour will play the owner of the airlines, a barracuda of no small dimensions who nags both of the stars.

CONWAY, a timorous soul at best, has been aloft in the show's airplane but once. It is patched with cardboard and other unsubstantial material. Originally — in 1951 — it was a twin-engine Beechcraft.

"It glides like an anvil with wings," Conway said unhappily.

"I really wasn't afraid to go up in it. What really frightened me was the thought of keeping it up.

"I don't like to put down our plane, but it doesn't go more than 10 miles without refueling. It has no rest rooms, so we have to make a lot of stops at comfort stations."

As a mid-season starter, "The Tim Conway Show" has as good a chance as any to catch the public fancy. If it doesn't, Conway will be adequately informed.

"The critics will let me know," he signed. "So will the viewers, the ratings, the network, the sponsors, the ad agencies, several bartenders and my wife."

NOW HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING

For years heating engineers have known hot water heat is superior. Hot water heat is soft, gentle. And—according to a world recognized university authority—provides the most uniform, floor-to-ceiling warmth of any heating tested. But for years properly-installed hot water heat has been a luxury few could afford. For it required the expensive installation and maintenance of a central boiler, plumbing system, special valves, controls, etc

Plug in for cold rooms or connect permanently for complete home, apartment or office heating.

Can you heat your home economically?

Yes, you now can heat your entire home economically because these remarkable heaters give off warmth from the warmed water even after the built-in thermostat has shut the electricity off. They also adjust the amount of heat given off according to how cold the room is. And they're absolutely safe because the electric element is inside the permanently sealed copper tubing containing water and anti-freeze solution. You can put these heaters behind drapes, furniture . . . a child can stuff tissue into them . . . all without the slightest danger. Come filled, never need refilling.

HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING

Plug in for cold rooms or connect permanently for complete home, apartment or office heating.

For years heating engineers have known hot water heat is superior. Hot water heat is soft, gentle. And—according to a world recognized university authority—provides the most uniform, floor-to-ceiling warmth of any heating tested. But for years properly-installed hot water heat has been a luxury few could afford. For it required the expensive installation and maintenance of a central boiler, plumbing system, special valves, controls, etc

INTERNATIONAL HOT WATER ELECTRIC HEAT

Can you heat your home economically?

Yes, you now can heat your entire home economically because these remarkable heaters give off warmth from the warmed water even after the built-in thermostat has shut the electricity off. They also adjust the amount of heat given off according to how cold the room is. And they're absolutely safe because the electric element is inside the permanently sealed copper tubing containing water and anti-freeze solution. You can put these heaters behind drapes, furniture . . . a child can stuff tissue into them . . . all without the slightest danger. Come filled, never need refilling.

WELLS REPORT

'Support your local sheriff (yellow)'

The law enforcement officers of Los Angeles and Orange County, who never sleep, are now working 24 hours a day to protect you and me from what appears from the press releases to be the number one threat to our persons and property — a second-rate Swedish movie called "I Am Curious (Yellow)."

For many of us it is, alas, too late. We have already seen the movie — it has only been playing in Los Angeles a year or more — and have had our moral fibers weakened possibly beyond repair.

My colleague Tom Keevil, of the Daily Pilot in Orange County, happened to be in the Balboa Theater the night the fuzz raided the place. He reported the film invoked not Eros but Morpheus in him. He had just settled down for a good nap when the cops woke him up.

When I viewed the film, it seemed to me that Mr. Keevil's reaction was shared by the young hero in the film itself. This tubby, blonde teen-age broad keeps running around in the nude trying to entice him. He was in the nude also, but it appeared to me he never worked up any special enthusiasm.

She finally seduces him by making sex so athletic he can exercise at the same time by swinging from trees and stuff. I mean it bears jogging alone.

"I Am Curious" did not do much to arouse my prurient interest. Frankly, I would give it about two stars on a scale where the lingerie section of Penney's Department Store rated three stars.

Now, if you really want to take the old prurient interest out for dinner and a show, wangle an invitation to the frequent showing of pornography films in police departments in the area — for training purposes, I presume.

They are attended by off-duty cops, on-duty cops, city councilmen, newspapermen, attorneys, bail bondsmen, and a couple of fellas who stopped by City Hall to pay parking fines and got into the wrong room.

The program consists of confiscated pornographic films. They are not usually as well-photographed as "I Am Curious," and they are definitely low budget. They compensate for this by being (1) short and to the point; and (2) utterly without any redeeming artistic or social significance whatever.

The civilians since they have other business usually watch for a while and then go about their business. The cops, as serious students of the art, stay to see the films over and over. They cheer and applaud novel photographic angles, creative directing and accomplished acting.

Make no mistake about it, if our well-trained police ever run into somebody simulating the sex act they will know what to look for.

In their crusade against pornography, the police have the unstinting support of the community. Veterans organizations and lodges sometimes show the same training films. Many distinguished artists have produced pornographic books and pictures — again one can only presume for training purposes.

Mark Twain wrote a dialogue, "1601," of which he said, "If there is a decent word findable in it, it is because I overlooked it." Benjamin Franklin wrote a classic of pornography as did Eugene Field, better known for his lovable poem, "Little Boy Blue."

Sir Arthur Sullivan, knighted composer of "Onward Christian Soldiers," collaborated with W. S. Gilbert on an obscene musical play, "The Sod's Opera." Hogarth, Rowlandson, Rubens, Rembrandt, Jan Steen, Michelangelo, Raphael, Tintoretto, Titian, Rodin, all graphically depicted erotic subjects.

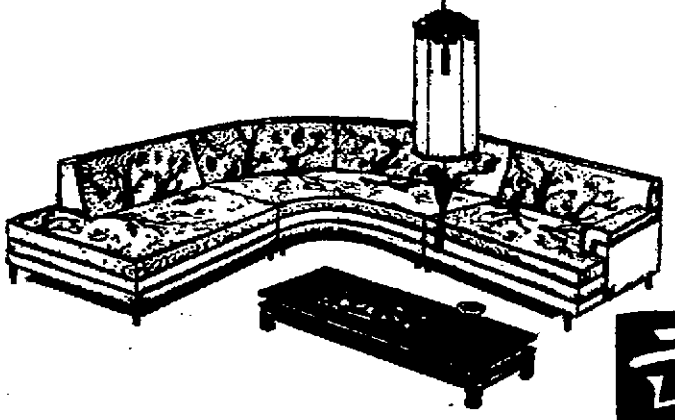

The Catholic Church maintains in the Vatican the most famous — and one of the most accessible — collection of erotica in the world — 25,000 volumes and 100,000 prints. The Library of Congress has the largest collection in this country. It is available to anyone over 16. That good churchman J. P. Morgan collected pornography. Henry E. Huntington had the greatest collection in the West.

It just goes to show that a lot of work by a great many people has gone into the current crackdown on "I Am Curious (Yellow)." □

THE HOMOSEXUAL

By Mark Clutter

"I am a homosexual, and I make no secret of it. However, if I talk to you, you must promise not to use my name. The story would hurt my parents. They are wonderful people and I have hurt them enough already."

I promised.

My luncheon companion was a fine-looking man of 25. There was nothing unusual about his looks or bearing. He was clean-shaven except for sideburns in the modern style. His casual clothes were youthful without flashiness or eccentricity.

He was remarkable, however, in his fluent, frank conversation. He spoke earnestly and thoughtfully, emphasizing his words with movements of his strong hands. His sensitive face expressed his emotions.

"First of all, I want to dispel certain cliches about homosexuals, at least as they apply to me," he said. "I did not have an unfortunate childhood. I did not have a domineering mother or ineffectual father. I did not come from an unwholesome environment. I was never involved in artsy-craftsy activities.

"My home life was ideal. We had lots of fun, lots of love. I was an only child born late in my parents' marriage. We were never rich but never poor either. My father is a businessman whose income over the years has averaged at about $12,000. We lived in a good middle-class district in Long Beach.

"My activities were athletics and outdoor sports. I was something of a water polo star in high school. I loved hunting and fishing. I've given that up because of a dislike for killing, but not long ago I became involved in falconry. I trained my birds and read everything I could find on that medieval sport. My chief ambition throughout my childhood and youth was to be a policeman.

"I was intensely religious. My parents are good Protestants but they never pushed me into church work. I did it because I loved it. I really dug it.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly that my childhood and youth were

THE LESBIAN

By Barbara Fryer

"I'm a lesbian. I'm not ashamed and I'm not proud. It's just what I am."

She said it the way you'd say "I'm a nurse," or "I'm a Catholic," or "I'm an . . ." anything else.

Her hands moved with her words and, when the words stopped, the hands sought refuge in her deep, thick, dark hair.

Call her Joy. She is 23 years old. And pretty. Striking perhaps. It was easy to see she had collected more than her share of whistles and stares.

Right now she was being watched from the next table by a suited businessman. He nudged a male companion. Then there were two other men in the dimly lit restaurant watching her.

Joy knew it. But she ignored them.

Instead, she looked up, a smile beginning in her dark eyes and moving over the rest of her face.

"See," she said, rubbing her hands over the top of her head, "no horns either."

Her smile disappeared as quickly as it had begun.

"I'm sorry. It's just that . . . well what can I say? I'm just like anybody else. I have dreams and hopes and disappointments. I like the desert. I like the mountains and the sea. I swim. I work. I even pray sometimes.

"I don't hurt anybody. I wouldn't hurt anybody. I respect a person's preference.

"That's the trouble with the world today. Everybody is minding everybody else's business. If they looked at themselves as close as they look at everybody else, we'd all be better for it."

Unlike many within her ranks, Joy said she does not consider lesbianism a sin or a sickness.

"It's my preference. It's my choice" — again the smile.

Joy came from the East. She won't say where exactly.

"I have my parents to think of. While I don't think my way is the wrong way, they would. They are the kind of people who cringe if you curse in the

BASEBALL'S COLORFUL UMPIRE

'I AM A HOMOSEXUAL'

"Hey, man, this is your favorite colored umpire. When are you and I going to have lunch together?"

The voice on the other end of the telephone was that of Emmett Littleton Ashford, age 53, who studied his trade for 15 years in the minors and now has spent five seasons as the most flamboyant arbiter in the American League, if not all baseball.

Emmett, the man with all the flourishes of opera's greatest maestro, is a special representative for Hamm Brewing Co. during his winter "rest period."

However, his greatest claim to fame is that he "broke the barrier" when he became baseball's first Negro major league umpire. He didn't bust the roadblock easily, because he had to prove himself above and beyond the white umpire's call to duty.

But his talent — shrouded to an extent during 15 years in the minor leagues — eventually could not be ignored and thus Emmett Littleton Ashford finally crashed the major league party.

He did more than crash the upper crust; he showed it how to operate with excellence. The road wasn't paved with flowers, but Ashford crushed the path's stones that might have impeded his progress.

In seeking a quiet lunch in Long Beach one afternoon, Ashford didn't get his solitude. One person after another came forth to shake the hand of Mr. Flamboyant.

"I saw you at Anaheim Stadium," giggled one matron. "You're so cute."

"I watch you on TV all the time," commented a man. "You're half the ball game."

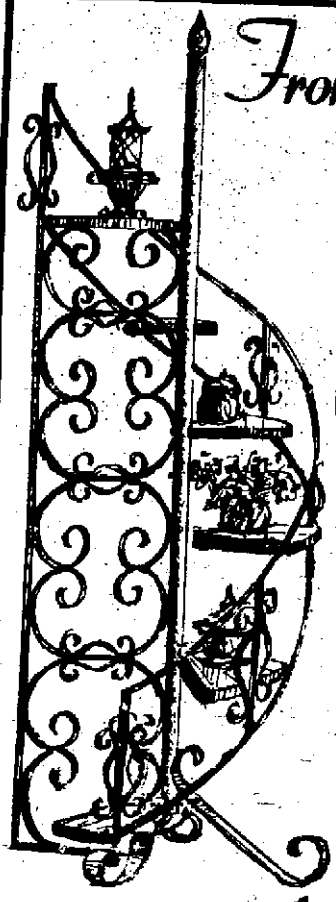

"Every time I go to Anaheim Stadium," lamented another, "you're working third base. That's no fun for me."

And thus it went.

Being the only Negro umpire in the majors, Emmett isn't a circus freak but a man who has generated an appeal to the public in much the same manner as, say, Frank Sinatra, Arnold Palmer, Joe

Bobby Bragan (without cap), Hollywood Stars manager, yells at umpire Emmett Ashford over a disputed call in a 1954 exhibition game in Long Beach's Recreation Park. It was Ashford's first year as a Triple A league umpire in the old Pacific Coast League. The picture was taken by Roger Coar.

The flamboyant Ashford, the major leagues' only Negro umpire, at his American League debut in ball park at Washington, D.C., five years ago.

Baseball's Most Colorful Umpire

By Hank Hollingworth

Namath, Mickey Mantle, Joe DiMaggio, Babe Ruth and Wilt Chamberlain.

In other words, he has that special something.

Ashford wasn't adverse to discussing his particular situation nor to relating the problems he had encountered.

"Let's put it this way," smiled the 5-foot-7, 187-pounder. "At the start I got the same abuse as Jackie Robinson. But it's not that way now. I think I've commanded the respect of both players and managers. That's what is important."

Was the racial issue deeply involved?

"Sure it was, at the start. Some players and managers tried it on me and I anticipated it. I also knew that I'd have to stop it fast. Then I learned something. It doesn't make any difference about your color really. If the players know you're hustling and bearing down, everything's OK."

How did the players, in general, respond to the emergence of baseball's first black umpire?

"Well, let's say that I got the treatment like all rookie umpires but in spades. Some of them made the expected comments and most of them tried to impose upon me . . . but the latter is a thing they do with all the first-time umpires. I knew I had to take it either way, else I might as well forget the whole thing and go into another business."

Surprisingly, during his major league tenure Ashford admits to only one poison pen note.

"That was something else," laughed the likable Emmett. "This single nasty letter was scrawled on a piece of bathroom tissue from Louisiana. It said something like 'Pete Ward (of the Chicago White Sox) should have knocked your brains out.' The guy was referring to a decision I called against Pete (a Canadian), who is a terrific player and person.

"I got a little angry when I read the other sentence, but let it pass. It said 'The only way you got into the majors was because of the NAACP.'

"I respect the NAACP, but that group didn't have anything to do with me being in the majors. They had other problems bigger than mine."

Ashford's advent into the erstwhile all-white umpiring ranks in September, 1965, wasn't without its other problems.

"One pressure group gave me a little trouble and I was a little worried at the time," said Emmett. "They threatened to picket every ballpark in the country if I wasn't removed. I wasn't removed and nobody picketed."

Ashford holds the unique distinction of having been the pioneer of black officials in three sports — basketball, football and baseball. He was a Pacific-8 official in basketball from 1950-58.

"I spent 18 years in basketball and really miss it," remarked Ashford. "But you can't do everything."

Almost before the words left his mouth, up came a former Long Beach basketball coach, Bob Hunt, to shake the colored man's hand. Hunt recalled the day 18 years ago when Ashford officiated one of his Wilson High JV games.

"Things like this make me feel good," smiled Emmett. "It shows that people remember and that's something good in this world today."

Testimony of Ashford's basketball officiating excellence came from John Wooden and Forrest Twogood, the UCLA and USC coaches who recommended him to the NBA when that professional circuit came West in 1960.

Ashford refereed one basketball contest in which Lew Alcindor participated. Asked if he encountered any problems that evening when Alcindor was a freshman, Ashford chuckled and answered:

"No. No problems with Lew. I just had to keep people from hanging onto him as he went up on the boards."

Since he broke the color barrier, Ashford was asked if he knew of other Negro umpires who might hit the major leagues.

"No," he sighed. "There are no other colored umpires coming up. I guess they don't want to wait that long to make the big leagues. It took me those 15 years, and other men too, but I guess the boys are too impatient today. But there's no shortcut in this business."

Should fear of abuse stop a colored person from attempting a major league umpiring career?

"It certainly shouldn't," snapped back Ashford. "Look at all the Negro officials today in pro and college football. The situation is different only in that a baseball umpire must spend every day working in the minor leagues. In football or basketball, the man can work one game a week and then spend the rest of the week with his regular job.

That everyday baseball pressure in the minors isn't easy."

Ashford got a taste of what was in score for him right here in Long Beach in 1954 — his first season as a Triple A arbiter in the old Pacific Coast League.

The place was old Recreation Park, the teams were the Hollywood Stars and the Los Angeles Angels who were meeting in the final exhibition game of the spring training season.

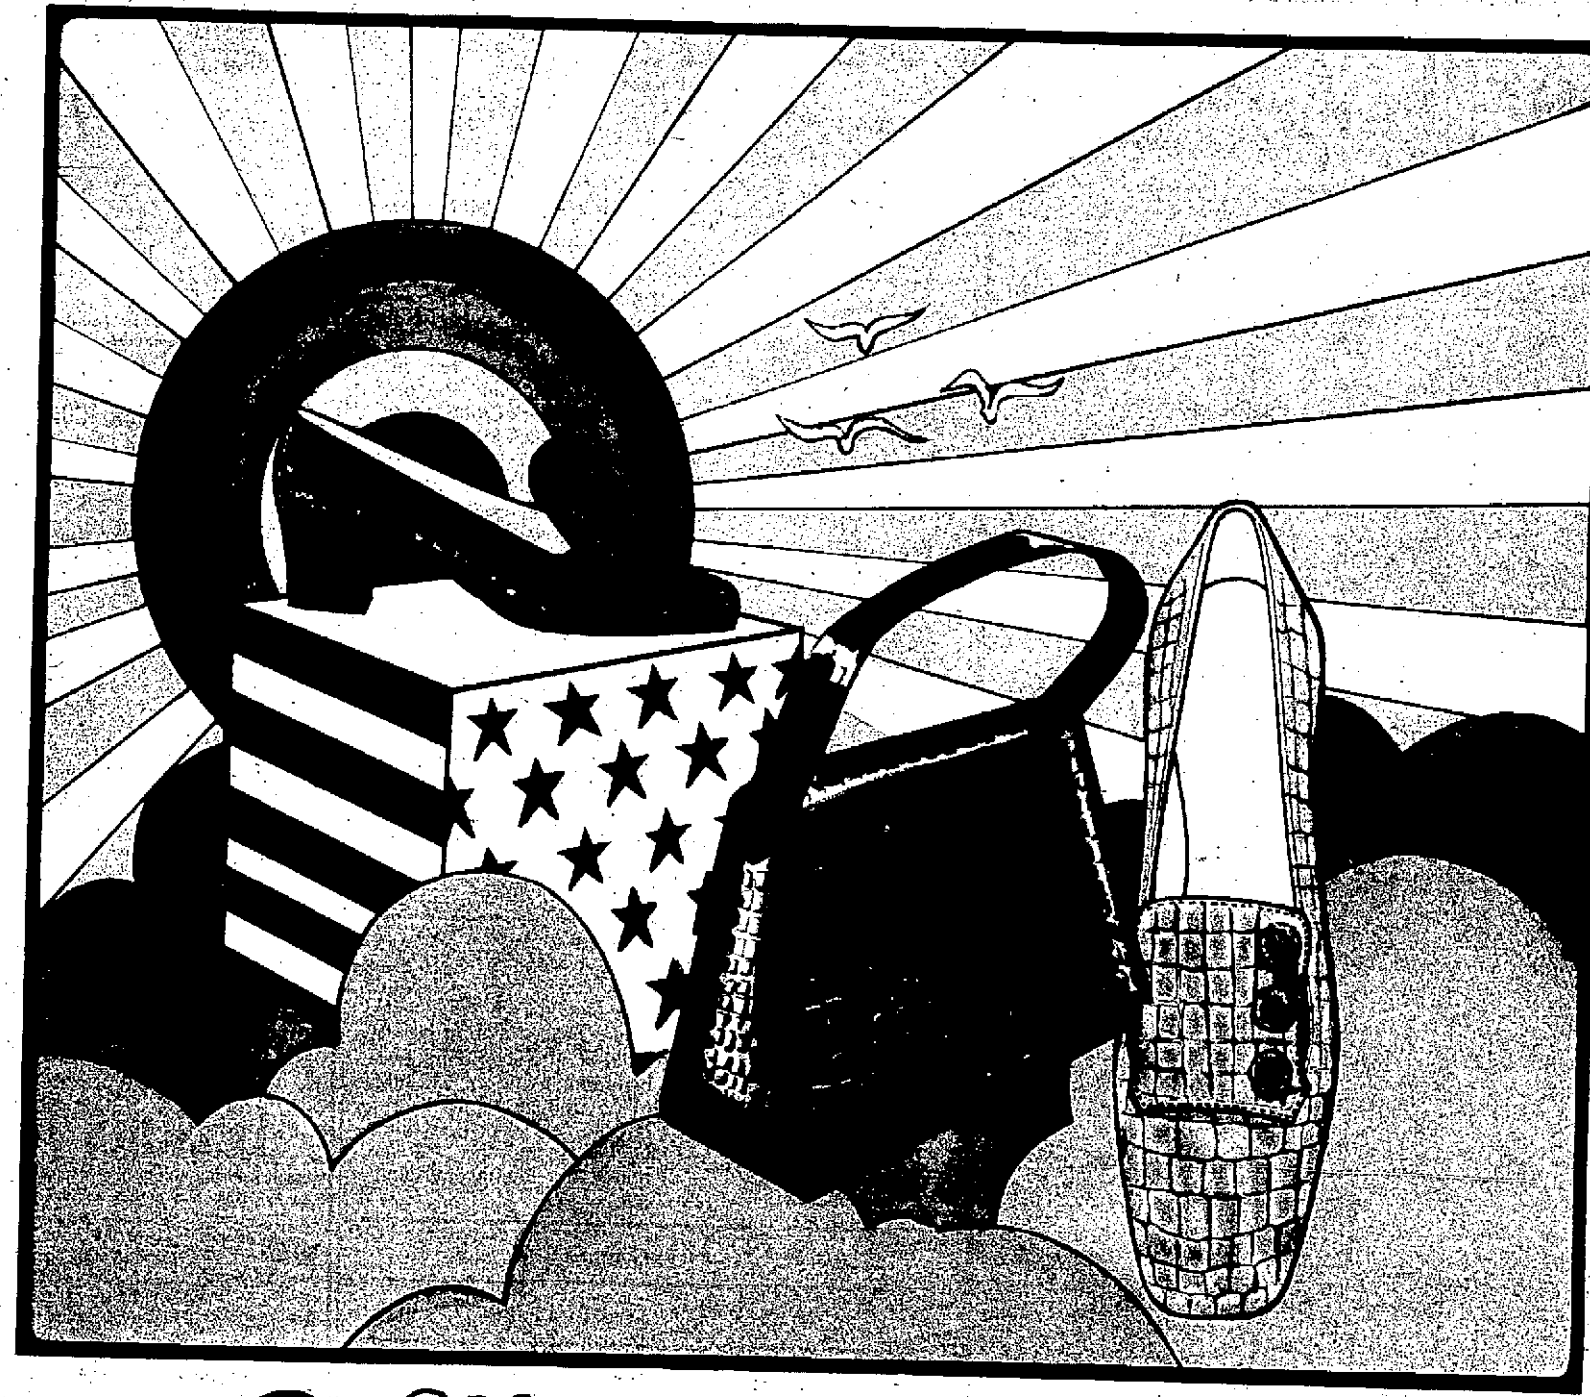

"It was a late inning," recalled Emmett, the plate umpire, "when I made a tough call on the Angel batter. I forget his name but he's now a treasury agent in San Diego.

"Bobby Bragan, the Hollywood manager, came storming at me, screaming a thousand things. He shouted, threw his cap up the screen, then proceeded to lay down with his hands behind his head right between first base and home plate. I told him he had one minute to get up and go back into the dugout or I'd throw him out of the game or call the game. He got up."

The Independent, Press-Telegram's chief photographer, Roger Coar, remembers the incident well. He had film left for only one shot and he made good use of it. The picture was circulated throughout the country and won an award or two for Coar.

"When the Stars and Angels opened the regular season the following Tuesday night, old Gilmore Field was packed and I think a part of that crowd came because of that incident in Long Beach," smiled Ashford. "My umpiring team also worked that Gilmore Field series, but we had no trouble."

Bragan is from Alabama, but today he's one of Ashford's firmest supporters.

"Bobby later told Eastern writers that I was extremely competent," declared Emmett. "And when I was promoted to the majors he sent me a wire of congratulations. Both of those things meant a lot to me."

Umpiring started as a hobby for Emmett Ashford. "I worked in the post office and then gave up 15 years' seniority to umpire in the bush leagues. But now it has been worth all the tribulations for me."

Perhaps what attracted both baseball fans and officials to Ashford was his flamboyant approach to the rather drab job of umpiring. Ashford calls a third strike on a batter and signals a base runner out with equal flourish. He practically leaps from the ground, swings his right arm dramatically and bellows either "strike three" or "you're out" when making a decision.

Many have termed him a showboat. It matters not to Ashford.

"Sure, I know they call me a showboat," laughed the man who in his relatively short major league career already has been selected to be an All-Star Game umpire (1967). "But that doesn't bother me, either. It's a habit with me. I did it all the time, even when I umpired sandlot games with only five or six people watching. But most of all I know I have to be efficient.

"Talk about being flamboyant, look at this last World Series. All the umps were giving it the television approach and that's good."

One New York scribe wrote that Ashford's entrance into umpiring ranks "made a drastic change upon umpires ... and had a big impact on their style ... and the proof was the 1969 World Series."

Ashford confessed that he had a few anxious moments at the start of the 1969 campaign.

"I almost thought I'd never finish the season after the first two games," sighed the maestro. "Boston was at Baltimore and both games went extra innings. I had nine crucial calls, ones that I had to make in a split second. It's easy to call them from the stands, but when you're right down there with an inch being as big as a mile, it's not so easy.

"The toughest call came in the 14th inning of the second game when Frank Robinson hit a screamer down the rightfield line and the ball hit that wooden sideline marker in Baltimore, then caromed into foul territory. I called the ball fair, Robinson got a double and the winning run scored.

"Dick Williams, the Boston manager, was fit to be tied. He questioned my eyesight and said that the circus lost an attraction when they passed me up. He got a $200 fine, but I couldn't blame him for getting angry. The call was tough, but the plate umpire agreed with me and that was that."

What impressed Ashford most during the past season?

"Well, I marveled at the plays made by Brooks Robinson at third base for the Orioles. And also the way Frank Robinson beats you with his bat and his head is really something. I think Denny McLain was a real pro coming back so well after winning 31 games the year before. There must be something to playing that organ. Ted Williams molded Washington into a unit and had them playing over their heads."

Emmett called the shot on the World Series and hopes that his prediction won't rebound so that he'll be considered a heretic in American League circles.

"I worked the last three games of the season with Baltimore against Detroit and honestly thought the Orioles were flat," stated Ashford. "I had to go with the Mets and their young pitching and Gil Hodges' big guns."

What has been Ashford's greatest thrill since entering the major leagues?

"I've had many," said the barrier breaker, "but one was working with Ted Williams. It really got to me when Ted told everybody this year that I was a good ball-and-strike man, that I knew how to call a pitch. Something like that coming from Williams is the highest honor."

As Hamm's special representative, Ashford discusses techniques with various distributors and one night he might be in Santa Ana, then 24 hours later in New York. He makes his home in Los Angeles.

He also stands high on the banquet circuit. During his so-called off-season of some 20 weeks, Emmett gives 30 to 40 speeches. He claims no problem there. "I just tell the people of my experiences and, since I have plenty, the rest is easy."

The Air Force invited him to be a member of a four-man clinic staff to tour bases in Europe this month with Al Campanis, Dixie Walker and Red Adams of the Dodgers.

"Man," he said with a laugh prior to the trip, "I'm glad I'm in the other league. Those National League cats will be all over me during the whole tour. But I'm sure proud to be given the invitation."

Emmett Littleton Ashford, age 53, the only black umpire in the major leagues, often abused, many times second-guessed where a white official wouldn't have been questioned, and on several occasions rapped without reason, would you do it all over again?

"Yes," shot back Emmett without hesitation. "In fact, I wish that I'd have been given the opportunity earlier. But I'd do it all over again without giving a second thought to the problems.

"This is my life and I love it. I'll continue to be flamboyant, throw out a guy who exceeds the bounds, and, as they say, always call 'em as I see 'em. Heck, nobody got ahead who felt sorry for himself."

This is the story of one of my favorite umpires and he didn't have to be colored to be so acclaimed.

As far as Ashford is concerned, this is not the start of the ninth inning. It's the moment just before the first inning when the umpire shouts "Play ball."

It was a grind, but Emmett Ashford came to play ball for nine innings every day or night. □

Kill doggie odor ...INSTANTLY

and make coat shine

At last! A quick and easy way to banish coat odor. MR. GROOM® replaces that embarrassing doggie odor with a fresh, clean fragrance. Instantly the coat is conditioned to a new luster, too. Skin becomes soft and supple—dog's coat looks better and smells better, right away.

Is there a dog in your life? Then discover today this shortcut way of keeping your dog's coat fresh and clean. You should know right now about the aerosol spray that has saved professional groomers hours and hours of grooming time yearly.

Here is why Mr. Groom Coat Conditioner is the Number One seller from coast-to-coast. Here is how Mr. Groom, the choice of professional groomers, can save you time in the care of your dog. Here's the story:

The magic of the Mr. Groom formula lies in its ability to absorb into the coat and skin without oiliness or greasiness. Yet, this greaseless formula has the ability to deodorize the coat and relieve the dryness of the fur and skin. The refined lanolin in Mr. Groom actually conditions-away the scaly, flaky skin and brittle, split hair caused by dryness. At once the coat is both conditioned and deodorized. Your dog looks better, feels better and smells better instantly.

Not Just a Deodorizer — But a Conditioner, Too

Mr. Groom is called a coat conditioner because it offers 5-way coat improvement. That is, this amazing formula conditions your dog's coat to bring results five different ways. Here they are:

1. DEODORANT ACTION—MR. GROOM replaces nasty dog odor with a fresh, clean fragrance. MR. GROOM has a "precious cologne" ingredient which keeps the deodorant action at work all day. For best MR. GROOM results, spray a light mist over your dog's entire coat.

Start by the tail so that you avoid alarming the dog with the aerosol "hiss." Spray in a zigzag motion, covering the entire coat from tail to head. Towel, brush or massage the conditioner into the dog's coat. You will instantly see, feel and smell the improvement in your dog's coat.

2. RELIEVES ITCHY DRYNESS—That "scratch—scratch—scratch" may be caused by a dry coat and skin. The remarkable MR. GROOM formula absorbs into the fur and skin to bring instant relief from dryness.

For an extra-dry coat, spray on MR. GROOM close to skin and hair roots as you brush your hand against the lay of the coat. Then towel, brush or massage into coat and skin. You will see the difference and your dog will feel the improvement, right away.

3. MAKE COAT COLORS COME ALIVE – A glossy, shiny coat is a truly handsome sight. Your dog's naturally beautiful coat will sparkle with a healthy radiance after using MR. GROOM Coat Conditioner.

This unique formula is the Number One choice of dog enthusiasts who show their dogs in competition. MR. GROOM is the product they use to make their dog's coats look and feel their very best in the show ring. MR. GROOM makes coat colors "come alive."

4. MAKE BRUSHING EASIER — LOOSEN MATS, TANGLES AND SNARLS — A long coat can be a brushing chore unless you know how to use the amazing MR. GROOM product. Spray MR. GROOM heavily into tangled, matted or snarled areas. Wait about fifteen minutes—then brush. Mats will come out quicker and easier—snarls and tangles brush away. Consistent use of MR. GROOM with every brushing will keep the coat tangle-free.

5. A CLEAN, HEALTHY COAT FOR YOUR DOG—Cleaning is more than just a periodic bath. Your dog's coat needs to be toweled or brushed regularly to provide between-bath cleanliness. Spray MR. GROOM lightly on the coat in a zigzag motion. Then brush or towel (some owners of short-haired dogs prefer to use a chamois to get an extra-lustrous "MR. GROOM shine").

SEE HEAD-TO-TAIL IMPROVEMENT WITH MR. GROOM

1. Banish odor—freshen coat
2. Reduce shedding & scratching
3. Make brushing easier—loosen snarls
4. Relieve itchy dryness
5. Coat shines—colors "come alive"

RECOMMENDED BY VETERINARIANS, KENNELS, GROOMERS & HANDLERS!

"Mr. Groom brings back the natural coat luster", says Mrs. Goldie Nannes, founder of the Academy of Professional Dog Grooming at 15841 Moran St., Westminster. "It helps do away with dry flakiness caused by the California climate. Mr. Groom leaves a lovely fragrance, too."

The ingredients in MR. GROOM help clean the fur and skin. The brushing or toweling action massages the coat and skin and stimulates blood circulation. Massaging also distributes the MR. GROOM formula evenly along the hair shafts and into the skin for cleaning and lubricating. MR. GROOM will make your dog's coat fresh and clean in seconds.

Recommended by Dog Experts

Only MR. GROOM works these 5 ways to improve and beautify your dog's coat. Only MR. GROOM has proved 5-ways best at the toughest proving-grounds of all ... the very competitive American Kennel Club dog shows.

Here is what Peter Green, winning handler at the famous Westminster Show (Best in Show, 1968) says about MR. GROOM Coat Conditioner: "I use MR. GROOM Coat Conditioner at the shows and at my Greenfield Kennels. It is the best product I know for bringing out the winning luster in a dog's coat."

WELLS REPORT

'Support your local sheriff (yellow)'

The law enforcement officers of Los Angeles and Orange County, who never sleep, are now working 24 hours a day to protect you and me from what appears from the press releases to be the number one threat to our persons and property — a second-rate Swedish movie called "I Am Curious (Yellow)."

For many of us it is, alas, too late. We have already seen the movie — it has only been playing in Los Angeles a year or more — and have had our moral fibers weakened possibly beyond repair.

My colleague Tom Keevil, of the Daily Pilot in Orange County, happened to be in the Balboa Theater the night the fuzz raided the place. He reported the film invoked not Eros but Morpheus in him. He had just settled down for a good nap when the cops woke him up.

When I viewed the film, it seemed to me that Mr. Keevil's reaction was shared by the young hero in the film itself. This tubby, blonde teen-age broad keeps running around in the nude trying to entice him. He was in the nude also, but it appeared to me he never worked up any special enthusiasm.

She finally seduces him by making sex so athletic he can exercise at the same time by swinging from trees and stuff. I mean it beats jogging alone.

"I Am Curious" did not do much to arouse my prurient interest. Frankly, I would give it about two stars on a scale where the lingerie section of Penney's Department Store rated three stars.

Now, if you really want to take the old prurient interest out for dinner and a show, wangle an invitation to the frequent showing of pornography films in police departments in the area — for training purposes, I presume.

They are attended by off-duty cops, on-duty cops, city councilmen, newspapermen, attorneys, bail bondsmen, and a couple of fellas who stopped by City Hall to pay parking fines and got into the wrong room.

The program consists of confiscated pornographic films. They are not usually as well-photographed as "I Am Curious," and they are definitely low budget. They compensate for this by being (1) short and to the point; and (2) utterly without any redeeming artistic or social significance whatever.

The civilians since they have other business usually watch for a while and then go about their business. The cops, as serious students of the art, stay to see the films over and over. They cheer and applaud novel photographic angles, creative directing and accomplished acting.

Make no mistake about it, if our well-trained police ever run into somebody simulating the sex act they will know what to look for.

In their crusade against pornography, the police have the unstinting support of the community. Veterans organizations and lodges sometimes show the same training films. Many distinguished artists have produced pornographic books and pictures — again one can only presume for training purposes.

Mark Twain wrote a dialogue, "1601," of which he said, "If there is a decent word findable in it, it is because I overlooked it." Benjamin Franklin wrote a classic of pornography as did Eugene Field, better known for his lovable poem, "Little Boy Blue."

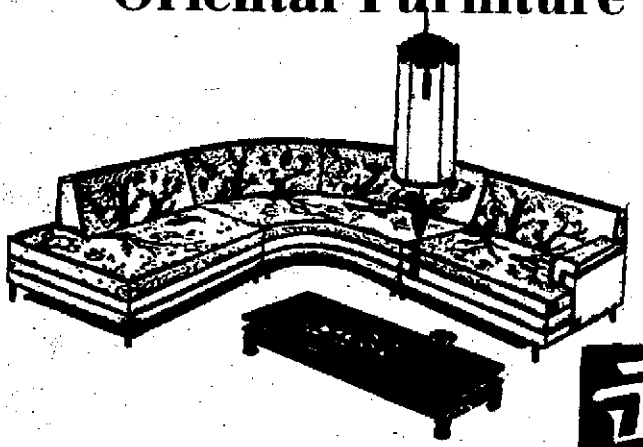

Sir Arthur Sullivan, knighted composer of "Onward Christian Soldiers," collaborated with W. S. Gilbert on an obscene musical play, "The Sod's Opera." Hogarth, Rowlandson, Rubens, Rembrandt, Jan Steen, Michelangelo, Raphael, Tintoretto, Titian, Rodin, all graphically depicted erotic subjects.

The Catholic Church maintains in the Vatican the most famous — and one of the most accessible — collection of erotica in the world — 25,000 volumes and 100,000 prints. The Library of Congress has the largest collection in this country. It is available to anyone over 16. That good churchman J. P. Morgan collected pornography. Henry E. Huntington had the greatest collection in the West.

It just goes to show that a lot of work by a great many people has gone into the current crackdown on "I Am Curious (Yellow)." □

½ lb. ground beef
½ cup minced onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
⅔ cup CONTADINA® Tomato Paste
2 cups water
1½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. sugar
1½ tsp. Italian seasoning
8-9 manicotti shells
2 cups (1 lb.) ricotta cheese
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded mozzarella cheese

Sauté meat, onion and green pepper. Drain off fat. Add paste, water, salt, pepper, sugar and seasoning. Simmer 15 min. Par-boil manicotti in salted water 4 min. Drain on paper towels. Fill shells with combined ricotta and mozzarella. Place shells in shallow baking dish. Cover with sauce. Bake in oven (350°F.) 20-30 min.

CONTADINA FOODS DIV. OF CARNATION CO., LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

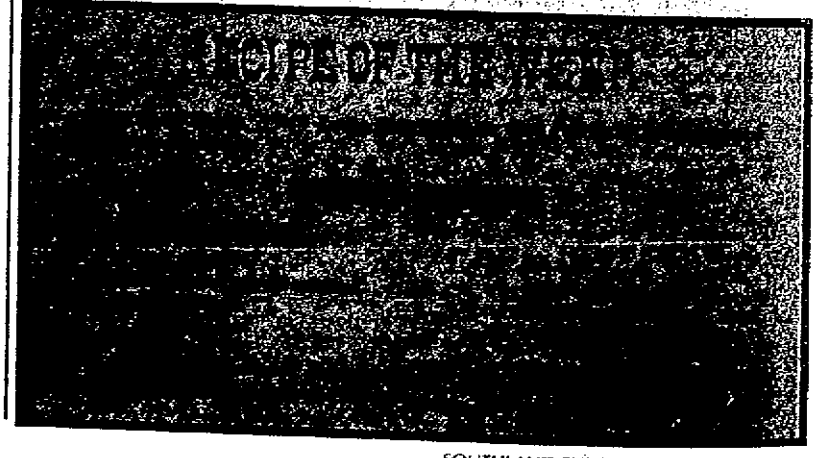

Lemon Meringue Cookies

¾ cup (1½ sticks) margarine
1 large package (6-oz.) lemon gelatin
½ cup sugar
2 large eggs
⅔ cup milk
½ tsp. lemon extract
Few drops yellow food coloring (optional)
½ tsp. salt
4 cups unsifted flour
2 tsp. baking powder
Meringue

Cream together margarine, gelatin and sugar. Mix in eggs, milk, lemon extract and food coloring. Add salt, flour and baking powder. Mix until smooth. (For stronger lemon flavor, the juice and rind of one lemon may be added.) Roll dough into small balls or drop by heaping teaspoonsful onto greased cookie sheet. Flatten balls with tines of fork or flatten mounds with fingertips, moistened with water. Top each cookie with a teaspoonful of meringue. Pre-heat oven to about 310 degrees. (Set oven gauge between the 300 and 325 marks.) Bake cookies about 15 minutes or until meringue is golden brown. Let cookies cool on baking sheet about five minutes. Carefully remove from sheet with spatula and cool. Makes four to five dozen cookies.

Meringue: Bring three egg whites to room temperature; beat until foamy. Add ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar. Continue to beat, gradually adding five tablespoons sugar, until stiff peak forms. □ house, who worry about what the neighbors would think.

"They don't understand me but I think I understand them. They were raised in a different time against a different background. I don't agree with their philosophies but I love my parents. And they try. They really do."

It was because of Joy's parents that she made the trip west.

"Things are easier this way. There are no surprise visits. I know well in advance when they are coming. I can prepare and, well . . ."

She abandoned the thought.

"Things were beginning to close in around me back there. I was running with a pretty strange crowd. It was a good crowd but they did not care who knew and, well, I was just afraid that eventually — even my parents would put two and two together."

Getting started in a strange place was hard for Joy. She credited her current roommate for getting her over the rough spots.

"I don't know what I would have done without her. Probably gone back home and taken my chances."

Joy met her roommate at work a month after she arrived in the Southland.

"I'm not going to tell you what I do, either," she said, anticipating the question. "It is better that I don't.

"Anyway, she invited me to her pad for dinner. We started talking. We got to know each other and found out all the things we had in common. We like to ski, to swim, to do a lot of things."

Soon after, Joy moved in with her coworker.

"Everything has been so relaxed. My life here is so different from before. I don't go to bars like I used to. We invite people over to the apartment for drinks. Some of our friends are like us. A lot aren't. We're not big group goers anyway. We have a cabin up in the mountains. We go to Palm Springs. It is a kind of nice scene. I'm happy."

What about the future?

"I don't know about the future" — the same smile once more — "do you? Do you know about tomorrow? I don't. I live today. I could be dead tomorrow so I'm not going to worry about something I know nothing about. I could probably go on for days on that. It's one of my pet peeves. But I'll spare you."

What about the past?

"I can talk about that. That's something I know. You probably want to know all the gory details. Well, I'm sorry to disappoint you. There really aren't any.

"I dated guys. I mean I didn't just wake up one morning a lesbian. It is something, I guess, that comes over you gradually. I guess it was Helen that really made me know for sure. She was my roommate at college during freshman year. I would find myself watching her, getting jealous when she would go out on dates. I guess I felt what anybody feels when they get interested, really interested, in someone else. I would vie for her attentions.

"She never encouraged me and I never did anything with her. But after that I knew. I started going to some bars around town — bars where I knew girls hung out. I kept going back. I enjoyed the company. The people there understood me and I understood them. There was no pretending."

Joy never finished her freshman year at college. She quit school to get a job.

"Of course, my parents were disappointed, but then I have a sister — thank God — who fulfilled all the dreams they had for me. I mean she went to college, got married and had kids. My parents got their grandchildren and I have my life. I guess it all works out in the end."

Joy said she is glad that so much attention is being focused on the homosexual.

The only thing that bothers her is the emphasis so-called experts put on parents and their influence.

"One expert," she said, "claims the fathers of homosexual girls are usually crude and even autocratic or passive, ineffective, bossed by their wives."

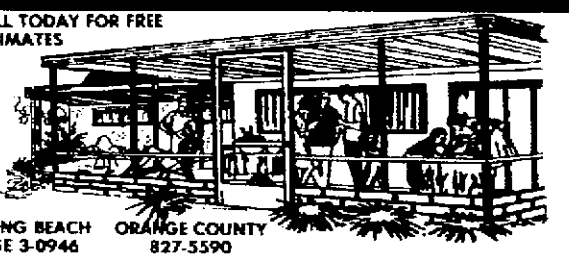

Joy shook her head.

"Oh, no. My father was a nice, easygoing man. He was not any of those things. He worked hard and commanded respect from my sister, brother and myself. And what's more he got love, too. He and my mother wanted the best for us. I'm not talking about material things so much as the other things, like love and fun and excitement."

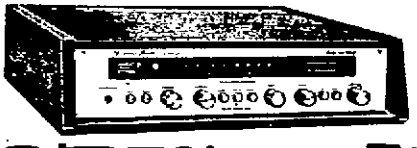

She smiled and talked about her childhood.

"We used to go to the lake in the summer and stay. Every night we'd go out and we'd get a quarter to spend and an ice cream cone. Yeah, my parents have given me a million good memories just like this one.

"Can you blame me for wanting to leave them a good one of me?" □

Make no mistake about it, if our well-trained police ever run into somebody simulating the sex act they will know what to look for.

In their crusade against pornography, the police have the unstinting support of the community. Veterans organizations and lodges sometimes show the same training films. Many distinguished artists have produced pornographic books and pictures — again one can only presume for training purposes.

Mark Twain wrote a dialogue, "1601," of which he said, "If there is a decent word findable in it, it is because I overlooked it." Benjamin Franklin wrote a classic of pornography as did Eugene Field, better known for his lovable poem, "Little Boy Blue."

Sir Arthur Sullivan, knighted composer of "Onward Christian Soldiers," collaborated with W. S. Gilbert on an obscene musical play, "The Sod's Opera." Hogarth, Rowlandson, Rubens, Rembrandt, Jan Steen, Michelangelo, Raphael, Tintoretto, Titian, Rodin, all graphically depicted erotic subjects.

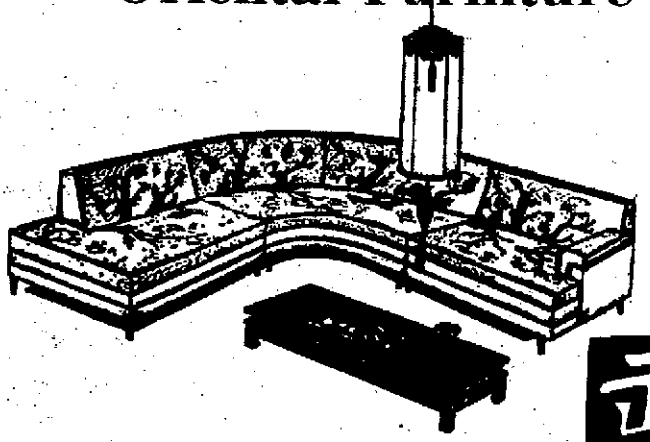

The Catholic Church maintains in the Vatican the most famous — and one of the most accessible — collection of erotica in the world — 25,000 volumes and 100,000 prints. The Library of Congress has the largest collection in this country. It is available to anyone over 16. That good churchman J. P. Morgan collected pornography. Henry E. Huntington had the greatest collection in the West.

It just goes to show that a lot of work by a great many people has gone into the current crackdown on "I Am Curious (Yellow)." □

THE HOMOSEXUAL

By Mark Clutter

"I am a homosexual, and I make no secret of it. However, if I talk to you, you must promise not to use my name. The story would hurt my parents. They are wonderful people and I have hurt them enough already."

I promised.

My luncheon companion was a fine-looking man of 25. There was nothing unusual about his looks or bearing. He was clean-shaven except for sideburns in the modern style. His casual clothes were youthful without flashiness or eccentricity.

He was remarkable, however, in his fluent, frank conversation. He spoke earnestly and thoughtfully, emphasizing his words with movements of his strong hands. His sensitive face expressed his emotions.

"First of all, I want to dispel certain cliches about homosexuals, at least as they apply to me," he said. "I did not have an unfortunate childhood. I did not have a domineering mother or ineffectual father. I did not come from an unwholesome environment. I was never involved in artsy-craftsy activities.

"My home life was ideal. We had lots of fun, lots of love. I was an only child born late in my parents' marriage. We were never rich but never poor either. My father is a businessman whose income over the years has averaged at about $12,000. We lived in a good middle-class district in Long Beach.

"My activities were athletics and outdoor sports. I was something of a water polo star in high school. I loved hunting and fishing. I've given that up because of a dislike for killing, but not long ago I became involved in falconry. I trained my birds and read everything I could find on that medieval sport. My chief ambition throughout my childhood and youth was to be a policeman.

"I was intensely religious. My parents are good Protestants but they never pushed me into church work. I did it because I loved it. I really dug it.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly that my childhood and youth were

THE LESBIAN

By Barbara Fryer

"I'm a lesbian. I'm not ashamed and I'm not proud. It's just what I am."

She said it the way you'd say "I'm a nurse," or "I'm a Catholic," or "I'm an . . ." anything else.

Her hands moved with her words and, when the words stopped, the hands sought refuge in her deep, thick, dark hair.

Call her Joy. She is 23 years old. And pretty. Striking perhaps. It was easy to see she had collected more than her share of whistles and stares.

Right now she was being watched from the next table by a suited businessman. He nudged a male companion. Then there were two other men in the dimly lit restaurant watching her.

Joy knew it. But she ignored them.

Instead, she looked up, a smile beginning in her dark eyes and moving over the rest of her face.

"See," she said, rubbing her hands over the top of her head, "no horns either."

Her smile disappeared as quickly as it had begun.

"I'm sorry. It's just that . . . well what can I say? I'm just like anybody else. I have dreams and hopes and disappointments. I like the desert. I like the mountains and the sea. I swim. I work. I even pray sometimes.

"I don't hurt anybody. I wouldn't hurt anybody. I respect a person's preference.

"That's the trouble with the world today. Everybody is minding everybody else's business. If they looked at themselves as close as they look at everybody else, we'd all be better for it."

Unlike many within her ranks, Joy said she does not consider lesbianism a sin or a sickness.

"It's my preference. It's my choice" — again the smile.

Joy came from the East. She won't say where exactly.

"I have my parents to think of. While I don't think my way is the wrong way, they would. They are the kind of people who cringe if you curse in the spent in an ideal environment.

"There wasn't anything unusual in my early sex experiences, just in my response to them. I was always in some sexual contact with males. Like most little children I had some sex play with both boys and girls.

"When I was in sixth grade, I joined a boys' organization that participated in outdoor activities. I loved the outdoors. We would go camping, go on overnight hikes, have backyard sleep-outs.

"There was also some sex play, nothing unusual for boys that age. I think many men can remember doing something of that nature when they were boys. For lots of boys, it's just part of growing up.

"I thought my interest in males would pass as I grew older, but it didn't. In high school I liked girls all right and had many dates.

"I went through the tortures of hell because of my desires. I was an intense Christian and I saw no way to reconcile my faith with my desires and actions. Sometimes I would pray to God half the night. Sometimes it succeeded briefly — for days, weeks, even months. I sought the counsel of a clergyman. He was a kindly man with some background in psychology, but I didn't know what to say about my troubles, so he couldn't help me. I have a good mind and could easily have been a straight 'A' student, but I was so overburdened with guilt that I averaged 'C plus.'

"There should be counseling to help young homosexuals understand their problems and fit into society. No teen-age boy should have to live in the hell I lived in.

"When a homosexual 'comes out,' he admits to himself and society that he is a homosexual. I began to 'come out' the summer after graduation. I didn't have any idea what to do. I hung around the end of the Cherry Avenue tunnel and watched the homosexuals who congregated around the beach restroom.

"I gradually learned that the grassway along the bluff was the place to meet homosexuals. I entered the subculture. I was too young to go to bars so I went to coffee houses in Hollywood and elsewhere.

"I never swerved from my ambition to be a policeman. I studied police science at Long Beach City College. Then I went to work for one of the best police departments in Los Angeles County. I didn't like my fellow officers much and they didn't like me much. I resigned at the end of my nine-month probationary period.

"I had really entered the gay life. For the first time I no longer felt I was a freak. I had found a peer group. I had found a way of interacting with other people.

"The gay life is glamorous, fast-moving, exciting. It is fun. The gay are not attached to family life so they are free to be hedonistic playboys. The gay have a flare for class and elegance.

"Most homosexuals are rather neurotic because they have to live in a world that is hostile to them. It is becoming less hostile. There has been tremendous liberalization of public attitudes in the last two years.

"The gay world is a young world. It emphasizes good looks, constant activity, night life. It doesn't belong to older people — and by older I mean ages like 35. As a homosexual grows older, he must repattern his life and values. Otherwise he will be lonely and tired.

"Already I am moving away from the gay world. It is a party world, but there is more to living than partying. One has to earn a living and do something worthwhile.

"The worst thing that happened to me as a homosexual was when my parents found out. My mother wept for days. My father acted stunned. Then we had a family council and they told me I was their son and they loved me. They urged me to seek psychiatric help at a church-connected clinic. I went five times. The psychologist meant well but she had no understanding of a homosexual's problems. My parents and I continue to be good friends. We love each other and we see each other regularly.

"I became a management trainee and then got a good job as a junior executive. After a year I quit to found a free-lance business service. I am doing well.

"I was nearly drafted. The psychologist informed me I wasn't homosexual. I took a letter from a psychiatrist to the induction center. I was reclassified."

I asked him to discuss the position of the homosexual in contemporary society and what he saw for himself in a world which is mostly heterosexual.

"First of all, people should change many of their attitudes," he said. "They think in terms of cliches, like homosexuals hanging around restrooms. This is a tiny part of the homosexual world.

"The people who do this are desperate. They are seeking secrecy. They don't want to be caught by their wives or their male lovers. It is a bit like the lunch-hour prostitution that goes on. It exists but it is a minor part of society.

"Most homosexuals are above average. It is said in homosexual circles that if you fired all the homosexual schoolteachers in Orange County, you would have to close all the schools in Orange County. I live in Laguna Beach and from all I know this is practically true.

"Homosexuals are people. We are not too different from heterosexuals. We get

"Hey, man, this is your favorite colored umpire. When are you and I going to have lunch together?"

The voice on the other end of the telephone was that of Emmett Littleton Ashford, age 53, who studied his trade for 15 years in the minors and now has spent five seasons as the most flamboyant arbiter in the American League, if not all baseball.

Emmett, the man with all the flourishes of opera's greatest maestro, is a special representative for Hamm Brewing Co. during his winter "rest period."

However, his greatest claim to fame is that he "broke the barrier" when he became baseball's first Negro major league umpire. He didn't bust the roadblock easily because he had to prove himself above and beyond the white umpire's call to duty.

But his talent — shrouded to an extent during 15 years in the minor leagues — eventually could not be ignored and thus Emmett Littleton Ashford finally crashed the major league party.

He did more than crash the upper crust; he showed it how to operate with excellence. The road wasn't paved with flowers, but Ashford crushed the path's stones that might have impeded his progress.

In seeking a quiet lunch in Long Beach one afternoon, Ashford didn't get his solitude. One person after another came forth to shake the hand of Mr. Flamboyant.

"I saw you at Anaheim Stadium," giggled one matron. "You're so cute."

"I watch you on TV all the time," commented a man. "You're half the ball game."

"Every time I go to Anaheim Stadium," lamented another, "you're working third base. That's no fun for me."

And thus it went.

Being the only Negro umpire in the majors, Emmett isn't a circus freak but a man who has generated an appeal to the public in much the same manner as, say, Frank Sinatra, Arnold Palmer, Joe

"Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back"

Bobby Bragan (without cap), Hollywood Stars manager, yells at umpire Emmett Ashford over a disputed call in a 1954 exhibition game in Long Beach's Recreation Park. It was Ashford's first year as a Triple A league umpire in the old Pacific Coast League. The picture was taken by Roger Coar.

The flamboyant Ashford, the major leagues' only Negro umpire, at his American League debut in ball park at Washington, D.C., five years ago.

Baseball's Most Colorful Umpire

By Hank Hollingworth

Namath, Mickey Mantle, Joe DiMaggio, Babe Ruth and Wilt Chamberlain.

In other words, he has that special something.

Ashford wasn't adverse to discussing his particular situation nor to relating the problems he had encountered.

"Let's put it this way," smiled the 5-foot-7, 187-pounder. "At the start I got the same abuse as Jackie Robinson. But it's not that way now. I think I've commanded the respect of both players and managers. That's what is important."

Was the racial issue deeply involved?

"Sure it was, at the start. Some players and managers tried it on me and I anticipated it. I also knew that I'd have to stop it fast. Then I learned something. It doesn't make any difference about your color really. If the players know you're hustling and bearing down, everything's OK."

How did the players, in general, respond to the emergence of baseball's first black umpire?

"Well, let's say that I got the treatment like all rookie umpires but in spades. Some of them made the expected comments and most of them tried to impose upon me . . . but the latter is a thing they do with all the first-time umpires. I knew I had to take it either way, else I might as well forget the whole thing and go into another business."

Surprisingly, during his major league tenure Ashford admits to only one poison pen note.

"That was something else," laughed the likable Emmett. "This single nasty letter was scrawled on a piece of bathroom tissue from Louisiana. It said something like 'Pete Ward (of the Chicago White Sox) should have knocked your brains out.' The guy was referring to a decision I called against Pete (a Canadian), who is a terrific player and person.

"I got a little angry when I read the other sentence, but let it pass. It said 'The only way you got into the majors was because of the NAACP.'

"I respect the NAACP, but that group didn't have anything to do with me being in the majors. They had other problems bigger than mine."

Ashford's advent into the erstwhile all-white umpiring ranks in September, 1965, wasn't without its other problems.

"One pressure group gave me a little trouble and I was a little worried at the time," said Emmett. "They threatened to picket every ballpark in the country if I wasn't removed. I wasn't removed and nobody picketed."

Ashford holds the unique distinction of having been the pioneer of black officials in three sports — basketball, football and baseball. He was a Pacific-8 official in basketball from 1950-58.

"I spent 18 years in basketball and really miss it," remarked Ashford. "But you can't do everything."

Almost before the words left his mouth, up came a former Long Beach basketball coach, Bob Hunt, to shake the colored man's hand. Hunt recalled the day 18 years ago when Ashford officiated one of his Wilson High JV games.

"Things like this make me feel good," smiled Emmett. "It shows that people remember and that's something good in this world today."

Testimony of Ashford's basketball officiating excellence came from John Wooden and Forrest Twogood, the UCLA and USC coaches who recommended him to the NBA when that professional circuit came West in 1960.

Ashford refereed one basketball contest in which Lew Alcindor participated. Asked if he encountered any problems that evening when Alcindor was a freshman, Ashford chuckled and answered:

"No. No problems with Lew. I just had to keep people from hanging onto him as he went up on the boards."

Since he broke the color barrier, Ashford was asked if he knew of other Negro umpires who might hit the major leagues.

"No," he sighed. "There are no other colored umpires coming up. I guess they don't want to wait that long to make the big leagues. It took me those 15 years, and other men too, but I guess the boys are too impatient today. But there's no shortcut in this business."

Should fear of abuse stop a colored person from attempting a major league umpiring career?

"It certainly shouldn't," snapped back Ashford. "Look at all the Negro officials today in pro and college football. The situation is different only in that a baseball umpire must spend every day working in the minor leagues. In football or basketball, the man can work one game a week and then spend the rest of the week with his regular job.

"That everyday baseball pressure in the minors isn't easy."

Ashford got a taste of what was in score for him right here in Long Beach in 1954 — his first season as a Triple A arbiter in the old Pacific Coast League.

The place was old Recreation Park, the teams were the Hollywood Stars and the Los Angeles Angels who were meeting in the final exhibition game of the spring training season.

"It was a late inning," recalled Emmett, the plate umpire, "when I made a tough call on the Angel batter. I forget his name but he's now a treasury agent in San Diego.

"Bobby Bragan, the Hollywood manager, came storming at me, screaming a thousand things. He shouted, threw his cap up the screen, then proceeded to lay down with his hands behind his head right between first base and home plate. I told him he had one minute to get up and go back into the dugout or I'd throw him out of the game or call the game. He got up."

The Independent, Press-Telegram's chief photographer, Roger Coar, remembers the incident well. He had film left for only one shot and he made good use of it. The picture was circulated throughout the country and won an award or two for Coar.

"When the Stars and Angels opened the regular sad, we get happy just like everybody else.

"Every male has both masculine and feminine qualities, and every female has both masculine and feminine qualities. Our culture has placed a warped emphasis on masculinity. It over-emphasizes presumed manly traits at the expense of gentleness and sensitivity.

"Why should people limit themselves? I am a person. I am me. Why shouldn't I think of myself — and why shouldn't other people -- as an individual, not as a stereotype of what people think a homosexual is?

"As I get older I belong less and less to the subculture. Most of my friends now are heterosexual. I have become bisexual.

"I am still deeply religious. I had to break with Christianity because it is a religion based on ancient taboos that do not apply to life today. It had nothing to offer to a man with my problems. The break wasn't easy. It was shattering.

"I now follow the religious philosophy of Yoga. Its emphasis is on the Now, on meeting life on a day-to-day basis.

"I think of a society based on good family life. I don't think in terms of actual family life — some homosexuals are saddened because they have turned away from fatherhood. I don't think that way. What I envision, and what I think will come in the future, is a society in which people simply love each other. We will quit putting labels on each other, like 'homosexual,' and will simply accept each other.

"I think the 'Establishment' fights the love movement because it is afraid it endangers its deeply rooted prejudices and notions. But younger people, I think, are working toward a more loving and more liberal kind of life.

"I envision a society in which people will let each other alone. I envision a society which will end all the subcultures through intermingling, a society in which people respect each other for what they are, not for what somebody says they should be." □ season the following Tuesday night, old Gilmore Field was packed and I think a part of that crowd came because of that incident in Long Beach," smiled Ashford. "My umpiring team also worked that Gilmore Field series, but we had no trouble."

Bragan is from Alabama, but today he's one of Ashford's firmest supporters.

"Bobby later told Eastern writers that I was extremely competent," declared Emmett. "And when I was promoted to the majors he sent me a wire of congratulations. Both of those things meant a lot to me."

Umpiring started as a hobby for Emmett Ashford. "I worked in the post office and then gave up 15 years' seniority to umpire in the bush leagues. But now it has been worth all the tribulations for me."

Perhaps what attracted both baseball fans and officials to Ashford was his flamboyant approach to the rather drab job of umpiring. Ashford calls a third strike on a batter and signals a base runner out with equal flourish. He practically leaps from the ground, swings his right arm dramatically and bellows either "strike three" or "you're out" when making a decision.

Many have termed him a showboat. It matters not to Ashford.

"Sure, I know they call me a showboat," laughed the man who in his relatively short major league career already has been selected to be an All-Star Game umpire (1967). "But that doesn't bother me, either. It's a habit with me. I did it all the time, even when I umpired sandlot games with only five or six people watching. But most of all I know I have to be efficient.

"Talk about being flamboyant, look at this last World Series. All the umps were giving it the television approach and that's good."

One New York scribe wrote that Ashford's entrance into umpiring ranks "made a drastic change upon umpires ... and had a big impact on their style ... and the proof was the 1969 World Series."

Ashford confessed that he had a few anxious moments at the start of the 1969 campaign.

"I almost thought I'd never finish the season after the first two games," sighed the maestro. "Boston was at Baltimore and both games went extra innings. I had nine crucial calls, ones that I had to make in a split second. It's easy to call them from the stands, but when you're right down there with an inch being as big as a mile, it's not so easy.

"The toughest call came in the 14th inning of the second game when Frank Robinson hit a screamer down the rightfield line and the ball hit that wooden sideline marker in Baltimore, then caromed into foul territory. I called the ball fair, Robinson got a double and the winning run scored.

"Dick Williams, the Boston manager, was fit to be tied. He questioned my eyesight and said that the circus lost an attraction when they passed me up. He got a $200 fine, but I couldn't blame him for getting angry. The call was tough, but the plate umpire agreed with me and that was that."

What impressed Ashford most during the past season?

"Well, I marveled at the plays made by Brooks Robinson at third base for the Orioles. And also the way Frank Robinson beats you with his bat and his head is really something. I think Denny McLain was a real pro coming back so well after winning 31 games the year before. There must be something to playing that organ. Ted Williams molded Washington into a unit and had them playing over their heads."

Emmett called the shot on the World Series and hopes that his prediction won't rebound so that he'll be considered a heretic in American League circles.

"I worked the last three games of the season with Baltimore against Detroit and honestly thought the Orioles were flat," stated Ashford. "I had to go with the Mets and their young pitching and Gil Hodges' big guns."

What has been Ashford's greatest thrill since entering the major leagues?

"I've had many," said the barrier breaker, "but one was working with Ted Williams. It really got to me when Ted told everybody this year that I was a good ball-and-strike man, that I knew how to call a pitch. Something like that coming from Williams is the highest honor."

As Hamm's special representative, Ashford discusses techniques with various distributors and one night he might be in Santa Ana, then 24 hours later in New York. He makes his home in Los Angeles.

He also stands high on the banquet circuit. During his so-called off-season of some 20 weeks, Emmett gives 30 to 40 speeches. He claims no problem there. "I just tell the people of my experiences and, since I have plenty, the rest is easy."

The Air Force invited him to be a member of a four-man clinic staff to tour bases in Europe this month with Al Campanis, Dixie Walker and Red Adams of the Dodgers.

"Man," he said with a laugh prior to the trip, "I'm glad I'm in the other league. Those National League cats will be all over me during the whole tour. But I'm sure proud to be given the invitation."

Emmett Littleton Ashford, age 53, the only black umpire in the major leagues, often abused, many times second-guessed where a white official wouldn't have been questioned, and on several occasions rapped without reason, would you do it all over again?

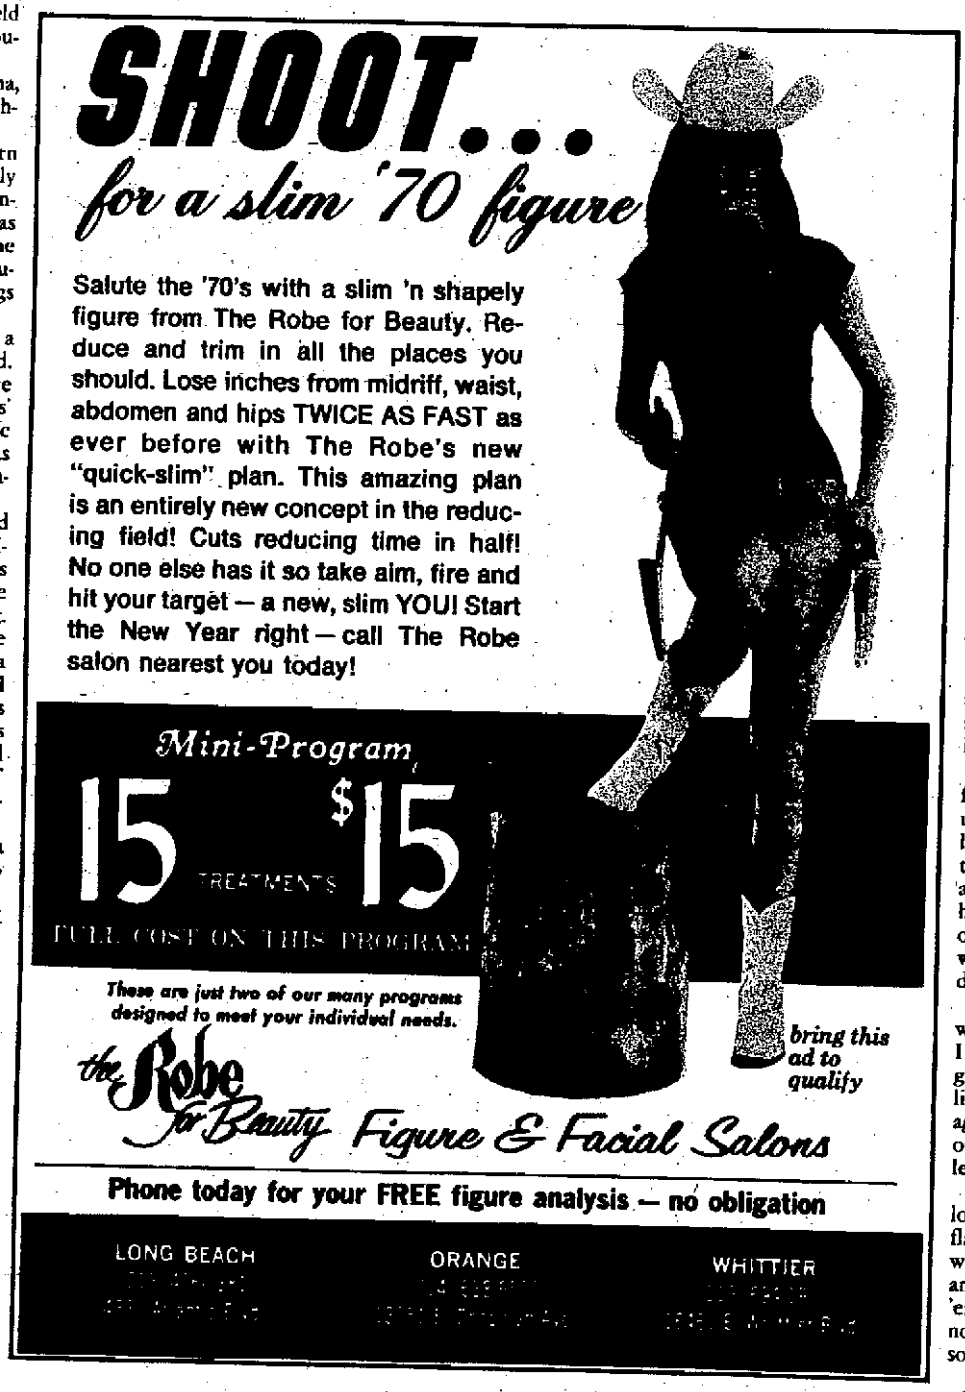

"Yes," shot back Emmett without hesitation. "In fact, I wish that I'd have been given the opportunity earlier. But I'd do it all over again without giving a second thought to the problems.

"This is my life and I love it. I'll continue to be flamboyant, throw out a guy who exceeds the bounds, and, as they say, always call 'em as I see 'em. Heck, nobody got ahead who felt sorry for himself."

This is the story of one of my favorite umpires and he didn't have to be colored to be so acclaimed.

As far as Ashford is concerned, this is not the start of the ninth inning. It's the moment just before the first inning when the umpire shouts "Play ball."

It was a grind, but Emmett Ashford came to play ball for nine innings every day or night. □

Kill doggie odor ...INSTANTLY

and make coat shine

At last! A quick and easy way to banish coat odor. MR. GROOM® replaces that embarrassing doggie odor with a fresh, clean fragrance. Instantly the coat is conditioned to a new luster, too. Skin becomes soft and supple—dog's coat looks better and smells better, right away.

Is there a dog in your life? Then discover today this shortcut way of keeping your dog's coat fresh and clean. You should know right now about the aerosol spray that has saved professional groomers hours and hours of grooming time yearly.

Here is why Mr. Groom Coat Conditioner is the Number One seller from coast-to-coast. Here is how Mr. Groom, the choice of professional groomers, can save you time in the care of your dog. Here's the story:

The magic of the Mr. Groom formula lies in its ability to absorb into the coat and skin without oiliness or greasiness. Yet, this greaseless formula has the ability to deodorize the coat and relieve the dryness of the fur and skin. The refined lanolin in Mr. Groom actually conditions-away the scaly, flaky skin and brittle, split hair caused by dryness. At once the coat is both conditioned and deodorized. Your dog looks better, feels better and smells better instantly.

Not Just a Deodorizer — But a Conditioner, Too

Mr. Groom is called a coat conditioner because it offers 5-way coat improvement. That is, this amazing formula conditions your dog's coat to bring results five different ways. Here they are:

1. DEODORANT ACTION—MR. GROOM replaces musty dog odor with a fresh, clean fragrance. MR. GROOM has a "precious cologne" ingredient which keeps the deodorant action at work all day. For best MR. GROOM results, spray a light mist over your dog's entire coat.

Start by the tail so that you avoid alarming the dog with the aerosol "hiss." Spray in a zigzag motion, covering the entire coat from tail to head. Towel, brush or massage the conditioner into the dog's coat. You will instantly see, feel and smell the improvement in your dog's coat.

2. RELIEVES ITCHY DRYNESS—That "scratch—scratch—scratch" may be caused by a dry coat and skin. The remarkable MR. GROOM formula absorbs into the fur and skin to bring instant relief from dryness.

For an extra-dry coat, spray on MR. GROOM close to skin and hair roots as you brush your hand against the lay of the coat. Then towel, brush or massage into coat and skin. You will see the difference and your dog will feel the improvement, right away.

3. MAKE COAT COLORS COME ALIVE – A glossy, shiny coat is a truly handsome sight. Your dog's naturally beautiful coat will sparkle with a healthy radiance after using MR. GROOM Coat Conditioner.

This unique formula is the Number One choice of dog enthusiasts who show their dogs in competition. MR. GROOM is the product they use to make their dog's coats look and feel their very best in the show ring. MR. GROOM makes coat colors "come alive."

4. MAKE BRUSHING EASIER — LOOSEN MATS, TANGLES AND SNARLS — A long coat can be a brushing chore unless you know how to use the amazing MR. GROOM product. Spray MR. GROOM heavily into tangled, matted or snarled areas. Wait about fifteen minutes—then brush. Mats will come out quicker and easier—snarls and tangles brush away. Consistent use of MR. GROOM with every brushing will keep the coat tangle-free.

5. A CLEAN, HEALTHY COAT FOR YOUR DOG—Cleaning is more than just a periodic bath. Your dog's coat needs to be toweled or brushed regularly to provide between-bath cleanliness. Spray MR. GROOM lightly on the coat in a zigzag motion. Then brush or towel (some owners of short-haired dogs prefer to use a chamois to get an extra-lustrous "MR. GROOM shine").

SEE HEAD-TO-TAIL IMPROVEMENT WITH MR. GROOM

1. Banish odor—freshen coat
2. Reduce shedding & scratching
3. Make brushing easier—loosen snarls
4. Relieve itchy dryness
5. Coat shines—colors "come alive"

RECOMMENDED BY VETERINARIANS, KENNELS, GROOMERS & HANDLERS!

"Mr. Groom brings back the natural coat luster", says Mrs. Goldie Nannes, founder of the Academy of Professional Dog Grooming at 15041 Moran St., Westminster. "It helps do away with dry flakiness caused by the California climate. Mr. Groom leaves a lovely fragrance, too."

The ingredients in MR. GROOM help clean the fur and skin. The brushing or toweling action massages the coat and skin and stimulates blood circulation. Massaging also distributes the MR. GROOM formula evenly along the hair shafts and into the skin for cleaning and lubricating. MR. GROOM will make your dog's coat fresh and clean in seconds.

GOURMET GUIDE

by Tedd Thomey

Three ordinary little words explain the difference between a good restaurant and a great one. They are "cooked to order."

That's why guests visiting Rocco's, an exceptional restaurant at 8060 E. Florence Ave., Downey, find themselves savoring every mouthful of their food and murmuring such phrases as "My, isn't this good?" or "It's been ages since I tasted anything this delicious."

Good restaurants can prepare excellent meals using precooked items which are reheated. Great restaurants frown on such shortcuts. Rocco's chefs, directed by kitchen maestro Phil Phillips, are so well-trained that they can prepare the most complicated entrees to order without keeping the guests waiting. Such techniques create continental sauces, pastas, scampi, veal and beef dishes with unusually fresh flavors.

The man mostly responsible for Rocco's success is its general manager, Andre Moskalenko, a soft-spoken, European-trained gentleman who knows the arts of fine service and hospitality. For many years he was manager at Anderson's Tally Ho, one of Lakewood's finest restaurants. When its owner, Mrs. Vinnie Hutchison, decided to build and operate Rocco's, Andre helped conceive its design ideas. The decor is stunningly beautiful, including such warm Mediterranean effects as a wine-red rug, crystal globe chandeliers with bulbs that shimmer like flames and stained glass windows.

Opened a year ago this month, Rocco's recently added

new enchantments to its luncheon and dinner menus. The evening specials include lobster parmesan, $5.50; beef brochette $4.75, and the scaloppini marsala-cannelloni combination, $4.95. Lobster parmesan is somewhat like lobster thermidor, but has a personality of its own. The lobster is cut into small pieces and cooked in a white wine sauce with mushrooms and Italian herbs.

The beef brochette consists of the finest filet mignon cut into pieces and broiled on a skewer with mushrooms, tomatoes, green peppers and onions. The scaloppini is made with delicious filet of veal sauteed in butter with mushrooms and marsala wine. The cannelloni which accompany it are large tubular macaroni stuffed with chicken.

Those entrees, prime rib au jus, crown rack of lamb and thick juicy steaks are served on elegant dinners including tray of relishes, soup du jour or superlative salad, baked potato, rice or spaghetti, hot Italian bread and beverage. Rocco's, open every day, serves Sundays from 4 p.m. on.

ROAST PRIME rib is a prized restaurant entree because of the quality of beef used. It's prime, of course, meaning it's the very best grade of aged, juicy, marbled beef. Marbled is a term which describes the cross grain of fine beef. When sliced, such beef displays wavy designs resembling those in marble from a quarry.

Most restaurants charge premium prices for roast prime rib of such quality. A few don't. One of these is The Paddock, 5052 Katella Ave. across from the Los Alamitos race track. It's owned by a cheerful, round-faced retired Navy chief named Rex Hovnanian. When he took over as host a few months ago, he decided to feature a low-priced specialty that would encourage his patrons to return again and again, bringing their friends along to try it too.

REX HOVNANIAN
Like Fine Marble

He chose roast prime rib priced at $2.95 on the dinner. It was an immediate hit. The Paddock's chef — talented George Cracraft — has a great prime rib recipe, turning out tender roasts which are easily sliced and fit for a king's palate.

The dinner includes soup du jour or beef noodle soup (with amazingly large chunks of roast prime rib); big salad with croutons on a chilled dinner plate, fancy baked potato, carrot strip garnish, hot garlic bread and chocolate mints for dessert. The hot au jus served with the beef is nectar for the gods. Another accompaniment is creamed horseradish sauce.

Other entrees on the dinner include filet mignon, au jus, described as "queen of steaks," $3.95; Australian lobster tail, tender and sweet, $3.95; deep-fried jumbo shrimp, $2.65; swordfish and northern halibut steak, both $2.50. The luncheon treats include hot roast beef sandwich au jus, $1.25; charbroiled top sirloin steak sandwich, $2.35, and the lo-cal jockey special, $1.35, consisting of charbroiled chopped sirloin steak with vegetables and cottage cheese.

The Paddock's new separate dining room is handsomely decorated with crystal chandeliers, wall-to-wall carpeting and large color photos of quarter horses which earned fame and fortune at the nearby track. Sunday dinners are served from 5 p.m. on. □

Look into Contadina for 8 great tomatoes in a rich, thick paste

MANICOTTI-CHEESE BAKE (serves 4)

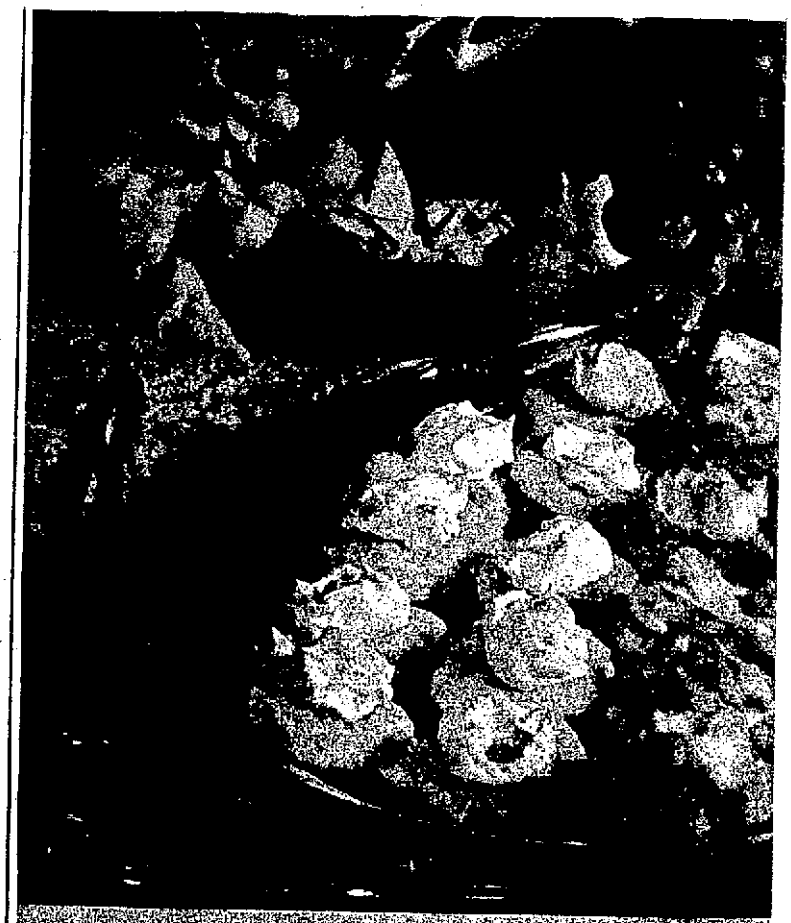

½ lb. ground beef
½ cup minced onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
⅔ cup CONTADINA® Tomato Paste
2 cups water
1½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. sugar
1½ tsp. Italian seasoning
8-9 manicotti shells
2 cups (1 lb.) ricotta cheese
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded mozzarella cheese

Sauté meat, onion and green pepper. Drain off fat. Add paste, water, salt, pepper, sugar and seasoning. Simmer 15 min. Par-boil manicotti in salted water 4 min. Drain on paper towels. Fill shells with combined ricotta and mozzarella. Place shells in shallow baking dish. Cover with sauce. Bake in oven (350°F.) 20-30 min.

FROM THE 8 GREAT TOMATO FOLKS

CONTADINA FOODS DIV. OF CARNATION CO., LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

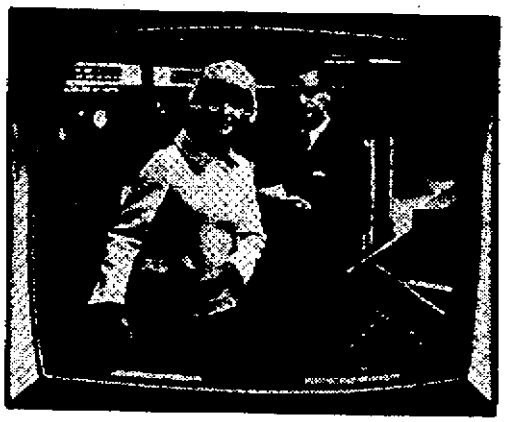

Lemon Meringue Cookies

¾ cup (1½ sticks) margarine
1 large package (6 oz.) lemon gelatin
½ cup sugar
2 large eggs
¼ cup milk
¼ tsp. lemon extract
Few drops yellow food coloring (optional)
½ tsp. salt
4 cups sifted flour
2 tsp. baking powder
Meringue

Cream together margarine, gelatin and sugar. Mix in eggs, milk, lemon extract and food coloring. Add salt, flour and baking powder. Mix until smooth. (For stronger lemon flavor, the juice and rind of one lemon may be added.) Roll dough into small balls or drop by heaping teaspoonfuls onto greased cookie sheet. Flatten balls with tines of fork or form mounds with fingertips, moistened with water. Top each cookie with a teaspoonful of meringue. Pre-heat oven to about 310 degrees. (Set oven gauge between the 300 and 325 marks.) Bake cookies about 15 minutes or until meringue is golden brown. Let cookies cool on baking sheet about five minutes. Carefully remove from sheet with spatula and cool. Makes four to five dozen cookies.

Meringue: Bring three egg whites to room temperature, beat until foamy. Add ½ teaspoon cream of tartar. Continue to beat, gradually adding five tablespoons sugar, until stiff peak forms.

house, who worry about what the neighbors would think.

"They don't understand me but I think I understand them. They were raised in a different time against a different background. I don't agree with their philosophies but I love my parents. And they try. They really do."

It was because of Joy's parents that she made the trip west.

"Things are easier this way. There are no surprise visits. I know well in advance when they are coming. I can prepare and, well . . ."

She abandoned the thought.

"Things were beginning to close in around me back there. I was running with a pretty strange crowd. It was a good crowd but they did not care who knew and, well, I was just afraid that eventually — even my parents would put two and two together."

Getting started in a strange place was hard for Joy. She credited her current roommate for getting her over the rough spots.

"I don't know what I would have done without her. Probably gone back home and taken my chances."

Joy met her roommate at work a month after she arrived in the Southland.

"I'm not going to tell you what I do, either," she said, anticipating the question. "It is better that I don't.

"Anyway, she invited me to her pad for dinner. We started talking. We got to know each other and found out all the things we had in common. We like to ski, to swim, to do a lot of things."

Soon after, Joy moved in with her coworker.

"Everything has been so relaxed. My life here is so different from before. I don't go to bars like I used to. We invite people over to the apartment for drinks. Some of our friends are like us. A lot aren't. We're not big group goers anyway. We have a cabin up in the mountains. We go to Palm Springs. It is a kind of nice scene. I'm happy."

What about the future?

"I don't know about the future" — the same smile once more — "do you? Do you know about tomorrow? I don't. I live today. I could be dead tomorrow so I'm not going to worry about something I know nothing about. I could probably go on for days on that. It's one of my pet peeves. But I'll spare you."

What about the past?

"I can talk about that. That's something I know. You probably want to know all the gory details. Well, I'm sorry to disappoint you. There really aren't any.

"I dated guys. I mean I didn't just wake up one morning a lesbian. It is something, I guess, that comes over you gradually. I guess it was Helen that really made me know for sure. She was my roommate at college during freshman year. I would find myself watching her, getting jealous when she would go out on dates. I guess I felt what anybody feels when they get interested, really interested, in someone else. I would vie for her attentions.

"She never encouraged me and I never did anything with her. But after that I knew. I started going to some bars around town — bars where I knew girls hung out. I kept going back. I enjoyed the company. The people there understood me and I understood them. There was no pretending."

Joy never finished her freshman year at college. She quit school to get a job.

"Of course, my parents were disappointed, but then I have a sister — thank God — who fulfilled all the dreams they had for me. I mean she went to college, got married and had kids. My parents got their grandchildren and I have my life. I guess it all works out in the end."

Joy said she is glad that so much attention is being focused on the homosexual.

The only thing that bothers her is the emphasis so-called experts put on parents and their influence.

"One expert," she said, "claims the fathers of homosexual girls are usually crude and even autocratic or passive, ineffective, bossed by their wives."

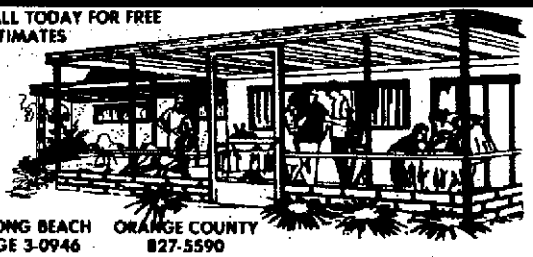

Joy shook her head.

"Oh, no. My father was a nice, easy-going man. He was not any of those things. He worked hard and commanded respect from my sister, brother and myself. And what's more he got love, too. He and my mother wanted the best for us. I'm not talking about material things so much as the other things, like love and fun and excitement."

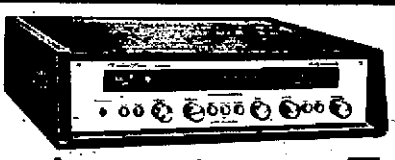

She smiled and talked about her childhood.

"We used to go to the lake in the summer and stay. Every night we'd go out and we'd get a quarter to spend and an ice cream cone. Yeah, my parents have given me a million good memories just like this one.

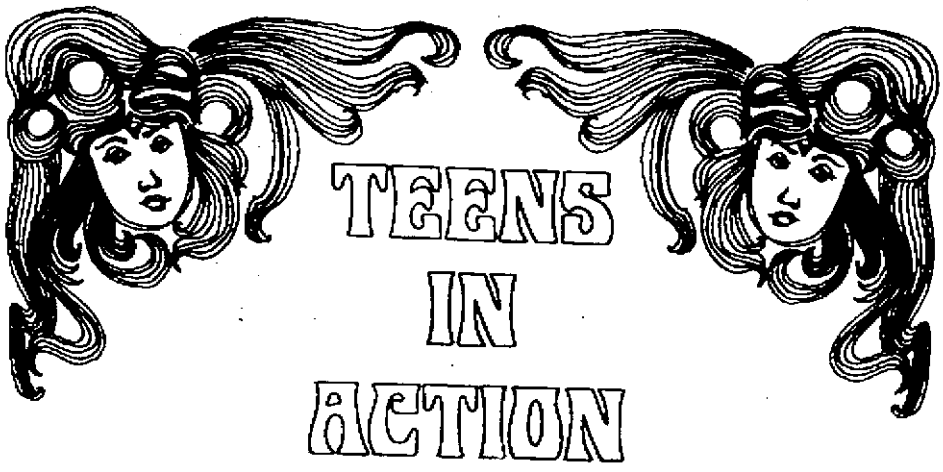

"Can you blame me for wanting to leave them a good one of me?" □

"A THIRD GENERATION CONSTRUCTION FAMILY"

She was reading "Catch 22" in the lobby, and she uses a pen marked "U. S. Government." So where does she belong? Not in a category of any kind.

There's a place for Jill Goldwater, though, among people who don't play games like "guess-my-personality." The 15-year-old Wilson High School junior, who lives at 6610 Bay Shore Walk, is thinking about studying medicine at Stanford after her graduation.

Her views:

— A good education is usually thought of as coinciding with a lot of time spent in school. That's part of it, but mostly a good education depends on a state of mind. I get an education — which an education — whhich I see as a main part of a good life — isn't going to be available to many people who really want one.

— High school students already know that state budget cuts are going to trim a lot of important classes. Courses like "world problems" certainly don't have all the answers, but they help by giving students the time to talk with each other about events in the world. If people don't talk, they'll never get any other views but their own. Opportunities for talk will be cut down if schools decide that important courses are suddenly unimportant simply because there's less money.

— Most of the answers come from other people. I'm learning more and more how important it is not to isolate myself.

— High school students sometimes worry about where they will fit in with college, or even if the college will be there when we get ready for it. Will frustrated collegians wreck it for others to come? Violence tears up your mind as much as it tears up anything.

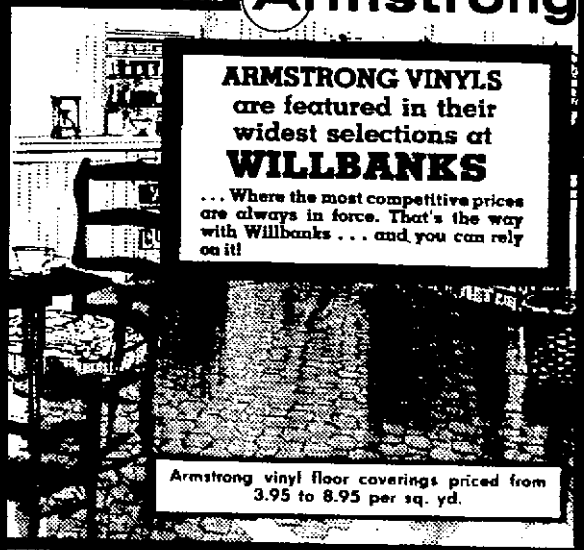

— One thing that disturbs me in high school is the policy of grouping students according to their performance on tests. You get classes of so-called "enriched" students, and classes of "A" and "B" or poor students. Too often, it seems that the schools are just singling out certain students and saying in effect, "You're not college-bound." How do they know? Any student, I think, has more ability than the schools give him credit for. Chaining a student to a certain group does a lot to give him a limited self-image. I think that's bad.

— Organizations outside of class, though, bring students together. The Junior Statesmen of America, for example, debate issues like Vietnam or the anti-ballistic missile system. The debates are real, and aren't treated academically. Even if your own point of view isn't changed, it's broadened. After the debate, the group votes on a resolution of the issue, and copies of this are sent to state and national officials. Naturally, we know President Nixon isn't going to change his policy because of us, but it's better than doing nothing. We're learning.

— Maybe what I'm saying is that I think we have to work within the system. Not because the system is so good, but because any change has to start with what we've already got. Violence speaks so loudly that the "silent majority" can remain silent and be considered right. It's the peaceful movements, like the war moratorium marches, that call the silent majority's power into question. Peaceful ways to peace aren't irrelevant. □

Glad you asked (that)

By [illegible]

Dale Evans and Roy Rogers at anchoring of the star.

Shirley Temple and a "Bloody Mama."

George Kell, a champion grillard.

Q: Roy Rogers and Dale Evans — how many children and grandchildren have they? — E. Sanford, Buffalo.

A: The Western stars have reared a family of nine children — of whom six are living. Roy had three by his first marriage and Dale had one by her first marriage. Together they had Robin Elizabeth, who died at age 2. The others listed were adopted. The Rogerses now reside with 13 grandchildren and a few great-grandchildren. With all the grease the movie cowboys are now only eight inches in the air (mural in Apple Valley Café — except at Disney family reunions).

Q: "I hear that 'Bloody Mama' (the story of the infamous Ma Barker and her sons) will out-gory 'Bonnie and Clyde.' Was Ma Barker a real or fictional character? — Phyllis M., Kent, Wash.

A: She was real. Shelley Winters (who plays Ma) researched the role as she does with every part she plays. In going through the FBI files, she learned that the older Barker boy was a dope addict and the youngest a homosexual. To "threatens us!" the latter in the film "Bloody" (Shelley) takes her son to bed.

Q: Seeing those two wreck old movies on TV (Jean Harlow, Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Horace McMahon and George Kell were always looking at pictures of cops trying to break out. Who was in all the movies? — Bill Doherty, Cleveland.

A: George Kell. "I took it as some private property to dream that I had gotten acquainted with so many famous people."

Q: What was their name, again, that sang "Puff, the Magic Dragon"? — Peter, Paul & Mary, Inwood, N.Y.

A: That's a tough question. We don't own your typewriter, however, and since it's Monday morning and most of the people — all right, all of them — are home with the flu, we'll answer it. Peter, Paul & Mary. The famous folksong trio is not quite from the Puff factory, but it was the first commercial song released by them. Later hauntingly evocative legacy of an artist is that Peter, Paul & Mary was not the original performers of "Blowing in the Wind." Instead, that was Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs.

Q: What famous newspaperman said, "We are recorders and reporters of the facts — not judges of the behavior we describe"? — B.F.H., Denver.

A: No newspaperman — it was Dr. Alfred Kinsey, defending his "Kinsey Report" on sex and fantasy.

Q: Where is Disneyland, Santa? Is that the one they're opening in Florida? — Sanford Burch, Salt Lake City.

A: No, sir. It's in the heart of every man, Gl, Marine, Seaman or Coast Guardsman who ever served his country. Disneyland is a state of mind. The Disneyland adventure in Florida will be called Walt Disney World. It's still north of Orlando. Opening is scheduled for 1971.

[illegible]

To families trapped in the awful environment of [illegible] California's ghetto and skid rows, the [illegible] above sounds about as realistic as a [illegible]. But, [illegible] does not have to be simply semantics or media-dazed shock [illegible] as freedom and wall-to-wall disaster.

Now, thanks to the miracle of a revolutionary new building technique this dream house soon will become true for thousands of low-income families [illegible] have been unable to afford adequate housing.

Because of land costs, the 1,140-square-foot, three-bedroom home can be mass produced for an estimated $11,000. The initial cost includes central heating, kitchen range, oven and garbage disposal.

If land cost and site preparation could be held to $1,200, the total cost would be kept at $12,200, opening the door to home ownership for families earning less than $5,000 a year.

Jugen Hurst, president of Concrete Cored Construction Corp., the Los Angeles firm which developed the revolutionary new low-cost building technique, describes the home as "a poor man's palace, built like a castle."

He compares it to a castle because walls and roof are constructed entirely of concrete, giving the home a life span of 100 years or more with walls which are almost impervious to wear and tear.

Poured on the ground, the steel-reinforced, quick-set concrete walls can be set in place in two and a half hours by two men and a crane.

Reducing overall construction time by 70 per cent, the home can be completed in less than a two-week cycle.

Entire cost of concrete for the firm's model home — pictured here and located at 5463 Centinela Blvd., Fox Hills — was only $180.

Despite the low cost, Hurst notes that strength of the structure exceeds construction requirements of the Los Angeles County building code by 250 per cent.

It is more earthquake proof, fire resistant, termite proof, has lower upkeep costs and a lower insurance rate potential than conventionally built homes, says Hurst.

Another plus, Hurst contends, is that with this house there is no need for that stifling look of sameness so prevalent in low-cost housing tracts.

Any configuration of doors and windows can be placed in the walls when they are poured. And interior walls have a never-before-heard-of feature: they can be moved.

Because exterior walls do all the load bearing, the interior walls can be changed with a minimum of expense, Hurst points out. That way, a three-bedroom home can become a one-bedroom and den when the family is grown.

Hurst says Concrete Cored Construction Corp. will set up mobile factories on tract building sites, will help train construction workers and give material procurement assistance. To supply builders of single home sites, the pre-cast walls will be made at a central Los Angeles factory and trucked to the building site.

One such project is already under way. Century Developers — a firm headed by Edward Steward, Victor A. Nickerson and Emory M. Sharpe, leading real estate figures in the black community — have contracted to build at least one home a week in the Watts area. The goal is 1,200 completed homes over a five year period. Next, a tract development, the project calls for construction on available single lots.

Other developers also are expected to step in the so-called Concrete Homes to provide housing for low-income families. And with inexpensive dream houses available, the nightmares of slum living will end for many. When a man's castle is his home, squalor and despair go out the window.

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Powerful drugs used to treat cancer or to suppress the rejection reaction in organ-transplant patients are posing a new hazard.

The danger is a new type of pneumonia.

The pneumonia is caused by a germ that ordinarily is benign — Pneumocystis carinii.

Dr. Myron G. Schultz, chief of the parasitic disease branch of the National Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, says the organism apparently becomes hazardous only when the body's defense system is weakened. This is the system that attempts to ward off disease-causing germs.

The organism is a one-celled germ, and researchers have not yet established whether it is a fungus or a protozoon.

P. carinii has been identified as the cause of death in infections developing in kidney-transplant patients, Dr. Schultz says.

NEW VACCINES: Two new vaccines against organisms that cause dysentery are showing promise in studies conducted by the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

The vaccines, taken by mouth, act against micro-organisms of the shigella type. These organisms cause a disorder known as shigellosis.

"We still do not have an acceptable shigellosis vaccine but the results are thus far encouraging," reports Dr. Herbert L. DuPont.

Under study are a vaccine developed in Yugoslavia and one prepared at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research, Washington, D.C. The Yugoslav vaccine has already proved effective in field trials in Yugoslavia.

Medical investigators want such a vaccine to prevent outbreaks of dysentery in institutions for the mentally retarded, military camps, prisons, Indian reservations and other places where persons are confined and crowded. The disease is a major military problem in Southeastern Asia and is also responsible for much of the special nursing care required in many institutions.

Doctors have found that two strains of the shigella bacillus cause about 90 per cent of all cases reported in U.S. institutions.

Trials of the vaccines have been conducted at the Maryland House of Correction, Jessup, among prisoner volunteers.

Studies may now be extended to East Pakistan under the auspices of the U.S. Public Health Service.

NEW VD TREATMENT: A new drug combination is proving highly effective in the outpatient treatment of gonorrhea.

Navy doctors, in a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, say the treatment consists of an injection of the antibiotic ampicillin and oral administration of probenecid. The latter sustains blood levels of the antibiotic, to make it more effective.

In trials conducted among patients in Subic Bay, the Philippines; Yokusuka, Japan; Pearl Harbor, Oahu, Hawaii; and Guam, the ampicillin-probenecid combination achieved a 99 per cent rate of cure.

Although the rate of cure was almost the same with penicillin (98 per cent), the doctors recommend ampicillin. Reason: Increasing numbers of strains of gonococci, the causative germs, are becoming resistant to penicillin.

Another study shows that single injections of procaine penicillin G failed to cure 29 per cent of gonorrhea patients in the Western Pacific.

The ampicillin used in the new study was Polycillin N, a product of Bristol Laboratories.

NEW CONTRACEPTIVE: One of the big drawbacks in the use of intrauterine contraceptive devices (IUCD) is that they frequently are expelled unbeknownst to the wearer. If this happens, the patient may, of course, become pregnant.

Now, a doctor reports that an IUCD with a new design is less likely to be expelled from the womb.

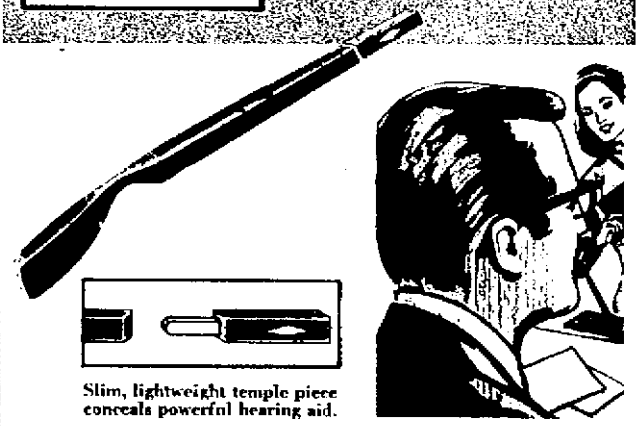

Dr. Samy F. Rifai of Railways General Hospital in Cairo, Egypt, calls the new IUCD a "coiled loop."

Made of polyethylene, the device is curved in the shape of a large S that continues into a smaller coil wound in a direction opposite to that of the upper part (the S).

Dr. Rifai, reporting in the American Journal of Obstetrics & Gynecology, says the coiled loop is a "safe, effective and acceptable means of birth control."

He adds that it often is suitable for women who have expelled other shapes of IUCDs. □

AQUARIUS THE WATER BEARER

January 21 through February 19

If you were born between Jan. 21 and Feb. 19 inclusive, the Sun was in the zone of the Zodiac called Aquarius, the Water Bearer, and Aquarius is your "Sun sign."

Noted astrologer Linda Goodman explores the signs of the Zodiac and tells you what to expect from people born under the various signs and how to deal with them. Her articles will help you better to understand your husband, wife, lover or child through astrology. This article deals with the traits of Aquarius people.

(From the book, LINDA GOODMAN'S SUN SIGNS, copyright 1968, by Linda Goodman, published by Taplinger Publishing Co., Inc.)
(Distributed by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1969)

HOW TO RECOGNIZE AQUARIUS

Lots of people like rainbows. Children make wishes on them, artists paint them, dreamers chase them, but the Aquarian lives on one. What's more, he's taken it apart and examined it, piece by piece, color by color, and he still believes in it.

Generally kindly and tranquil by nature, Aquarians nevertheless enjoy defying public opinion, and they secretly delight in shocking more conventional people with occasional erratic conduct.

Aquarius eyes are typically vague, with a dreamy, wandering expression, and often (but not always) blue, green or gray. The hair is frequently straight and silky, likely to be blonde, sandy or light brown; the complexion is pale and the height is usually taller than average.

Aquarians are always analyzing situations, friends and strangers. When they discover the puzzle wasn't so complex after all, they become bored.

Despite their fixation on friendship, Aquarians don't have many intimates. They seek quantity rather than quality in their associations.

This Sun sign is known as the sign of genius, and so it is, since over 70 per cent of the people in the Hall of Fame are either Sun Aquarians or have Aquarian ascendants. On the other hand, a substantially high percentage of those confined in mental institutions are also Aquarians.

He'll wander through affluent society and the slums alike with his symbolic jar, gathering the waters of knowledge and pouring them out again, except for those occasional lapses into hibernation.

You'll rarely find the Aquarian fighting fiercely for a cause. They live their code, and they feel that's enough.

Uranus illnesses are usually connected with the circulatory system. Aquarians shiver and shake in the winter, and suffer with the humidity in the summer.

They're susceptible to varicose veins and hardening of the arteries in old age, if their emotions are directed into negative channels, and they tend to have accidents to the legs, especially the shin and ankles.

Aquarians despise lying and cheating, and they avoid borrowing and lending. They'll give you money as a gift, but don't ask them for a loan.

The soul of the water bearer is constantly torn asunder by Uranus, the unpredictable and violent planet of change which lets him see ahead with electric blue clarity to the future. Aquarius belongs to mankind. He represents its truest hopes and its deepest ideals.

THE AQUARIUS MAN

To wade bravely smack dab into the center of the problem, don't expect an Aquarian male to behave the way people in love are supposed to behave.

When it comes to friendship, he's all you could ask for in a pal or a confidant. Love? Well, as an Aquarian I once knew said, "Anybody can have a girl. But love is something else again."

The Aquarian water bearer likes everybody. Everyone is his friend.

He responds to unusually high ideals, thanks to his rigid moral code. He'll almost surely lead a life of change, controversy and unexpected events.

The girl who wants to land him eventually has first to intrigue him. When a female either ignores him or keeps her own counsel, in the beginning at least, his eyes will open a little wider.

There's always an excellent possibility that an Aquarian will achieve some sort of prestige during his lifetime.

Some Uranus-ruled men have a fetish for cleanliness. You may bump into one who shrieks if anyone uses his towel or breathes on his oatmeal. Back of this is an almost neurotic fear of germs and illness.

Now let's face the worst fact courageously. Most Aquarians avoid marriage as long as it's humanly possible. A rare Aquarian male will be enticed into a shower of shoes and rice at an early age, but it doesn't happen often enough for the statistics to be encouraging.

Aquarian men find it difficult to relax in physical expressions of love. That first goodnight kiss may be a long time materializing.

Even after he's mustered the courage to say "I love you," he'll avoid the issue of marriage with every excuse in the book.

But all is not lost. Though it's true that most Aquarians wed late, they do eventually wed — usually.

Uranian sex is part of a larger image or ideal. Should a temptation to engage in illicit romance arise (illicit in his eyes, that is,) he'll usually end the affair abruptly.

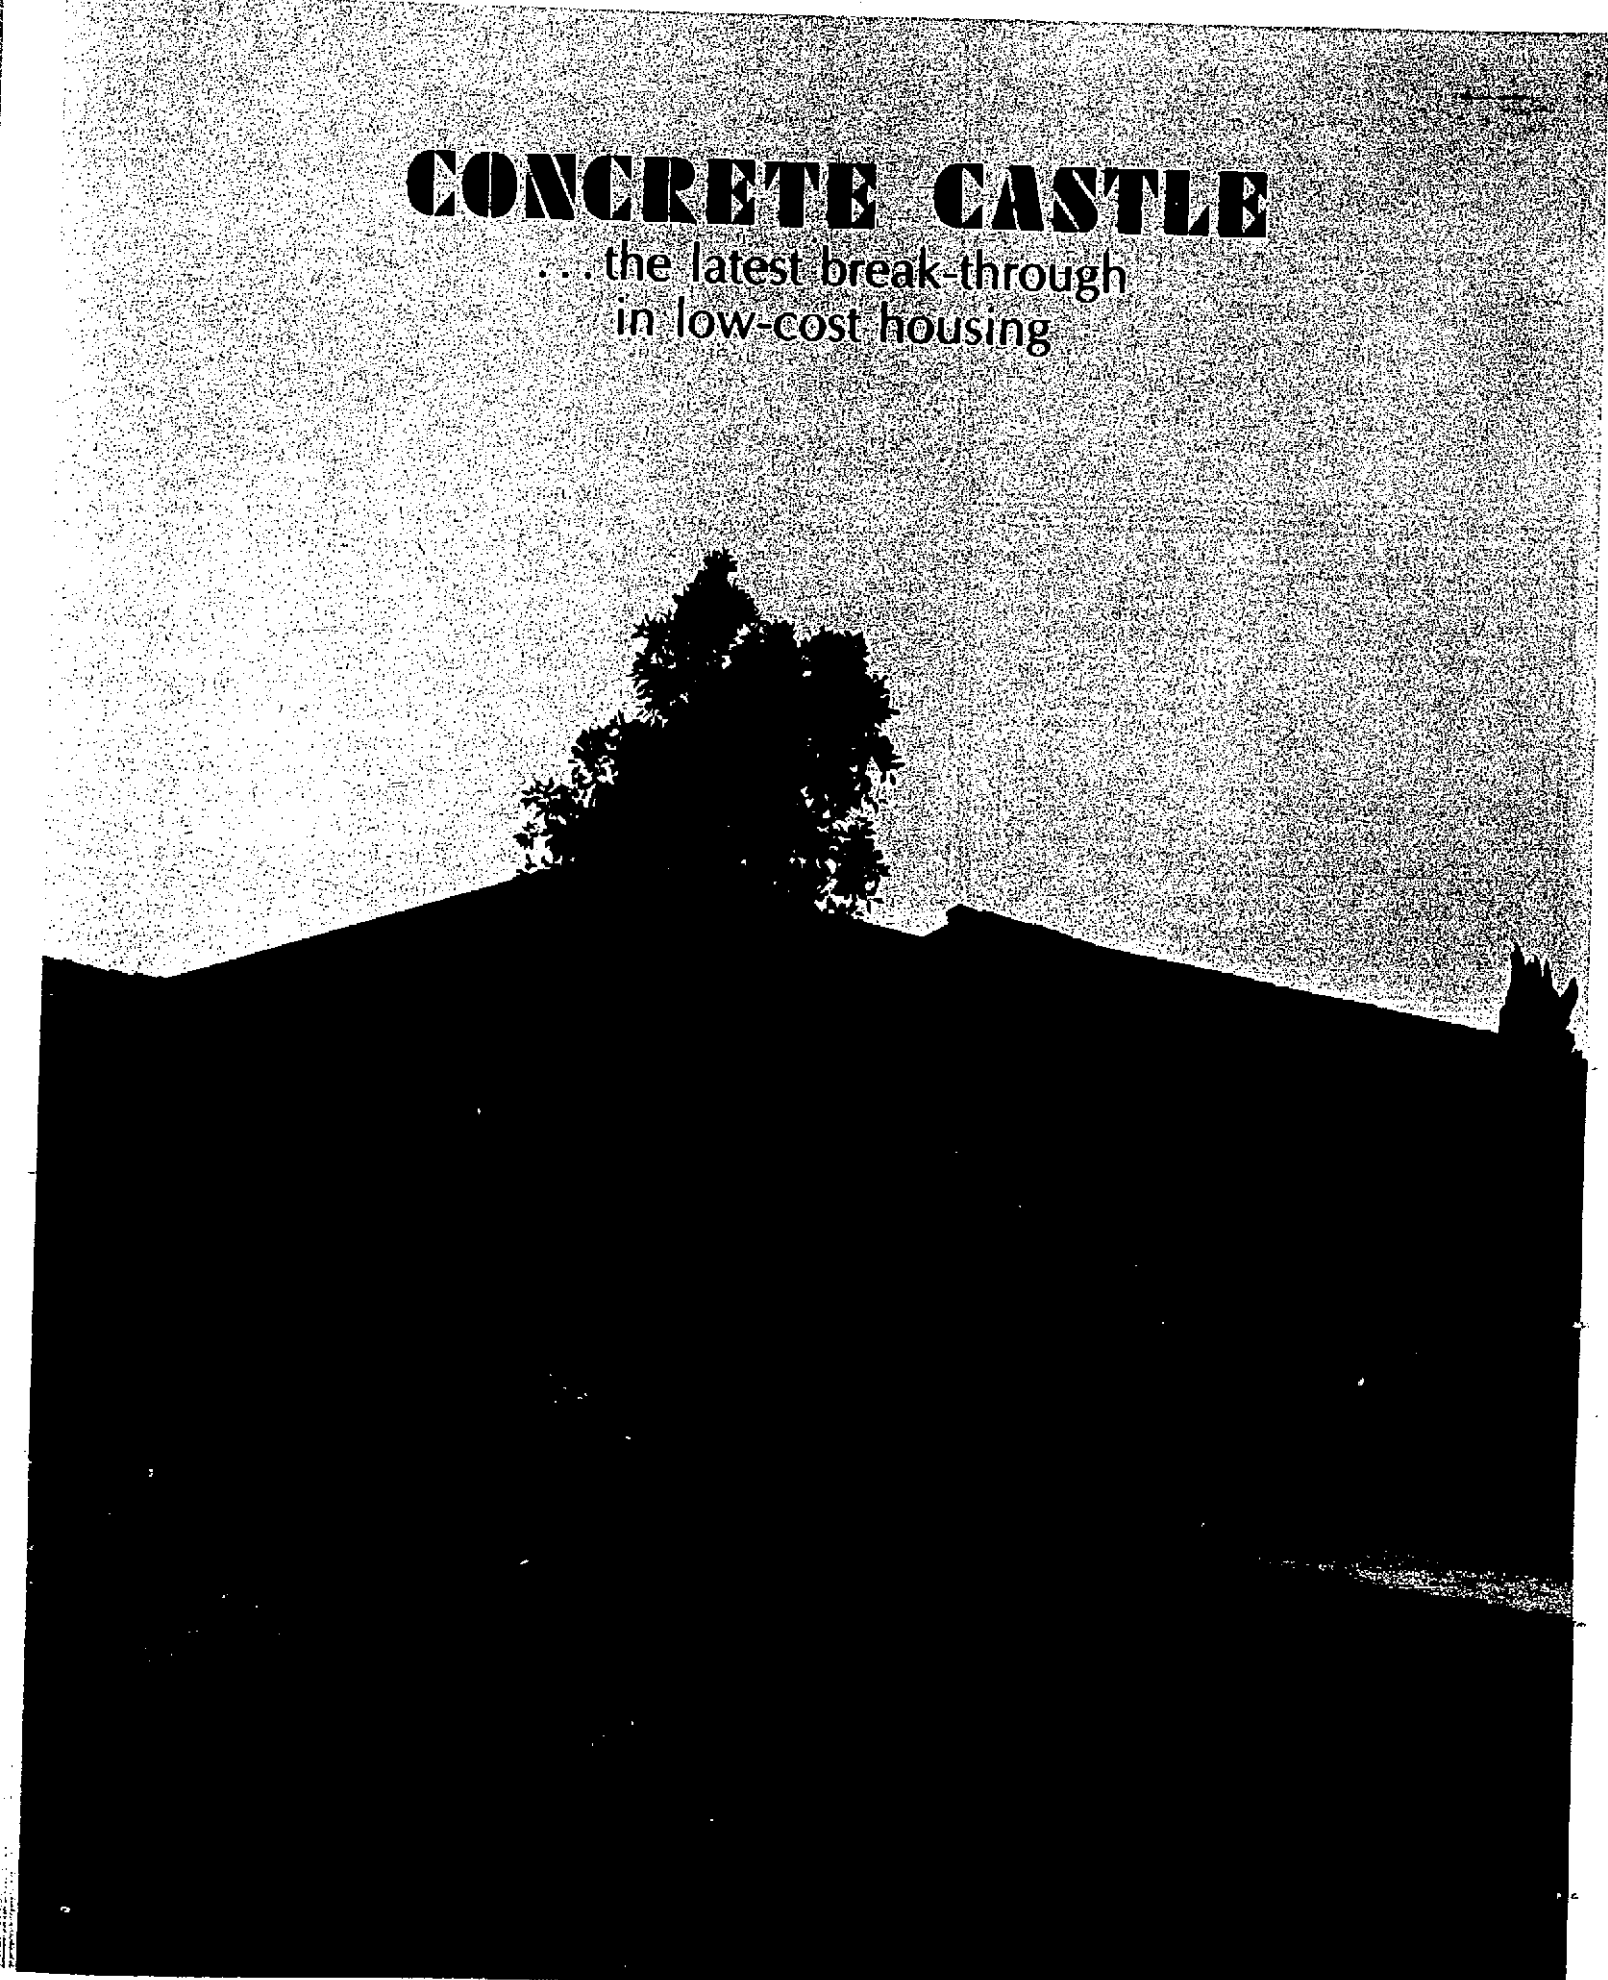

He may not be the best breadwinner around, but he's capable of inventing something beneficial to the world. Naturally, there are a few Uranian men who are wealthy, even millionaires, but a high income bracket is seldom a burning ambition.

The children will find him the greatest listener on the block. A small boy's trouble learning how to strike a home run and a little girl's tears over a broken doll are simply the problems of a couple of pals in trouble to an Aquarian father.

Uranians frequently marry childhood sweethearts years later, or cling to a faded illusion. An Aquarian can usually describe his first love in detail, which can be annoying to a wife. The solution is to be that first love.

THE HOMOSEXUAL

spent in an ideal environment.

"There wasn't anything unusual in my early sex experiences, just in my response to them. I was always in some sexual contact with males. Like most little children I had some sex play with both boys and girls.

"When I was in sixth grade, I joined a boys' organization that participated in outdoor activities. I loved the outdoors. We would go camping, go on overnight hikes, have backyard sleep-outs.

"There was also some sex play, nothing unusual for boys that age. I think many men can remember doing something of that nature when they were boys. For lots of boys, it's just part of growing up.

"I thought my interest in males would pass as I grew older, but it didn't. In high school I liked girls all right and had many dates.

"I went through the tortures of hell because of my desires. I was an intense Christian and I saw no way to reconcile my faith with my desires and actions. Sometimes I would pray to God half the night. Sometimes it succeeded briefly — for days, weeks, even months. I sought the counsel of a clergyman. He was a kindly man with some background in psychology, but I didn't know what to say about my troubles, so he couldn't help me. I have a good mind and could easily have been a straight 'A' student, but I was so overburdened with guilt that I averaged 'C plus.'

"There should be counseling to help young homosexuals understand their problems and fit into society. No teen-age boy should have to live in the hell I lived in.

"When a homosexual 'comes out,' he admits to himself and society that he is a homosexual. I began to 'come out' the summer after graduation. I didn't have any idea what to do. I hung around the end of the Cherry Avenue tunnel and watched the homosexuals who congregated around the beach restroom.

"I gradually learned that the grassway along the bluff was the place to meet homosexuals. I entered the subculture. I was too young to go to bars so I went to coffee houses in Hollywood and elsewhere.

"I never swerved from my ambition to be a policeman. I studied police science at Long Beach City College. Then I went to work for one of the best police departments in Los Angeles County. I didn't like my fellow officers much and they didn't like me much. I resigned at the end of my nine-month probationary period.

"I had really entered the gay life. For the first time I no longer felt I was a freak. I had found a peer group. I had found a way of interacting with other people.

"The gay life is glamorous, fast-moving, exciting. It is fun. The gay are not attached to family life so they are free to be hedonistic playboys. The gay have a flare for class and elegance.

"Most homosexuals are rather neurotic because they have to live in a world that is hostile to them. It is becoming less hostile. There has been tremendous liberalization of public attitudes in the last two years.

"The gay world is a young world. It emphasizes good looks, constant activity, night life. It doesn't belong to older people — and by older I mean ages like 35. As a homosexual grows older, he must repattern his life and values. Otherwise he will be lonely and tired.

"Already I am moving away from the gay world. It is a party world, but there is more to living than partying. One has to earn a living and do something worthwhile.

"The worst thing that happened to me as a homosexual was when my parents found out. My mother wept for days. My father acted stunned. Then we had a family council and they told me I was their son and they loved me. They urged me to seek psychiatric help at a church-connected clinic. I went five times. The psychologist meant well but she had no understanding of a homosexual's problems. My parents and I continue to be good friends. We love each other and we see each other regularly.

"I became a management trainee and then got a good job as a junior executive. After a year I quit to found a free-lance business service. I am doing well.

"I was nearly drafted. The psychologist informed me I wasn't homosexual. I took a letter from a psychiatrist to the induction center. I was reclassified."

I asked him to discuss the position of the homosexual in contemporary society and what he saw for himself in a world which is mostly heterosexual.

"First of all, people should change many of their attitudes," he said. "They think in terms of cliches, like homosexuals hanging around restrooms. This is a tiny part of the homosexual world.

"The people who do this are desperate. They are seeking secrecy. They don't want to be caught by their wives or their male lovers. It is a bit like the lunch-hour prostitution that goes on. It exists but it is a minor part of society.

"Most homosexuals are above average. It is said in homosexual circles that if you fired all the homosexual schoolteachers in Orange County, you would have to close all the schools in Orange County. I live in Laguna Beach and from all I know this is practically true.

"Homosexuals are people. We are not too different from heterosexuals. We get

THE AQUARIUS WOMAN

The safest way to enter into romance with an Aquarian female is to remember she's as paradoxical in love as she is in everything else.

This girl has all the faithfulness of the fixed signs when she's in love, but she also has the detachment and lack of emotion of the air element.

It's possible to have a happy relationship with the Uranus woman, if you leave her free to pursue her myriad interests and circulate among her friends.

She belongs to everyone, and yet to no one. Her love can be tender and inspired, but there will always be a vaguely elusive quality about it.

When you set out to catch this butterfly in your net, remember that she'll never spend her unpredictable life with a man who isn't true to himself.

If you're looking for a passion flower, you've picked the wrong daisy. She'll think physical love is pleasant enough, if it's not overemphasized. In other words, she can take it or leave it alone.

The average girl born under the sign of the water bearer is a social delight. She's graceful, witty, bright as a penny, and extremely adaptable to all forms of society, high and low and in the middle.

Uranus women involved in extra-marital affairs are rare. They can be tempted in exceptional situations, but a dishonest relationship goes against their chemistry.

It's comforting to know that an Aquarian girl is pretty cagey with a buck. That is, it's comforting to know that unless you're planning to hit her for a loan. She might say yes a time or two, but if you let your credit rating slip, she can be colder than the guy at the bank when you skip your car payment.

Her appearance is puzzling. Most Aquarian women are lovely, with a haunting, wistful beauty. But they're changeable. They can give an impression of smooth whipped cream, then suddenly switch to salty pizza.

Next to Librans, Aquarian females are often the most beautiful women in the zodiac. At the very least, they're interesting-looking.

Since Uranus rules the future, you might imagine that these girls would be natural mothers. Children do, after all, belong to the future. But the average Aquarian woman may be bewildered by motherhood in the beginning.

The children will learn lessons of brotherhood and humanity from her by observation. Aquarian mothers are never fiercely protective of their children. They take a tolerant view of the most startling confession. A Uranus woman will seldom punish a child for telling the truth, no matter what he's done.

The quickest ways to lose her are to show jealousy, possessiveness or prejudice; to be critical, stuffy or ultra-conservative. You'll also have to like her friends, who will come in odd, assorted sizes and shapes.

She's susceptible to sudden flashes of inspiration and her intuition is remarkable. Her judgment may not seem sound or practical at first, because she sees months and years ahead.

THE AQUARIUS CHILD

Every mother and father think their child is special — different and unique, compared to other youngsters. But this one is just ridiculous.

Observe. Wait. There's never a cut-and-dried rule with Aquarians.

Until maturity has mellowed Uranian influences, and society has molded more conventional attitudes, an Aquarian youngster can be strongly negative.

These boys and girls can be calm and sweetly docile on the surface, but the north wind can turn them suddenly topsy turvy.

Expect your February child to have a dream and hold it fast — until he gets another one. With a girl, it's likely to be a projection of herself as a prima ballerina, with pure dedication to her art.

With the boys, it could be an oceanographer, ichthyologist, archeologist, anthropologist, an exterminator or a tree surgeon. Normal career choices like nurses, secretaries, salesmen and teachers are too mundane for the average Aquarian child's fantasies.

Encourage him to participate in physical activity or a harmful inertia can take over, and he'll daydream the hours away. Mentally, they're speed demons. But the body may be a bit slower, at least around the house.

Unspoken tension can deeply disturb him. These youngsters can almost see into the souls of others, which can disturb them and leave lasting feelings of unhappiness.

Be careful what you say and how you say it with Aquarian youngsters. Suggestions planted in these fertile, remarkably acute Uranian minds in childhood can take firm root and form fixed adult opinions.

Adolescent problems of romance may never bother you. In fact, the Aquarian child may have to be reminded which sex is which. Few of these youngsters are boy crazy or girl crazy. □

MR. KITCHEN'S
REMODELING CENTER

Did you know that when you sign a home improvement contract involving financing, you undoubtedly have entered into a transaction which may result in a lien mortgage or other security interest on your home? You have a legal right under federal law to cancel this transaction if you desire to do so without any penalty or obligation within three business days or any later date on which all material disclosures required through the "Truth in Lending Act" (Regulation Z) have been given to you. If you so cancel the transaction, any lien mortgage or other security interest on your home arising from this transaction is automatically void. You are also entitled to receive a refund of any down payments or other consideration if you cancel. No longer can a high-pressure salesman spellbind you into a long term financially hazardous obligation.

THE HOMOSEXUAL

sad, we get happy just like everybody else.

"Every male has both masculine and feminine qualities, and every female has both masculine and feminine qualities. Our culture has placed a warped emphasis on masculinity. It over-emphasizes presumed manly traits at the expense of gentleness and sensitivity.

"Why should people limit themselves? I am a person. I am me. Why shouldn't I think of myself — and why shouldn't other people — as an individual, not as a stereotype of what people think a homosexual is?

"As I get older I belong less and less to the subculture. Most of my friends now are heterosexual. I have become bisexual.

"I am still deeply religious. I had to break with Christianity because it is a religion based on ancient taboos that do not apply to life today. It had nothing to offer to a man with my problems. The break wasn't easy. It was shattering.

"I now follow the religious philosophy of Yoga. Its emphasis is on the Now, on meeting life on a day-to-day basis.

"I think of a society based on good family life. I don't think in terms of actual family life — some homosexuals are saddened because they have turned away from fatherhood. I don't think that way. What I envision, and what I think will come in the future, is a society in which people simply love each other. We will quit putting labels on each other, like 'homosexual,' and will simply accept each other.

"I think the 'Establishment' fights the love movement because it is afraid it endangers its deeply rooted prejudices and notions. But younger people, I think, are working toward a more loving and more liberal kind of life.

"I envision a society in which people will let each other alone. I envision a society which will end all the subcultures through intermingling, a society in which people respect each other for what they are, not for what somebody says they should be." □

Q. What is meant by the expression, "There never was a Jackie Kennedy?" I've heard it many times, and I don't know what it means.—Olivia Hammer, Watsonville, Calif

A. The expression is used to highlight the difference between the "true" Mrs. Kennedy and the image manufactured by the White House staff and projected by the press when Mrs. Kennedy was the nation's First Lady.

In her White House years, Mrs. Kennedy was given the buildup as a beautiful, selfless, athletic, considerate, intellectual, creative, versatile, civic-minded young woman of superb character, refinement, and taste. She was never depicted as a chain-smoking, extravagant, superficial social butterfly obsessed with her looks and her clothes and many of whose best ideas were the suggestions of friends or White House staff.

In truth, both of these images were extreme. Jacqueline Kennedy's true image lies somewhere in between.

Q. Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany—is he lowering the voting age to 18?—Mindy Erwin, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

A. Yes. In addition, his government will change the age of eligibility to hold public office from 25 to 21.

Q. In every film I've seen her in, Katharine Hepburn wears a kerchief around her neck. Why?—Helen Bernardi, La Junta, Colo.

A. Because she is 60 and her neck is crepey.

Q. Who defined happiness as having a good bank account, a good cook, and a good digestion?—Millie Underwood, Asbury Park, N.J.

A. Jean Jacques Rousseau (1712-78), French author and philosopher.

Q. Was President Richard Nixon telling the nation the truth when he announced at a press conference that we have no combat troops fighting the war in Laos? —P.T.Y., Durham, N.C.

A. Technically he was telling the truth. We have no U.S. ground forces fighting in Laos. But American airmen have been there for years. The truth is that the U.S., through the CIA, is paying a clandestine army of an estimated 40,000 Meo Hill tribesmen to fight the North Vietnamese intruders and the Pathet Lao rebels. In addition to CIA personnel, we have more than 70 assistant military attachés at the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane who are advising the Laotian army.

Q. In a recent Supreme Court decision, the court voted 5-3 that Negroes have the same right as whites to use a community swimming pool or recreation area. How did the court vote individually?—Harvey Ames, Des Moines, Iowa.

A. Justice William O. Douglas wrote the majority opinion. He was supported by Justices Hugo L. Black, William Brennan Jr., Potter Stewart, and Thurgood Marshall.

Dissenting justices were chief Justice Warren Burger, Justices Byron White and John Harlan.

GAIL RENSHAW

Q. Why did Dean Martin get rid of his wife Jeannie for a 22-year-old sexpot, Gail Renshaw? — Louise Rainey, Terre Haute, Ind.

A. Many film stars prefer to marry fans rather than stay with wives who knew them when.

Q. Is it true that Tiny Tim and his manager have been arrested as part of an international smuggling ring?—E. Gersh, Mobile, Ala.

A. On Nov. 20, 1969, the FBI announced the arrest of Joseph Kaufman, 40, on charges of transporting $90,000 in stolen securities to London. Kaufman was once an agent for Tiny Tim, is no more. Tiny, of course, has never been charged with any crime except singing.

Q. The singing group called "The Archies,"—why don't they ever appear in person? Are they for real? —Brenda Hergruder, Port Allen, La.

A. Although Archie albums are best sellers, no formal Archies singing group exists. The songs, written by Don Kirshner, musical director of the Archie Comedy Hour on TV, are sung and played by a changing cast of CBS studio musicians.

Q. Was Harry Truman the first U.S. President to get us involved in Vietnam? What is the truth?—Marsha Lawrence, Syracuse, N.Y.

A. Modern U.S. intervention in Vietnam began in 1946 when Truman was President. Our objective was to help France retain its colonial position in Indochina. Between 1946 and 1954 the U.S. provided $2 billion or approximately 75 percent of the French war expenditure in Vietnam.

In those years, Vietnam was a single country, not divided into North and South Vietnam. The only external aggressors were the French, financed by the U.S. We hoped France could prevent any portion of Vietnam from going Communist, and we were prepared to subsidize the French endlessly.

In 1954, however, the French were defeated at Dienbienphu. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles thereupon tried to get President Eisenhower to send American troops to Vietnam. Eisenhower refused. He agreed to send money and materiel, but he would not commit troops to fight on the mainland of Asia.

His successor, President Kennedy, was less prudent. He sent 16,000 U.S. troops, and President Johnson escalated the number to approximately 540,000. President Nixon will have withdrawn 115,500 by April 15th, 1970.

Q. Is Sargent Shriver considered an outcast by the Kennedy Family? — L. Thompson, Salem, Mass.

A. Sargent Shriver's refusal to back his brother-in-law, Sen. Robert Kennedy, for the Democratic Presidential candidacy in 1968, his support of Lyndon Johnson, the continuity of his ambassadorship under Richard Nixon—these factors have made Shriver suspect in the eyes of the Kennedy apparatus. The Kennedy family, however, still regards him as a member in good standing.

GOURMET

Three ordinary little words explain the difference between a good restaurant and a great one. They are "cooked to order."

That's why guests visiting Rocco's, an exceptional restaurant at 8060 E. Florence Ave., Downey, find themselves savoring every mouthful of their food and murmuring such phrases as "My, isn't this good?" or "It's been ages since I tasted anything this delicious."

Good restaurants can prepare excellent meals using precooked items which are reheated. Great restaurants frown on such shortcuts. Rocco's chefs, directed by kitchen maestro Phil Phillips, are so well-trained that they can prepare the most complicated entrees to order without keeping the guests waiting. Such techniques create continental sauces, pastas, scampi, veal and beef dishes with unusually fresh flavors.

The man mostly responsible for Rocco's success is its general manager, Andre Moskalenko, a soft-spoken, European-trained gentleman who knows the arts of fine service and hospitality. For many years he was manager at Anderson's Tally Ho, one of Lakewood's finest restaurants. When its owner, Mrs. Vinnie Hutchison, decided to build and operate Rocco's, Andre helped conceive its design ideas. The decor is stunningly beautiful, including such warm Mediterranean effects as a wine-red rug, crystal globe chandeliers with bulbs that shimmer like flames and stained glass windows.

Opened a year ago this month, Rocco's recently added

new enchantments to its luncheon and dinner menus. The evening specials include lobster parmesan, $5.50; beef brochette, $4.75, and the scaloppini marsala-cannelloni combination, $4.95. Lobster parmesan is somewhat like lobster thermidor, but has a personality of its own. The lobster is cut into small pieces and cooked in a white wine sauce with mushrooms and Italian herbs.

The beef brochette consists of the finest filet mignon cut into pieces and broiled on a skewer with mushrooms, tomatoes, green peppers and onions. The scaloppini is made with luscious filet of veal sauteed in butter with mushrooms and marsala wine. The cannelloni which accompany it are large tubular macaroni stuffed with chicken.

Those entrees, prime rib au jus, crown rack of lamb and thick juicy steaks are served on

David Eisenhower, himself a pitcher, relaxes with wife Julie and father-in-law Nixon, while watching the Washington Senators lose to the Baltimore Orioles.

President Eisenhower greets his frequent companion and 5-year-old grandson David at the Augusta National Golf Course in 1953.

Student & Son-in-Law: The Two Worlds of David Eisenhower

by David Detweiler

AMHERST, MASS.

President Nixon! It may come as a surprise, but six years ago, when David Eisenhower was a high school junior, he ran for the presidency of the Exeter chapter of Teen Citizens for Johnson-Humphrey. David lost by a wide margin, and many of his classmates at the New England school were amazed he had even tried for the post.

Was David, in true middle-of-the-road tradition, repudiating candidate Barry Goldwater's "extremism?" More probably the tall, gangly grandson of the most popular Republican of the century was just trying to do something on his own—something people didn't expect of him. Since then, Dwight David Eisenhower II's life has become increasingly complicated by what people expect of him.

For instance, the Public David thoroughly enjoyed the tumult of the 1968 legant dinners including tray of elishes, soup du jour or super- tive salad, baked potato, rice r spaghetti, hot Italian bread nd beverage. Rocco's, open very day, serves Sundays from p.m. on.

ROAST PRIME rib is a prized staurant entree because of the uality of beef used. It's prime, course, meaning it's the very st grade of aged, juicy, mar- ed beef. Marbled is a term hich describes the cross grain fine beef. When sliced, such eef displays wavy designs re- mbling those in marble from a uarry.

Most restaurants charge remium prices for roast prime b of such quality. A few don't. ne of these is The Paddock, 052 Katella Ave. across from e Los Alamitos race track. It's wned by a cheerful, round- ced retired Navy chief named ex Hovnanian. When he took er as host a few months ago, decided to feature a low- iced specialty that would en- courage his patrons to return again and again, bringing their friends along to try it, too.

He chose roast prime rib priced at $2.95 on the dinner. It was an immediate hit. The Paddock's chef — talented George Cracraft — has a great prime rib recipe, turning out tender roasts which are easily sliced and fit for a king's palate.

The dinner includes soup du jour or beef noodle soup (with amazingly large chunks of roast prime rib); big salad with croutons on a chilled dinner plate, fancy baked potato, carrot strip garnish, hot garlic bread and chocolate mints for dessert. The hot au jus served with the beef is nectar for the gods. Another accompaniment is creamed horseradish sauce.

Other entrees on the dinner include filet mignon, au jus, described as "queen of steaks," $3.95; Australian lobster tail, tender and sweet, $3.95; deep-fried jumbo shrimp, $2.65; swordfish and northern halibur steak, both $2.50. The luncheon treats include hot roast beef sandwich au jus, $1.25; char-broiled top sirloin steak sandwich, $2.35, and the lo-cal jockey special, $1.35, consisting of charbroiled chopped sirloin steak with vegetables and cottage cheese.

The Paddock's new separate dining room is handsomely decorated with crystal chandeliers, wall-to-wall carpeting and large color photos of quarter horses which earned fame and fortune at the nearby track. Sunday dinners are served from 5 p.m. on. □

Nixon campaign—the whirlwind tours, rallies, and backroom bull-sessions. But the Private David, according to a fellow student at Amherst College, was often fed up at being whisked away from his friends and studies, week in, week out, and offered up as a symbol of his generation, a generation whose more vocal spokesmen have scorned him as not representative of young people at all.

"I feel really sorry for him," says Robert Nathan, an editor of the school newspaper. "I remember in 1968 when the Nixon-Agnew people kept phoning David at the beginning of each week to get him to fly out on a series of campaign appearances. He was annoyed about it. He told them he had agreed to leave on Thursday or Friday and work for the Republican ticket all weekend, but that he was a student, too, and they'd have to understand he couldn't just keep cutting classes."

Praise and Criticism

Few people really understand the contradiction-filled life of David Eisenhower, 21. On one hand the politicos and the press are casting him as a model collegian and quoting him as a voice of campus youth. On the other hand, a large number of students, even at his own college, criticize him severely for his utter loyalty to a father-in-law in the White House.

"Politically he's a 40-year-old man," says one student. "When Amherst had a two-day Moratorium last spring, the president of Amherst sent a letter to Mr. Nixon saying the best way to stop campus unrest would be to do more about the problems the students are bringing up. Then David Eisenhower was quoted as saying he didn't think the letter spoke for the majority of the students here. It's absurd for him to make that statement. It shows how out of touch he is. The great majority of students here agreed with the letter and supported the Moratoriums this fall as well."

Agrees with Agnew

David has made numerous statements which seem untypical of his generation's views. In 1968 he agreed with Spiro Agnew that there is considerable evidence showing the campus protest movements have been infiltrated by Communists. And last year, in a letter to the Amherst school newspaper, he defended Nixon's alliance with Sen. Strom Thurmond at the '68 convention: "Strom Thurmond is second to God with a large segment of the American voters . . . Strom Thurmond held the line with the Southern delegations. Now does that mean you disregard Strom Thurmond and watch the nomination go down the river?"

"He's not his own person," says one radical student at Amherst. "Sure he's entitled to his privacy, but when he takes it upon himself to defend Nixon right down the line, never disagreeing, he has to be open to some criticism."

According to his friends, David gets sick and tired of being constantly criticized. "He's just like anybody else," says Fred Grandy, David's roommate at Exeter and an usher at David and Julie's wedding. "His ideas are his own. He's not supposed to be in the majority, and he resents being made into some kind of model."

Since the days when he wanted to be leader of the Exeter Youth for Johnson-Humphrey, David has gradually become more and more a part of the Establishment, unlike John Laird and Maureen Finch, both children of Cabinet members and both Vietnam war protesters.

In 1962, David's first year at the exclusive Phillips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire, Ike himself dropped in by helicopter for a brief visit with David. The school newspaper article didn't even mention David by name, which was probably all right with David, who was already uncomfortable at being known as General Eisenhower's grandson instead of just himself.

Says it with clothes

An Exeter librarian remembers how David, in seeking an independent identity, would "go into old second-hand shops and buy double-breasted jackets with enormous lapels and parade around in them."

David went out for baseball at Exeter, and made the Junior Varsity his sophomore year. "Duke" (David's nickname) had a good season as pitcher, including a one-hitter against rival school Governor Dummer. He was deeply disappointed, however, that he never made the Varsity, and it was as a senior that David began regularly to play APBA Baseball, the board game based on statistics, which he now enjoys at Amherst.

An additional disappointment came when David failed to be elected one of the senior proctors of his dormitory. Thus, although his marks were good (a solid B average) and he had been successful as a debater in the Student Senate, David was, as one Exeter teacher remembers, "plagued by a certain amount of insecurity."

Candidate Nixon's "secret weapons": son-in-law David and daughters Tricia and Julie. David loved the excitement of campaigning but insisted on attending Amherst classes during the week.

David Eisenhower, about to join second White House family, poses with the Nixons the day after the elections. He and Julie wed a month later, moved into a $95-a-month apartment.

She was reading "Catch 22" in the lobby, and she uses a pen marked "U. S. Government." So where does she belong? Not in a category of any kind.

There's a place for Jill Goldwater, though, among people who don't play games like "guess-my-personality." The 15-year-old Wilson High School junior, who lives at 6610 Bay Shore Walk, is thinking about studying medicine at Stanford after her graduation.

Her views:

— A good education is usually thought of as coinciding with a lot of time spent in school. That's part of it, but mostly a good education depends on a state of mind. I get an education — which an education — whhich I see as a main part of a good life — isn't going to be available to many people who really want one.

— High school students already know that state budget cuts are going to trim a lot of important classes. Courses like "world problems" certainly don't have all the answers, but they help by giving students the time to talk with each other about events in the world. If people don't talk, they'll never get any other views but their own. Opportunities for talk will be cut down if schools decide that important courses are suddenly unimportant simply because there's less money.

— Most of the answers come from other people. I'm learning more and more how important it is not to isolate myself.

— High school students sometimes worry about where they will fit in with college, or even if the college will be there when we get ready for it. Will frustrated collegians wreck it for others to come? Violence tears up your mind as much as it tears up anything.

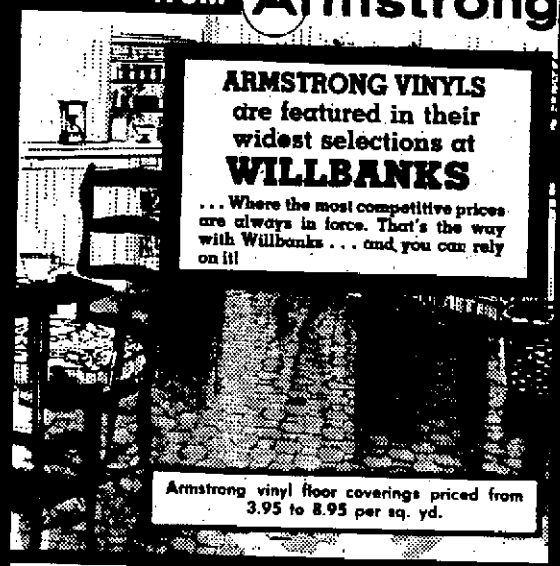

— One thing that disturbs me in high school is the policy of grouping students according to their performance on tests. You get classes of so-called "enriched" students, and classes of "A" and "B" or poor students. Too often, it seems that the schools are just singling out certain students and saying in effect, "You're not college-bound." How do they know? Any student, I think, has more ability than the schools give him credit for. Chaining a student to a certain group does a lot to give him a limited self-image. I think that's bad.

— Organizations outside of class, though, bring students together. The Junior Statesmen of America, for example, debate issues like Vietnam or the anti-ballistic missile system. The debates are real, and aren't treated academically. Even if your own point of view isn't changed, it's broadened. After the debate, the group votes on a resolution of the issue, and copies of this are sent to state and national officials. Naturally, we know President Nixon isn't going to change his policy because of us, but it's better than doing nothing. We're learning.

— Maybe what I'm saying is that I think we have to work within the system. Not because the system is so good, but because any change has to start with what we've already got. Violence speaks so loudly that the "silent majority" can remain silent and be considered right. It's the peaceful movements, like the war moratorium marches, that call the silent majority's power into question. Peaceful ways to peace aren't irrelevant. □

Glad You Asked That?

Q: Ray Rogers and Dale Evans — how many children and grandchildren have they? — L. Jackson, Seattle.

A: The Rogers have had a family of nine children — of whom [illegible] Roy had three by his first marriage and Dale had one by her first marriage. Together they had Robin Elizabeth, who died at age 2. The other four were adopted. The [illegible] were blessed with 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. With all the goings and comings, there are now only eight people on the old corral in Apple Valley, Calif. — despite an joyful family reunions.

Q: I hear that "Dorothy Manners" (the name of the infamous Ma Barker and her sons) will one day "Donna" and Chet. Was Ma Barker a real or fictional character? — Philip M. Kent, Wash.

A: She was real. Shelley Winters (who plays Ma) researched the role at the time with every part she plays. In going through the FBI films, she learned that the oldest Barker boy was a dope addict and the youngest a homosexual. To "straighten out" the latter, in the film "Mama" (Shelley) takes her son to bed.

Q: Seems, when you watch old movies on TV, that James Cagney, Eddie G. Robinson, Horace McMahon and George Raft were always landing in prison — or trying to break out. Who was in jail the most? — Bill Doherty, Cleveland.

A: George Raft. "I was in so many prison pictures," he claims, "that I had a whole wardrobe of prison suits custom-tailored."

Q: What the dark spot, evidently what the Jews chewing — Marcus Plant, Hempstead, N.Y.

A: That's a tricky question. While there's rum, flavoring and sugar in [illegible], the principal ingredient is the roasted milky meat of the coconut — and everybody has a personal favorite which has been written about. The American colonists packed up the habit from the Indians who made it from native fruit. In the early 1800's this was the first commercial use mentioned in America. Later hurricane and earthquake losses of the ability to build showed Americans are the largest consumers of shaving cream, next is Canada, then the Latin American countries.

Q: What famous newspaperman said "We are recorders and reporters of the facts — not judges of the behavior we describe"? — R.F.M. Detroit.

A: No newspaperman. It was Dr. Alfred Kinsey, defending his "Kinsey Report" on sexual behavior.

Q: Where is Disneyland South? Is that the one they're opening in Florida? — Sanford Birch, Salt Lake City.

A: No sir. It's in Da Nang, Vietnam — a name our GIs playfully gave to the NCO (Non-Commissioned Officers) Club there. It's been hit by Viet Cong bombs half a dozen times. The Disneyland opening in Florida will be called Walt Disney World, located 15 miles south of Orlando. Scheduled to open November 1971.

DAVID EISENHOWER

CONTINUED

Family get-together: John Eisenhower, Ambassador to Belgium; wife Barbara; 14-year-old daughter Mary Jean and David. David's father was pleased at David and Julie's decision to marry, wished it had not come quite so early.

David's first college choice was Yale, but he wasn't sure he could get in, and when Amherst offered him early acceptance, David applied in the fall of 1965.

"Leaving Exeter, David had no idea what he wanted to major in or where he wanted to end up, just like the rest of us," remembers a school friend. As it turned out, the future was not to be very different from the past.

Plain David

The first weeks at Amherst were difficult. A classmate remembers how he would introduce himself as "David," leaving off the last name. Unsure of what kind of college career he wanted, David knew only that he wanted it on his own and not as Ike's grandson.

However, that fall another famous name came into David's life. One day a member of a local Republican club got the bright idea to call David and see if he might want to go out with Julie Nixon, then a freshman at nearby Smith college.

David was game and gave the younger Nixon daughter a call and before long they were dating regularly.

As Julie Nixon's husband and an active campaigner for the Nixon-Agnew ticket, David might be expected to defend U.S. Vietnam policy in the classroom, but he shies away from committing himself on such subjects.

Liberal classmates may assume he stands with the Nixon Administration right down the line, but a fellow student in American Government 21, a course in Constitutional Law, says David merely "enjoys discussion and debate for themselves. When he speaks he never tells anyone whether he really believes what he is saying or whether he just enjoys arguing. You can't really tell where he stands."

This may be partly because David feels everything he says is misunderstood by the more radical of his classmates.

Seldom on campus

It is not surprising that David is seen little on the Amherst campus these days. "He comes to class, his singing group's rehearsals, and sometimes shows up at the snack bar," says one acquaintance, "but the school doesn't see him much."

David understandably prefers the quiet home life with Julie in nearby Northampton, where the Eisenhowers live in a $95-a-month suite in a hulking old apartment house near the Smith campus. Their second-hand gray Plymouth Valiant is parked in a side alley. General Eisenhower had been furious to learn that David and Julie were hitchhiking the seven miles between Smith and Amherst, so Mamie sold them the car on credit.

The apartment below David and Julie is manned around the clock by Secret Service men, and a closed-circuit TV keeps an eye on anyone entering or leaving the Eisenhowers' home. Julie is followed everywhere by the agents, but when David goes to class or to a tri-weekly rehearsal of his singing group, the Zymbyes, he is alone.

According to their friends, David is more self-confident now that he's married, and he and Julie live a happy private life, sometimes entertaining people for dinner or taking in a movie, and frequently visiting Washington on the weekends, when David bowls or watches the football games with the President.

David copes with a Navajo Indian belt given him when he and Julie dedicated a Fairchild plant in Shiprock, N. Mex., last fall. An attractive couple and a political dream marriage, the young Eisenhowers are always in demand.

Still, the public world will not leave Julie and David alone. During last October's Moratorium, when they took off for the White House, the young couple were sent a telegram by the Smith-Amherst Moratorium Committee, regretting their absence: "Rational discussion, not trouble expected," it read. "Ask you reconsider your decision to stay away."

Angry reply

David was sufficiently irked to reply in the college newspaper that "had a threat existed we would have felt an obligation to remain" and object "to the hypocrisy in attempting to cast us as opposing free and open exchange."

Ever sensitive to criticism, David has admitted that he is not in the "majority" at his school. This still bothers him, torn as he is between a wish to be left completely alone and an attraction to politics that keeps him in the limelight.

Now, in his senior year and likely to be drafted (David's lottery number is 30), he has expressed an interest in law school. David may follow his grandfather's advice and attend Naval Officer's Candidate School—a three-year commitment. A friend says David has already taken and passed his Naval OCS physical.

When he hands in his senior thesis on the politics of the 1968 campaign, David will face uncertainty once more, not knowing exactly what he wants or will be able to do. In this respect, Dwight David Eisenhower II will be squarely among the majority of normal, average American youths.

All Army recruits get these earplugs, but GI's say they hurt and wearing them is not enforced. Meanwhile the Army continues to pay pensions for loss of hearing.

GI Deafness

Earmuffs could protect hearing and save the Army money

The U.S. Army has no standard policy of protecting a soldier's hearing.

One result is that more than half the 500,000 GI's who undergo combat training each year, suffer enough hearing loss so that they could be barred from combat.

A study by two physicians from the Army's Walter Reed Hospital reveals that 52.7 percent of the troops permanently assigned at Fort Jackson, S.C., suffered hearing losses sufficient to remove them from the very jobs they had trained for. An additional 23.5 percent of the men also suffered impaired hearing but in lesser degree.

The major cause of hearing loss in troops is the noise made by tanks, helicopters, jets, and artillery against which soldiers are not adequately protected.

Modern Medicine, a journal widely circulated to physicians, declares, "At the Army's tank-training school at Fort Knox, Ky., partial deafness is said to be matter-of-factly accepted." And Dr. Thomas Nilges, director of the Walter Reed Audiology and Speech Center, says, "I estimate the chances that a soldier will need a hearing aid after 20 years are ten times greater than for a civilian."

The Veterans Administration reports that it currently pays approximately 60,000 veterans about $3.3 million per month in pensions for hearing impairments.

Powerful drugs used to treat cancer or to suppress the rejection reaction in organ-transplant patients are posing a new hazard.

The danger is a new type of pneumonia.

The pneumonia is caused by a germ that ordinarily is benign — Pneumocystis carinii.

Dr. Myron G. Schultz, chief of the parasitic disease branch of the National Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, says the organism apparently becomes hazardous only when the body's defense system is weakened. This is the system that attempts to ward off disease-causing germs.

The organism is a one-celled germ, and researchers have not yet established whether it is a fungus or a protozoon.

P. carinii has been identified as the cause of death in infections developing in kidney-transplant patients, Dr. Schultz says.

NEW VACCINES: Two new vaccines against organisms that cause dysentery are showing promise in studies conducted by the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

The vaccines, taken by mouth, act against micro-organisms of the shigella type. These organisms cause a disorder known as shigellosis.

"We still do not have an acceptable shigellosis vaccine but the results are thus far encouraging," reports Dr. Herbert L. DuPont.

Under study are a vaccine developed in Yugoslavia and one prepared at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research, Washington, D.C. The Yugoslav vaccine has already proved effective in field trials in Yugoslavia.

Medical investigators want such a vaccine to prevent outbreaks of dysentery in institutions for the mentally retarded, military camps, prisons, Indian reservations and other places where persons are confined and crowded. The disease is a major military problem in Southeastern Asia and is also responsible for much of the special nursing care required in many institutions.

Doctors have found that two strains of the shigella bacillus cause about 90 per cent of all cases reported in U.S. institutions.

Trials of the vaccines have been conducted at the Maryland House of Correction, Jessup, among prisoner volunteers.

Studies may now be extended to East Pakistan under the auspices of the U.S. Public Health Service.

NEW VD TREATMENT: A new drug combination is proving highly effective in the outpatient treatment of gonorrhea.

Navy doctors, in a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, say the treatment consists of an injection of the antibiotic ampicillin and oral administration of probenecid. The latter sustains blood levels of the antibiotic, to make it more effective.

In trials conducted among patients in Subic Bay, the Philippines; Yokusuka, Japan; Pearl Harbor, Oahu, Hawaii; and Guam, the ampicillin-probenecid combination achieved a 99 per cent rate of cure.

Although the rate of cure was almost the same with penicillin (98 per cent), the doctors recommend ampicillin. Reason: Increasing numbers of strains of gonococci, the causative germs, are becoming resistant to penicillin.

Another study shows that single injections of procaine penicillin G failed to cure 29 per cent of gonorrhea patients in the Western Pacific.

The ampicillin used in the new study was Polycillin N, a product of Bristol Laboratories.

NEW CONTRACEPTIVE: One of the big drawbacks in the use of intrauterine contraceptive devices (IUCD) is that they frequently are expelled unbeknownst to the wearer. If this happens, the patient may, of course, become pregnant.

Now, a doctor reports that an IUCD with a new design is less likely to be expelled from the womb.

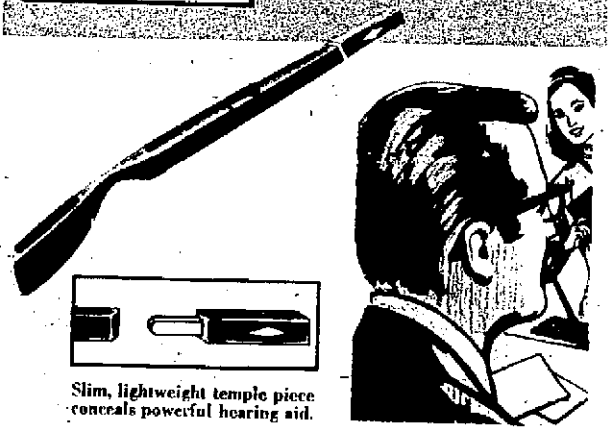

Dr. Samy F. Rifai of Railways General Hospital in Cairo, Egypt, calls the new IUCD a "coiled loop."

Made of polyethylene, the device is curved in the shape of a large S that continues into a smaller coil wound in a direction opposite to that of the upper part (the S).

Dr. Rifai, reporting in the American Journal of Obstetrics & Gynecology, says the coiled loop is a "safe, effective and acceptable means of birth control."

He adds that it often is suitable for women who have expelled other shapes of IUCDs. □

AQUARIUS THE WATER BEARER

January 21 through February 19

If you were born between Jan. 21 and Feb. 19 inclusive, the Sun was in the zone of the Zodiac called Aquarius, the Water Bearer, and Aquarius is your "Sun sign."

Noted astrologer Linda Goodman explores the signs of the Zodiac and tells you what to expect from people born under the various signs and how to deal with them. Her articles will help you better to understand your husband, wife, lover or child through astrology. This article deals with the traits of Aquarius people.

(From the book, LINDA GOODMAN'S SUN SIGNS, copyright 1968, by Linda Goodman, published by Taplinger Publishing Co., Inc.)
(Distributed by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1969)

HOW TO RECOGNIZE AQUARIUS

Lots of people like rainbows. Children make wishes on them, artists paint them, dreamers chase them, but the Aquarian lives on one. What's more, he's taken it apart and examined it, piece by piece, color by color, and he still believes in it.

Generally kindly and tranquil by nature, Aquarians nevertheless enjoy defying public opinion, and they secretly delight in shocking more conventional people with occasional erratic conduct.

Aquarius eyes are typically vague, with a dreamy, wandering expression, and often (but not always) blue, green or gray. The hair is frequently straight and silky, likely to be blonde, sandy or light brown; the complexion is pale and the height is usually taller than average.

Aquarians are always analyzing situations, friends and strangers. When they discover the puzzle wasn't so complex after all, they become bored.

Despite their fixation on friendship, Aquarians don't have many intimates. They seek quantity rather than quality in their associations.

This Sun sign is known as the sign of genius, and so it is, since over 70 per cent of the people in the Hall of Fame are either Sun Aquarians or have Aquarian ascendants. On the other hand, a substantially high percentage of those confined in mental institutions are also Aquarians.

He'll wander through affluent society and the slums alike with his symbolic jar, gathering the waters of knowledge and pouring them out again, except for those occasional lapses into hibernation.

You'll rarely find the Aquarian fighting fiercely for a cause. They live their code, and they feel that's enough.

Uranus illnesses are usually connected with the circulatory system. Aquarians shiver and shake in the winter, and suffer with the humidity in the summer.

They're susceptible to varicose veins and hardening of the arteries in old age, if their emotions are directed into negative channels, and they tend to have accidents to the legs, especially the shin and ankles.

Aquarians despise lying and cheating, and they avoid borrowing and lending. They'll give you money as a gift, but don't ask them for a loan.

The soul of the water bearer is constantly torn asunder by Uranus, the unpredictable and violent planet of change which lets him see ahead with electric blue clarity to the future. Aquarius belongs to mankind. He represents its truest hopes and its deepest ideals.

THE AQUARIUS MAN

To wade bravely smack dab into the center of the problem, don't expect an Aquarian male to behave the way people in love are supposed to behave.

When it comes to friendship, he's all you could ask for in a pal or a confidant. Love? Well, as an Aquarian I once knew said, "Anybody can have a girl. But love is something else again."

The Aquarian water bearer likes everybody. Everyone is his friend.

He responds to unusually high ideals, thanks to his rigid moral code. He'll almost surely lead a life of change, controversy and unexpected events.

The girl who wants to land him eventually has first to intrigue him. When a female either ignores him or keeps her own counsel, in the beginning at least, his eyes will open a little wider.

There's always an excellent possibility that an Aquarian will achieve some sort of prestige during his liferime.

Some Uranus-ruled men have a fetish for cleanliness. You may bump into one who shrieks if anyone uses his towel or breathes on his oatmeal. Back of this is an almost neurotic fear of germs and illness.

Now let's face the worst fact courageously. Most Aquarians avoid marriage as long as it's humanly possible. A rare Aquarian male will be enticed into a shower of shoes and rice at an early age, but it doesn't happen often enough for the statistics to be encouraging.

Aquarian men find it difficult to relax in physical expressions of love. That first goodnight kiss may be a long time materializing.

Even after he's mustered the courage to say "I love you," he'll avoid the issue of marriage with every excuse in the book.

But all is not lost. Though it's true that most Aquarians wed late, they do eventually wed — usually.

Uranian sex is part of a larger image or ideal. Should a temptation to engage in illicit romance arise (illicit in his eyes, that is,) he'll usually end the affair abruptly.

He may not be the best breadwinner around, but he's capable of inventing something beneficial to the world. Naturally, there are a few Uranian men who are wealthy, even millionaires, but a high income bracket is seldom a burning ambition.

The children will find him the greatest listener on the block. A small boy's trouble learning how to strike a home run and a little girl's tears over a broken doll are simply the problems of a couple of pals in trouble to an Aquarian father.

Uranians frequently marry childhood sweethearts years later, or cling to a faded illusion. An Aquarian can usually describe his first love in detail, which can be annoying to a wife. The solution is to be that first love.

The Army issues earplugs to all recruits, but their wearing is not actively enforced. Besides, the plugs are not individually fitted by trained technicians or doctors. Many of the troops complain that the earplugs hurt them, especially when worn within sound range of firing cannon. Many soldiers substitute cigarette filters for GI earplugs. But the filters offer scant protection.

According to experts, the best protection is afforded by the large earmuffs used by ground and maintenance crews at commerical airports. This type of ear protection is issued to soldiers at Fort Knox, home of the armored divisions, after the men have suffered a hearing loss, but not before.

A matter of cost

Earmuffs cost $6 a pair, and according to one Fort Knox spokesman, "They just cost too damn much to be handed out to every GI. We loan them to the men when they go through our 20 mm. firing range, because the noise is something fierce, but after that, we take the earmuffs back. Unless of course, the poor fella is already hard of hearing. We don't want him to get worse."

Thus far, 1761 veterans of the war in Vietnam are receiving $81,450 per month for damage done to their hearing while in the service. It would have been far more sensible for our Army, richest in the world, to have equipped each of these men with a pair of $6 earmuffs.

LLOYD SHEARER

Experts say that the large earmuffs worn by ground crews at commercial airports are the best protection against noise.

You know what bleach does to your hair. Just imagine what it can do to your laundry.

Bleach can do a lot of damage to bright colors, synthetic fabrics and miracle finishes. Making white turn yellow. Fading colors. And fast plain talking shows a detergent booster fast as new tangled as the stuff you're washing. New Blue Borateem.

Borateem keeps white white instead of yellow. It deodorizes as it cleans. It removes stains. All without bleach. Which makes it very very safe for any washable fabric or color.

My Favorite Jokes

by Jack Cassidy

EDITOR'S NOTE: Recently, Jack Cassidy played his first Broadway comedy, The Mundy Scheme, after a long career as a top star in musicals. He's as well known away from the New York stage, thanks to dozens of television appearances as a guest on the major talk shows as well as in such series as Bewitched, I Spy, That Girl, as well as his own series for CBS-TV, He and She.

Cassidy has appeared in such Broadway musicals as Maggie Flynn, in which he co-starred with his wife Shirley Jones last season; She Loves Me, for which he won the Tony Award; Superman, and Fade Out—Fade In with Carol Burnett. He has recorded the cast albums for his musical productions and with Shirley Jones has made albums of Marriage Type Love, Speaking of Love and Love from Hollywood.

The Cassidy's make their home in Beverly Hills, Calif., with their three sons, Shaun, 10; Patrick, 7, and Ryan, 3. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

"I can't leave the theater," the actor shouted. "I'm married to it!"
"Then," his wife asked, "why don't you sue it for non-support?"

A parking place is the spot that always disappears when you make a U-turn.

I hung the picture—because I couldn't locate the artist.

"You've been acquitted on the charge of bigamy," the judge said. "You can go home now."
"But, your Honor, sir, which home?"

Wife: "I dreamed you bought me a fur coat."
Husband: "Well, go back to sleep and wear it in good health."

A husband returned home one night in a rather inebriated state and handed his wife his pay envelope. She opened it, looked inside and shouted, "This is only half your salary. Where's the rest of it?" "I bought something for the house," he replied. "Oh, how nice," smiled the wife, "what was it you bought?" "A round of drinks," he replied.

Two elderly, well-fixed gentlemen were sitting at their club bar puffing on cigars. Finally one of the men remarked, "Do you think Rex Harrison is his real name?" The other gentleman, mulling over the question, puffed on his cigar a few times and matter-of-factly replied, "Do I think whose real name is Rex Harrison?"

An airplane is the only place where you can't walk out on a dull movie.

A funny thing happened at this drive-in theater—a fellow drove in alone.

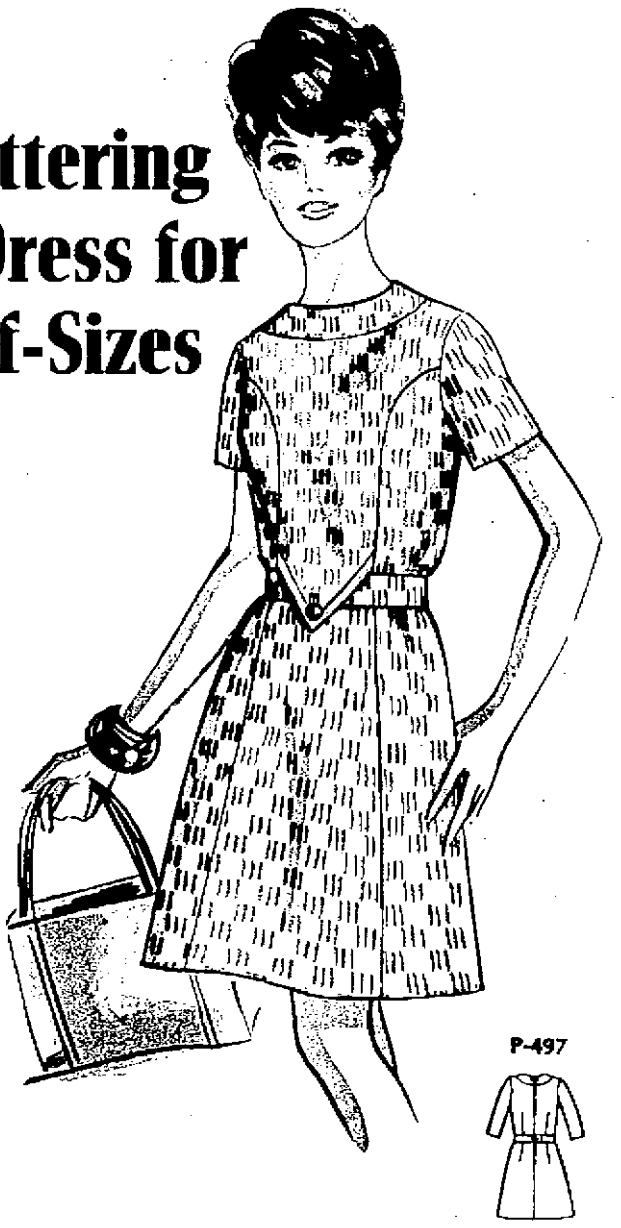

The noisy diner was banging on the table with his cutlery. "The service here is lousy," he bellowed. "Look at my glass, it's empty. What've I got to do to get some water?"
The quiet waiter leaned over and whispered, "Why don't you set fire to yourself?"

Judge: "Patrick Donovan, you've been brought here for drinkin'."
Patrick: "Well, your honor, what are we waitin' fer, let's get started."

"My brother ran a hundred yards in six seconds."
"But that's impossible . . . the world's record is more than nine seconds."
"My brother knows a short cut."

Flattering Dress for Half-Sizes

P-497

Created for the half-size figure with an eye to flattery and comfort, this dress (P-497) is successful at both—thanks to careful use of basic design and detail. The softly bloused bodice and A-line skirt provide ease of movement, and the vertical seaming and buttoned bodice-tab lead the eye downward to slim the figure. Make this dress in your choice of sleeve length and fabric—it's an excellent design for any season.

P-497 with Photo-Guide comes in New Sizes 12½ to 22½, bust 35 to 45. Size 14½, 37 bust, requires 2⅞ yards of 45-inch fabric.

THE AQUARIUS WOMAN

The safest way to enter into romance with an Aquarian female is to remember she's as paradoxical in love as she is in everything else.

This girl has all the faithfulness of the fixed signs when she's in love, but she also has the detachment and lack of emotion of the air element.

It's possible to have a happy relationship with the Uranus woman, if you leave her free to pursue her myriad interests and circulate among her friends.

She belongs to everyone, and yet to no one. Her love can be tender and inspired, but there will always be a vaguely elusive quality about it.

When you set out to catch this butterfly in your ner, remember that she'll never spend her unpredictable life with a man who isn't true to himself.

If you're looking for a passion flower, you've picked the wrong daisy. She'll think physical love is pleasant enough, if it's not overemphasized. In other words, she can take it or leave it alone.

The average girl born under the sign of the water bearer is a social delight. She's graceful, witty, bright as a penny, and extremely adaptable to all forms of society, high and low and in the middle.

Uranus women involved in extra-marital affairs are rare. They can be tempted in exceptional situations, but a dishonest relationship goes against their chemistry.

It's comforting to know that an Aquarian girl is pretty cagey with a buck. That is, it's comforting to know that unless you're planning to hit her for a loan. She might say yes a time or two, but if you let your credit rating slip, she can be colder than the guy at the bank when you skip your car payment.

Her appearance is puzzling. Most Aquarian women are lovely, with a haunting, wistful beauty. But they're changeable. They can give an impression of smooth whipped cream, then suddenly switch to salty pizza.

Next to Librans, Aquarian females are often the most beautiful women in the zodiac. At the very least, they're interesting-looking.

Since Uranus rules the future, you might imagine that these girls would be natural mothers. Children do, after all, belong to the future. But the average Aquarian woman may be bewildered by motherhood in the beginning.

The children will learn lessons of brotherhood and humanity from her by observation. Aquarian mothers are never fiercely protective of their children. They take a tolerant view of the most startling confession. A Uranus woman will seldom punish a child for telling the truth, no matter what he's done.

The quickest ways to lose her are to show jealousy, possessiveness or prejudice; to be critical, stuffy or ultra-conservative. You'll also have to like her friends, who will come in odd, assorted sizes and shapes.

She's susceptible to sudden flashes of inspiration and her intuition is remarkable. Her judgment may not seem sound or practical at first, because she sees months and years ahead.

THE AQUARIUS CHILD

Every mother and father think their child is special — different and unique, compared to other youngsters. But this one is just ridiculous.

Observe. Wait. There's never a cut-and-dried rule with Aquarians.

Until maturity has mellowed Uranian influences, and society has molded more conventional attitudes, an Aquarian youngster can be strongly negative.

These boys and girls can be calm and sweetly docile on the surface, but the north wind can turn them suddenly topsy turvy.

Expect your February child to have a dream and hold it fast — until he gets another one. With a girl, it's likely to be a projection of herself as a prima ballerina, with pure dedication to her art.

With the boys, it could be an oceanographer, ichthyologist, archeologist, anthropologist, an exterminator or a tree surgeon. Normal career choices like nurses, secretaries, salesmen and teachers are too mundane for the average Aquarian child's fantasies.

Encourage him to participate in physical activity or a harmful inertia can take over, and he'll daydream the hours away. Mentally, they're speed demons. But the body may be a bit slower, at least around the house.

Unspoken tension can deeply disturb him. These youngsters can almost see into the souls of others, which can disturb them and leave lasting feelings of unhappiness.

Be careful what you say and how you say it with Aquarian youngsters. Suggestions planted in these fertile, remarkably acute Uranian minds in childhood can take firm root and form fixed adult opinions.

Adolescent problems of romance may never bother you. In fact, the Aquarian child may have to be reminded which sex is which. Few of these youngsters are boy crazy or girl crazy. □

The Dream Cake

New miracle recipe for a higher, moister mix cake.

We came up with this great new recipe for a better cake. Just add Dream Whip,* two extra eggs, and only one cup of water to your favorite cake mix (see recipe below), and you'll get a cake that's actually bigger!

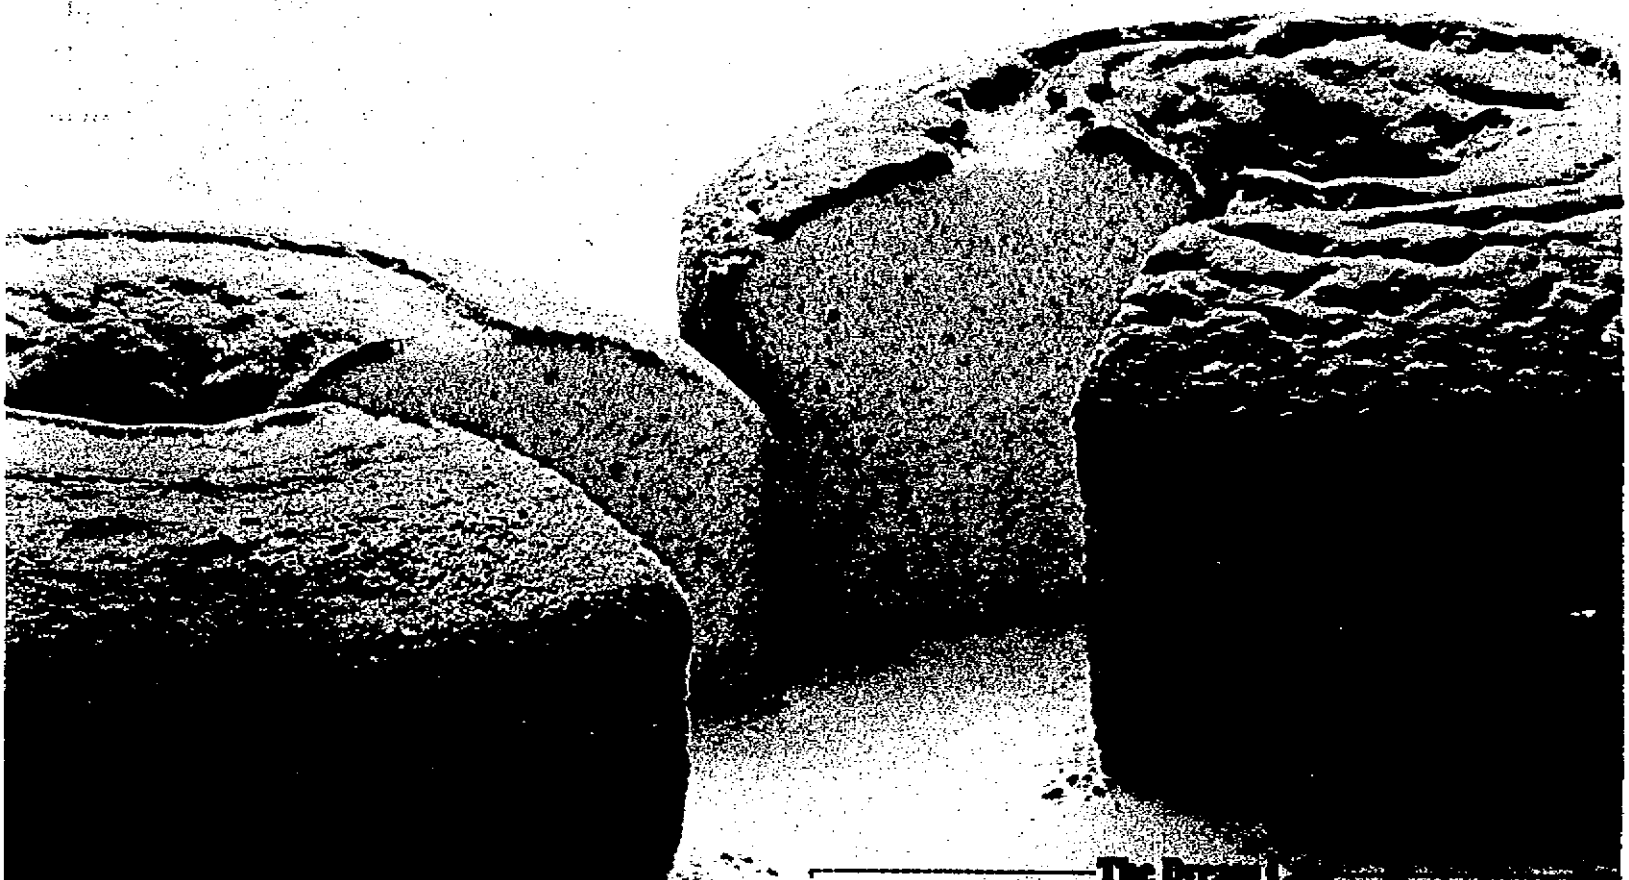

But that's not all. You'll also get a moister cake, with extra moistness you can taste. And a lighter cake, too, with a firm, even, non-crumbly texture. Extra eggs alone can't give you this kind of cake, you need Dream Whip for that extra moistness, height, and texture.

You can bake a Dream Cake in any sort of shape you can think of: cupcakes (they're moister, higher and you get more of them), sheet cakes (real picnic-size!), layer cakes, Bundt cakes... you can even make a skillet cake!

And you can top all these cakes with your favorite frosting, glaze, fruit, syrup, or with confectioners' sugar. You can even make an ice cream roll!

A Dream Cake tastes great, any way you serve it. In fact, the Dream Cake recipe makes your mix cake so much better, you'll be glad it's so much bigger!

Dream up a Dream Cake.

Here's one way to top off a Dream Cake. Now you dream one up!

The Dream Cake

1 package (2-layer size) yellow, white, or devil's food cake mix
1 envelope Dream Whip Topping Mix*
4 eggs
1 cup cold tap water

*Do not whip: use right from envelope.

Combine all ingredients in large bowl of electric mixer. Blend until moistened. Beat at medium speed for 4 minutes. Pour into greased and floured 10" tube pan, and bake at 350° for 45 to 50 minutes. Cool tube cake for 15 minutes in the pan (other cakes for 10 minutes). Then remove from pan and finish cooling on cake rack. Frost, glaze, sprinkle with confectioners' sugar, or top with fruit, syrup or ice cream. A Dream Cake tastes great any way you serve it!

A Dream Cake can be baked in other size pans, as well:
in three 8-inch layer pans, bake for 35 minutes;
in two 9-inch layer pans, bake for 30 minutes;
in one 13 x 9-inch pan, bake for 40 to 45 minutes;
in cupcake pans, bake for about 20 minutes.

For altitudes above 3,500 feet. Prepare Dream Cake as directed, adding 2 tablespoons flour, using a total of 1 cup plus 3 tablespoons water, and baking at 375° for about 5 minutes less or until cake tests done.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

EDITED
by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

SCHOOL BUS TV Teachers in Cayuga County, N.Y., are using television to start kids learning on the way to school.

Since many students spend an hour on the school bus each day, coming and going, Dr. Ernest J. Rookey, director of the Finger Lakes Region Educational Development Center, decided to equip the bus with an Ampex videotape recorder and TV set and transmit educational programs.

"The idea," Dr. Rookey says, "is to take some educational and constructive advantage of travel time."

In addition to showing lessons en route to school, the bus TV system is used in connection with field trips. Returning from visits to science museums, students review via bus TV what they've just seen, thereby reinforcing the learning process.

ADVICE One of Germany's leading heart specialists, Dr. Berthold Kern, claims that obesity, a high cholesterol blood count, and excessive cigarette smoking are not important causes of heart disease.

"The most important causes," Dr. Kern declares, "are excessive agitation and aggravation, and too little rest."

Dr. Kern made his announcement at a conference in Baden-Baden of the International Society for Combating Heart Disease.

He said that in his opinion the $40 billion expended over the past 40 years on research into the causes of heart disease had produced no really proven and practical results. The so-called "coronary theory," which holds that heart attacks are caused by vessel constriction or arteriosclerosis, does not seem particularly valid to him. He maintains that the failure of the heart muscle is what brings on heart disease, noting that almost every heart attack has its roots in the muscle of the left side of the heart. He believes that almost every case could be delayed or corrected by correct treatment.

His beliefs are open to controversy, of course. But according to another notable physician, Dr. Ronald Gibson, chairman of the British Medical Association Council, the best treatment for people subjected to over-stress and overstrain or chronic aggravation is a couple of days in bed.

"Just drop out of things," Dr. Gibson advises. "Pop into bed for a few days and stay there. Relax, read, listen to the radio. It's a safety valve and a good one. Everyone should be able to tell his boss, 'I'm going to bed for a couple of days.'"

MADNESS The Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, of which Gunnar Myrdal is chairman, has released a report on the arms race. Herewith a few of its more startling and depressing revelations:

Every 15 years the military budget for the world doubles.

In 1968 the world spent $159.3 billion for military purposes. Single largest spender was the U.S. with $79.3 billion. The Soviet Union spent $39.8 billion (most Soviet figures are notoriously unreliable).

Together the U.S. and the Soviet Union now spend more than 70 percent of the world total on armaments, armies, etc.

Between 1918 and 1938, the military spent 3.5 percent of the world's resources. Military spending has now increased more than 100 percent to between 7 and 8 percent of the world's resources.

The cost of military research is far greater than the cost of civilian research. The Stockholm Institute claims that in the U.S., for each $100 spent by the military, $62.20 goes for research and development. For each $100 spent for manufacturing, only $7.50 is allocated to research and development.

Unless the Soviet Union and the U.S. reach some sort of arms limitation, Myrdal explains, "the rise in world military spending in the next 20 years will probably be as fast as in the last 20."

SCANDAL IN SPAIN Spanish priests are selling art treasures from their own provincial churches to antique dealers in Madrid, who in turn are re-selling them to wealthy American buyers or local merchants.

The scandalous practice has become so prevalent of late that the Spanish government has called upon the bishops to stop it, and the bishops have called upon the Vatican for additional help.

Spain's Director of Fine Arts, Perez Embid, describes the clandestine sale of church art as "a scandalous contradiction of the spirit and doctrine of the church." He says he has seen chalices, altar pieces, and holy paintings decorating Madrid nightclubs.

The so-called Thieves Market in Madrid, a Sunday shoppers' paradise for American tourists, is overflowing with pulpits, stained-glass windows, wooden statues, and other church artifacts dating back to the 12th century.

While church art is legally considered church property, the government regards it as part of the nation's cultural treasure and claims that, under a decree issued last February, all such art sales must first have the approval of the Directorate of Fine Arts.

Spanish priests will not discuss the matter except to point out that each diocese usually sets up its own local art commission whose members then decide what to sell to whom for how much, and what to keep.

Q. What is meant by the expression, "There never was a Jackie Kennedy?" I've heard it many times, and I don't know what it means.—Olivia Hammer, Watsonville, Calif

A. The expression is used to highlight the difference between the "true" Mrs. Kennedy and the image manufactured by the White House staff and projected by the press when Mrs. Kennedy was the nation's First Lady.

In her White House years, Mrs. Kennedy was given the buildup as a beautiful, selfless, athletic, considerate, intellectual, creative, versatile, civic-minded young woman of superb character, refinement, and taste. She was never depicted as a chain-smoking, extravagant, superficial social butterfly obsessed with her looks and her clothes and many of whose best ideas were the suggestions of friends or White House staff.

In truth, both of these images were extreme. Jacqueline Kennedy's true image lies somewhere in between.

Q. Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany—is he lowering the voting age to 18?—Mindy Erwin, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

A. Yes. In addition, his government will change the age of eligibility to hold public office from 25 to 21.

Q. In every film I've seen her in, Katharine Hepburn wears a kerchief around her neck. Why?—Helen Bernardi, La Junta, Colo.

A. Because she is 60 and her neck is crepey.

Q. Who defined happiness as having a good bank account, a good cook, and a good digestion?—Millie Underwood, Asbury Park, N.J.

A. Jean Jacques Rousseau (1712-78), French author and philosopher.

Q. Was President Richard Nixon telling the nation the truth when he announced at a press conference that we have no combat troops fighting the war in Laos? —P.T.Y., Durham, N.C.

A. Technically he was telling the truth. We have no U.S. ground forces fighting in Laos. But American airmen have been there for years. The truth is that the U.S., through the CIA, is paying a clandestine army of an estimated 40,000 Meo Hill tribesmen to fight the North Vietnamese intruders and the Pathet Lao rebels. In addition to CIA personnel, we have more than 70 assistant military attachés at the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane who are advising the Laotian army.

Q. In a recent Supreme Court decision, the court voted 5-3 that Negroes have the same right as whites to use a community swimming pool or recreation area. How did the court vote individually?—Harvey Ames, Des Moines, Iowa.

A. Justice William O. Douglas wrote the majority opinion. He was supported by Justices Hugo L. Black, William Brennan Jr., Potter Stewart, and Thurgood Marshall.

Dissenting justices were chief Justice Warren Burger, Justices Byron White and John Harlan.

GAIL RENSHAW

Q. Why did Dean Martin get rid of his wife Jeannie for a 22-year-old sexpot, Gail Renshaw? — Louise Rainey, Terre Haute, Ind.

A. Many film stars prefer to marry fans rather than stay with wives who knew them when.

Q. Is it true that Tiny Tim and his manager have been arrested as part of an international smuggling ring?—E. Gersh, Mobile, Ala.

A. On Nov. 20, 1969, the FBI announced the arrest of Joseph Kaufman, 40, on charges of transporting $90,000 in stolen securities to London. Kaufman was once an agent for Tiny Tim, is no more. Tiny, of course, has never been charged with any crime except singing.

Q. The singing group called "The Archies,"—why don't they ever appear in person? Are they for real? —Brenda Hergruder, Port Allen, La.

A. Although Archie albums are best sellers, no formal Archies singing group exists. The songs, written by Don Kirshner, musical director of the Archie Comedy Hour on TV, are sung and played by a changing cast of CBS studio musicians.

Q. Was Harry Truman the first U.S. President to get us involved in Vietnam? What is the truth?—Marsha Lawrence, Syracuse, N.Y.

A. Modern U.S. intervention in Vietnam began in 1946 when Truman was President. Our objective was to help France retain its colonial position in Indochina. Between 1946 and 1954 the U.S. provided $2 billion or approximately 75 percent of the French war expenditure in Vietnam.

In those years, Vietnam was a single country, not divided into North and South Vietnam. The only external aggressors were the French, financed by the U.S. We hoped France could prevent any portion of Vietnam from going Communist, and we were prepared to subsidize the French endlessly.

In 1954, however, the French were defeated at Dienbienphu. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles thereupon tried to get President Eisenhower to send American troops to Vietnam. Eisenhower refused. He agreed to send money and materiel, but he would not commit troops to fight on the mainland of Asia.

His successor, President Kennedy, was less prudent. He sent 16,000 U.S. troops, and President Johnson escalated the number to approximately 540,000. President Nixon will have withdrawn 115,500 by April 15th, 1970.

Q. Is Sargent Shriver considered an outcast by the Kennedy Family? — L. Thompson, Salem, Mass.

A. Sargent Shriver's refusal to back his brother-in-law, Sen. Robert Kennedy, for the Democratic Presidential candidacy in 1968, his support of Lyndon Johnson, the continuity of his ambassadorship under Richard Nixon—these factors have made Shriver suspect in the eyes of the Kennedy apparatus. The Kennedy family, however, still regards him as a member in good standing.

Candied Pound Cake

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Having friends in for coffee and cake can be one of the nicest ways to entertain. Prepare something to make them feel even more welcome. This recipe for Candied Pound Cake will do just fine—it's studded with flecks of ruby-red cranberries, diced, candied fruits and orange peel. A delicious treat!

Cranberry Fruit Loaf

- ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon ground mace
- 1 package (1 lb. 1 oz.) pound cake mix
- 1 cup fresh cranberries, coarsely chopped
- ½ cup mixed, diced, candied fruits
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel

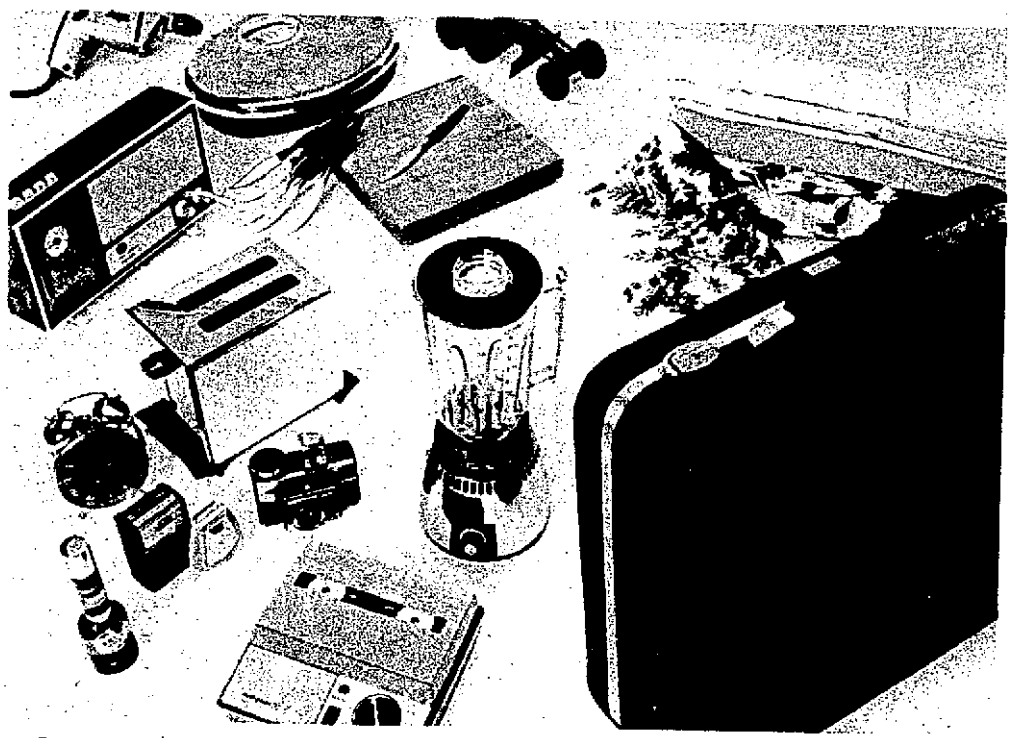

Add spices to pound cake mix then proceed according to package directions. Fold in cranberries and candied fruits and orange peel. Pour mixture into greased and floured 8-inch tube pan. Bake at 325° for 1½ hours or until cake springs back when lightly touched. Let stand for 10 minutes; turn out on rack to cool before slicing.

Student & Son-in-Law: The Two Worlds of David Eisenhower

by David Detweiler

AMHERST, MASS.

President Nixon! It may come as a surprise, but six years ago, when David Eisenhower was a high school junior, he ran for the presidency of the Exeter chapter of Teen Citizens for Johnson-Humphrey. David lost by a wide margin, and many of his classmates at the New England school were amazed he had even tried for the post.

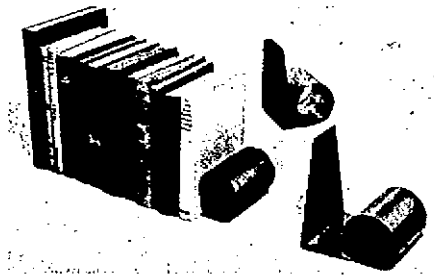

Was David, in true middle-of-the-road tradition, repudiating candidate Barry Goldwater's "extremism?" More probably the tall, gangly grandson of the most popular Republican of the century was just trying to do something on his own—something people didn't expect of him. Since then, Dwight David Eisenhower II's life has become increasingly complicated by what people expect of him.

For instance, the Public David thoroughly enjoyed the tumult of the 1968

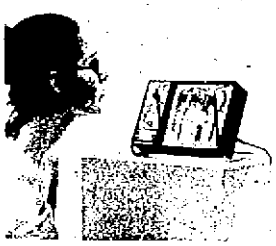

PARADE OF PROGRESS

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

DUAL-ACTION SCREWDRIVER: You can start and snug up any cross-slotted screw with this handy 6"-long tool (above). One end serves for regular screws, the other end for Phillips head. Just position a screw against blades of the tool with sleeve forward, pull back sleeve, and screw is gripped for starting. With clip and protective end cap for carrying in a pocket. $2.50 ppd. Carousel Products, Dept. PP, 74-76 Bridgeman St., Buffalo, N.Y. 14207.

SUN AND HEAT: This new tabletop sun/heat lamp (above) has pushbutton controls for sun and heat, or heat alone. The lightweight, compact unit has an adjustable stand that folds neatly into a carrying handle. A wide-angle reflector assures even coverage. With goggles, instructions: $37.95. Model with automatic timer: $47.95. Norelco, Dept. PP, 100 E. 42 St., New York, N.Y.

TEACHER TOYS: Your preschoolers can learn how to button, lace, etc. with new toy animal and record kits. Each of 6 kits has an animal concentrating on a task—a squirrel who wants to skate but needs skate belts buckled; a puppy with unbuttoned jacket; a rabbit in need of bootlacing; a kangaroo with zippered pouch; a pony with snap-fastened vest; a mouse who must handle locks, latches. Accompanying records guide children in tasks. $3 ea. ppd. Little Learners, Dept. PP, 112 W. Kinzie, Chicago 60610.

BOOKWORM: You can use this expandable bookend (above) for from one book to two dozen. The coil-spring construction provides automatic tension to hold books —and records and tapes— firmly and to allow easy removal. Red, white or gray: $5.95. Deluxe model in teak and stainless: $9.95. Fair & Fancy, Dept. PP, Box 122, Little Falls, N.J.

PRE-GROUTED TILING: Easy way to put up ceramic wall tile is with factory-grouted panels. Each panel consists of nine 4¼" x 4¼" tiles—and because the grout is flexible, you can bend panel at tile joints for application to corners, curved surfaces. Tiles can be cut to fit with standard ceramic tile cutting tools. Many colors, patterns. Carton of 9 panels to cover 10 sq. ft. of wall area: $24.95. Details: Amsterdam Corp., Dept. PP, 41 E. 42 St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

TRASH MASHER: You can compact a whole week's worth of household trash into one small bag with this electric appliance (above) said to be the first major new one since the clothes dryer. Eliminating daily trips to the garbage can, it handles food wastes, bottles, aerosol cans, almost all household items. For details: Whirlpool Corporation, Dept. PP, Benton Harbor, Mich. 49022.

THINK ABOUT DEATH and START TO LIVE!

It is human nature to put off thoughts of death as long as we can.

This is especially true when our years are young, our health is good, and we're having a wonderful time.

But even in this life, the true values and real joys of living come into clear focus only when we face up to the facts of death and ask ourselves: "What does it mean?"

Once we do this, the terrifying specter of death becomes less fearsome. We see it as a teacher, cautioning us to shape our lives in a manner pleasing to God. We see it not as a Grim Reaper, robbing us of our worldly pleasures, but as the golden gateway to God's greatest of all gifts--eternal life.

There are some people, of course, who believe that after this life there is no more. The pure and the sinful, they contend, all meet the same gloomy end of eternal nothingness; there is no judgment, no punishment, no reward. But if our reason did not tell us this is wrong, we have the clearer assurance of God Himself that man shall live on earth, shall eventually meet death, that he shall be judged and, upon that judgment, shall live eternally either in joy — or misery.

This has been the teaching of the age-old Catholic Church since the time of the Apostles. It is a doctrine that compels a Catholic to think of his life in terms of his death. It sounds like a gloomy doctrine to those who dislike to face up to the facts of death and the certainty of divine judgment, but Catholics are inspired rather than depressed by it.

However gloomy the prospect of death may be, Catholics are constantly reminded by the Church of the importance of facing up to it instead of trying to ignore it. In the month of November each year, the thoughts of the faithful are especially directed to the special considerations of that occasion when every human being must take off on that final "flight" to God's vast unknown.

If you would like to know how to think about death, what happens after death, how to think about Heaven, how the Church helps its people at death, what's the right attitude toward death as Catholics see it, write today for our free pamphlet. It will be mailed promptly, and nobody will call on you. Ask for Pamphlet No. PR-53.

No Room at the Top, So Tokyo Goes Underground

by Jane Morse

TOKYO.

If a friend here in the Japanese capital says, "Let's go underground for dinner," don't get the idea that he's kidding about a subversive meal. He just wants to take you down where the action is—beneath the streets of the world's largest city. For Tokyo, where earthquake danger limits the height of buildings, has spread out so far and seen its land prices skyrocket so high that it has nowhere to go but down. So far they've scooped out space for 15 major shopping centers and 43 "streets" and that's just for starters. The friend who suggested dinner might have taken you to Maxim's, an elegant copy of the Paris original, in the third basement of the Sony Building.

Clean filtered air is one of the rewards down under; upstairs Tokyo has the smog of all smogs. Also, you escape the ever-present threat of traffic accidents on the city's bustling streets and usually, you're conveniently right next to or even in a subway station. The Kyobashi station, for example, in downtown Tokyo, has a hotel with fake windows, a bar, restaurant and barbershop.

All sorts of surprises abound in the underground world. At the enormous Shinjuku subway station you drive down a corkscrew turnpike fitted with leaping

Subterranean hotel is feature of a downtown station. The rooms don't have much of a view, but amenities for travelers include a bar, a restaurant and room service.

Ah so, this is Maxim's? Copy of French restaurant is located far below the street. Also underground are a "Fisherman's Wharf" for seafood, and several coffee bars.

Nixon campaign—the whirlwind tours, rallies, and backroom bull-sessions. But the Private David, according to a fellow student at Amherst College, was often fed up at being whisked away from his friends and studies, week in, week out, and offered up as a symbol of his generation, a generation whose more vocal spokesmen have scorned him as not representative of young people at all.

"I feel really sorry for him," says Robert Nathan, an editor of the school newspaper. "I remember in 1968 when the Nixon-Agnew people kept phoning David at the beginning of each week to get him to fly out on a series of campaign appearances. He was annoyed about it. He told them he had agreed to leave on Thursday or Friday and work for the Republican ticket all weekend, but that he was a student, too, and they'd have to understand he couldn't just keep cutting classes."

Praise and Criticism

Few people really understand the contradiction-filled life of David Eisenhower, 21. On one hand the politicos and the press are casting him as a model collegian and quoting him as a voice of campus youth. On the other hand, a large number of students, even at his own college, criticize him severely for his utter loyalty to a father-in-law in the White House.

"Politically he's a 40-year-old man," says one student. "When Amherst had a two-day Moratorium last spring, the president of Amherst sent a letter to Mr. Nixon saying the best way to stop campus unrest would be to do more about the problems the students are bringing up. Then David Eisenhower was quoted as saying he didn't think the letter spoke for the majority of the students here. It's absurd for him to make that statement. It shows how out of touch he is. The great majority of students here agreed with the letter and supported the Moratoriums this fall as well."

Agrees with Agnew

David has made numerous statements which seem untypical of his generation's views. In 1968 he agreed with Spiro Agnew that there is considerable evidence showing the campus protest movements have been infiltrated by Communists. And last year, in a letter to the Amherst school newspaper, he defended Nixon's alliance with Sen. Strom Thurmond at the '68 convention: "Strom Thurmond is second to God with a large segment of the American voters . . . Strom Thurmond held the line with the Southern delegations. Now does that mean you disregard Strom Thurmond and watch the nomination go down the river?"

"He's not his own person," says one radical student at Amherst. "Sure he's entitled to his privacy, but when he takes it upon himself to defend Nixon right down the line, never disagreeing, he has to be open to some criticism."

According to his friends, David gets sick and tired of being constantly criticized. "He's just like anybody else," says Fred Grandy, David's roommate at Exeter and an usher at David and Julie's wedding. "His ideas are his own. He's not supposed to be in the majority, and he resents being made into some kind of model."

Since the days when he wanted to be leader of the Exeter Youth for Johnson-Humphrey, David has gradually become more and more a part of the Establishment, unlike John Laird and Maureen Finch, both children of Cabinet members and both Vietnam war protesters.

In 1962, David's first year at the exclusive Phillips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire, Ike himself dropped in by helicopter for a brief visit with David. The school newspaper article didn't even mention David by name, which was probably all right with David, who was already uncomfortable at being known as General Eisenhower's grandson instead of just himself.

Says it with clothes

An Exeter librarian remembers how David, in seeking an independent identity, would "go into old second-hand shops and buy double-breasted jackets with enormous lapels and parade around in them."

David went out for baseball at Exeter, and made the Junior Varsity his sophomore year. "Duke" (David's nickname) had a good season as pitcher, including a one-hitter against rival school Governor Dummer. He was deeply disappointed, however, that he never made the Varsity, and it was as a senior that David began regularly to play APBA Baseball, the board game based on statistics, which he now enjoys at Amherst.

An additional disappointment came when David failed to be elected one of the senior proctors of his dormitory. Thus, although his marks were good (a solid B average) and he had been successful as a debater in the Student Senate, David was, as one Exeter teacher remembers, "plagued by a certain amount of insecurity."

continued

Candidate Nixon's "secret weapons": son-in-law David and daughters Tricia and Julie. David loved the excitement of campaigning but insisted on attending Amherst classes during the week.

David Eisenhower, about to join second White House family, poses with the Nixons the day after the elections. He and Julie wed a month later, moved into a $95-a-month apartment.

Below-surface life is bustling in Tokyo, with shops and services of all kinds available and the subway nearby. Underground building boom is spreading through city.

water fountains, arrive at a scarce item in Tokyo—a parking lot—and find a few steps away a shopping setup that rivals Macy's in New York.

In the second basement of the Toshiba Building is a "Fisherman's Wharf" crowded with some two dozen pleasant little seafood places. A tunnel that connects the Hibiya and Sanshin Buildings goes high tone with a number of art galleries but remains practical by offering both medical and dental clinics. In between are dark little atmospheric coffee bars where you can sort out your moods.

Probably the most versatile of the underground wonders and certainly the most complicated to build, is the Yaesu Subcenter at the heart of the city where four subway lines link up. Its shopping promenade is the size of three football fields, accommodates 350 stores and there's a long waiting list of merchants who want to get in. In Yaesu you can eat in a different place every day for three months. You can draw money out of a bank and lose it at a stockbroker's office. There are tailors, watch repairmen, furriers, florists and book stores. You can meditate in the Plaza of Water while contemplating eight tanks of rare fish or you can make a nuisance of yourself and get arrested by a cop from the Yaesu subterranean police station.

Under all the commercial activity is a parking lot for 520 cars. And under that is a NASA-type control center. There in the "brains" of the place are TV monitors watching the devices that watch the air—its temperature, moisture and purity. There's no alarm for earthquakes—Tokyo's old nemesis—but the experts feel that the underground would have less problems than the surface in case of tremors. Yaesu also has emergency generators for power and a chemical system for fighting fire.

Constructing the underground when there are existing buildings above can be quite tricky—and expensive. At times the Yaesu crews were permitted to work only three hours a day because much of their activities interfered with the running of the subway. Then there was the problem of encountering unidentified water and gas pipes. Many of the municipal blueprints of the pipe systems were destroyed during World War II bombing raids over Tokyo. Hence, whenever the strange pipes turned up during excavation, work often had to cease while they were traced, identified and dealt with by detour or replacement.

A piece of the action

In addition, there was trouble up topside. A good many neighborhood shopkeepers took to picketing the project, crying "Underground is for moles." They reasoned they'd lose much of their business to the new low level competition. The Yaesu people countered by offering them a piece of the action, a chance to buy stock in the project. There were lots of takers and this had the effect of quieting the complainers.

The Yaesu builders would like to go deeper but after $31 million they ran out of money. They've been on the job for nearly six years and there's still a way to go to the completion target date of December, 1971. Meanwhile, down below business is looking up.

CONTINUED

Family get-together: John Eisenhower, Ambassador to Belgium; wife Barbara; 14-year-old daughter Mary Jean and David. David's father was pleased at David and Julie's decision to marry, wished it had not come quite so early.

David's first college choice was Yale, but he wasn't sure he could get in, and when Amherst offered him early acceptance, David applied in the fall of 1965.

"Leaving Exeter, David had no idea what he wanted to major in or where he wanted to end up, just like the rest of us," remembers a school friend. As it turned out, the future was not to be very different from the past.

Plain David

The first weeks at Amherst were difficult. A classmate remembers how he would introduce himself as "David," leaving off the last name. Unsure of what kind of college career he wanted, David knew only that he wanted it on his own and not as Ike's grandson.

However, that fall another famous name came into David's life. One day a member of a local Republican club got the bright idea to call David and see if he might want to go out with Julie Nixon, then a freshman at nearby Smith college.

David was game and gave the younger Nixon daughter a call and before long they were dating regularly.

As Julie Nixon's husband and an active campaigner for the Nixon-Agnew ticket, David might be expected to defend U.S. Vietnam policy in the classroom, but he shies away from committing himself on such subjects.

Liberal classmates may assume he stands with the Nixon Administration right down the line, but a fellow student in American Government 21, a course in Constitutional Law, says David merely "enjoys discussion and debate for themselves. When he speaks he never tells anyone whether he really believes what he is saying or whether he just enjoys arguing. You can't really tell where he stands."

This may be partly because David feels everything he says is misunderstood by the more radical of his classmates.

Seldom on campus

It is not surprising that David is seen little on the Amherst campus these days. "He comes to class, his singing group's rehearsals, and sometimes shows up at the snack bar," says one acquaintance, "but the school doesn't see him much."

David understandably prefers the quiet home life with Julie in nearby Northampton, where the Eisenhowers live in a $95-a-month suite in a hulking old apartment house near the Smith campus. Their second-hand gray Plymouth Valiant is parked in a side alley. General Eisenhower had been furious to learn that David and Julie were hitchhiking the seven miles between Smith and Amherst, so Mamie sold them the car on credit.

The apartment below David and Julie is manned around the clock by Secret Service men, and a closed-circuit TV keeps an eye on anyone entering or leaving the Eisenhowers' home. Julie is followed everywhere by the agents, but when David goes to class or to a tri-weekly rehearsal of his singing group, the Zymbyes, he is alone.

According to their friends, David is more self-confident now that he's married, and he and Julie live a happy private life, sometimes entertaining people for dinner or taking in a movie, and frequently visiting Washington on the weekends, when David bowls or watches the football games with the President.

David copes with a Navajo Indian belt given him when he and Julie dedicated a Fairchild plant in Shiprock, N. Mex., last fall. An attractive couple and a political dream marriage, the young Eisenhowers are always in demand.

Still, the public world will not leave Julie and David alone. During last October's Moratorium, when they took off for the White House, the young couple were sent a telegram by the Smith-Amherst Moratorium Committee, regretting their absence: "Rational discussion, not trouble expected," it read. "Ask you reconsider your decision to stay away."

Angry reply

David was sufficiently irked to reply in the college newspaper that "had a threat existed we would have felt an obligation to remain" and object "to the hypocrisy in attempting to cast us as opposing free and open exchange."

Ever sensitive to criticism, David has admitted that he is not in the "majority" at his school. This still bothers him, torn as he is between a wish to be left completely alone and an attraction to politics that keeps him in the limelight.

Now, in his senior year and likely to be drafted (David's lottery number is 30), he has expressed an interest in law school. David may follow his grandfather's advice and attend Naval Officer's Candidate School—a three-year commitment. A friend says David has already taken and passed his Naval OCS physical.

When he hands in his senior thesis on the politics of the 1968 campaign, David will face uncertainty once more, not knowing exactly what he wants or will be able to do. In this respect, Dwight David Eisenhower II will be squarely among the majority of normal, average American youths.

YOUR CHILD MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS
1 OUT OF 3 DOES

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms...ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then — Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . small, easy-to-take tablets . . . special sizes for children and adults.

Now...Plastic Cream Revolutionizes Denture Wearing

For the first time, science now offers a unique plastic cream that holds false teeth—both "uppers" and "lowers"—as they've never been held before. It forms an elastic membrane that actually holds dentures to mouth and gum surfaces!

It's FIXODENT—a revolutionary discovery for daily home use. So different it's protected by U.S. Patent #3,003,988.

FIXODENT not only holds dentures firmer, but it holds them more comfortably, too. It's so elastic you may bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally. You may even eat and enjoy apples, steak, and corn-on-the-cob again.

The special pencil-point dispenser lets you put FIXODENT exactly where it's needed. Resists oozing over and gagging.

Just one application may last round-the-clock. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get easy-to-use FIXODENT Denture Adhesive Cream at all drug counters.

Get 11 mysteries for $1.00, including the brand new Perry Mason

Get 4 double volumes, each with a Perry Mason and a Lam-Cool mystery (which Erle Stanley Gardner writes as A. A. Fair).

1. The Case of the Careless Cupid by Gardner.
A well-to-do widow is doomed to the gas chamber . . . unless Perry nails the killer who put arsenic in her husband's last meal. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

2. Traps Need Fresh Bait by A. A. Fair. Donald Lam investigates a want ad for an accident witness. But the ad really wants a patsy—for a murder. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

3. The Case of the Queenly Contestant by Gardner.
An aging beauty queen involves Perry in a $2,000,000 estate, blackmail and a locked-room murder. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

4. Widows Wear Weeds by A. A. Fair. The police say Lam put that knife in Calvert's back. They've got witnesses to prove it. (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

5. The Case of the Beautiful Beggar by Gardner.
Who murdered Daphne? Perry Mason can't figure it out. Then Daphne seems to make a drastic recovery! (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

6. Up For Grabs by A. A. Fair. Nurse Doon is terrified. She knows the patient who "left" the hospital was dead! (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

7. The Case of the Worried Waitress by Gardner.
Perry's pretty client is charged with murderous assault. The only one who can save her is blind! (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

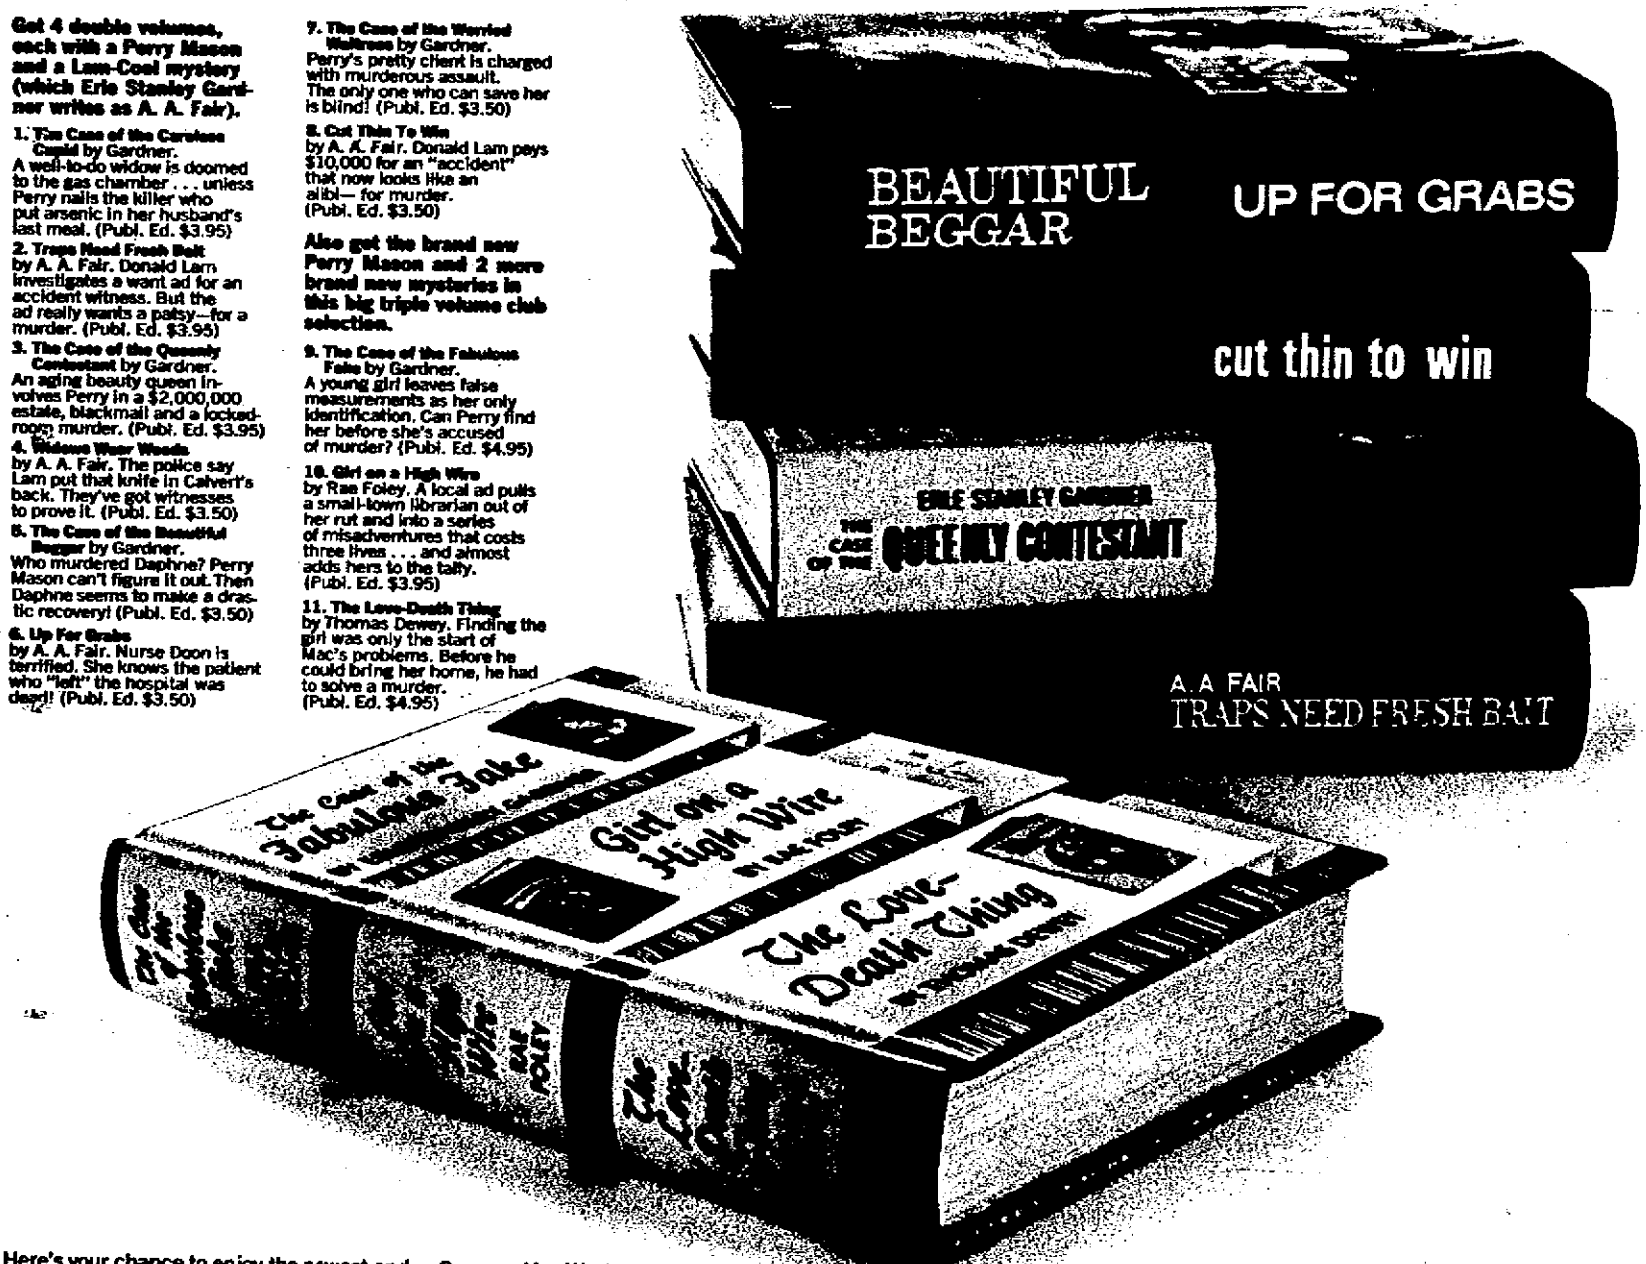

8. Cut Thin To Win by A. A. Fair. Donald Lam pays $10,000 for an "accident" that now looks like an alibi— for murder. (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

Also get the brand new Perry Mason and 2 more brand new mysteries in this big triple volume club selection.

9. The Case of the Fabulous Fake by Gardner.
A young girl leaves false measurements as her only identification. Can Perry find her before she's accused of murder? (Publ. Ed. $4.95)

10. Girl on a High Wire by Rae Foley. A local ad pulls a small-town librarian out of her rut and into a series of misadventures that costs three lives . . . and almost adds hers to the tally. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

11. The Love-Death Thing by Thomas Dewey. Finding the girl was only the start of Mac's problems. Before he could bring her home, he had to solve a murder. (Publ. Ed. $4.95)

Here's your chance to enjoy the newest and best by Erle Stanley Gardner. You'll get Perry Mason's very latest case together with four more Perry Masons and four Donald Lam-Bertha Cool mysteries (by Gardner writing as A. A. Fair). And we'll add brand new spellbinders by Rae Foley and Thomas Dewey for good measure!

That's 11 full-length mysteries, bound into 5 convenient hard-bound volumes. In the publishers' original editions, these 11 mysteries cost $43.20. But as a new member, they're yours for $1 to introduce you to the advantages of membership in the Detective Book Club.

Out of the 300 or more new detective books that come out every year, the Club selects the very cream of the crop. Outstanding authors like Erle Stanley Gardner, Agatha Christie, Mignon G. DAVID EISENHOWER

CONTINUED

Family get-together: John Eisenhower, Ambassador to Belgium; wife Barbara; 14-year-old daughter Mary Jean and David. David's father was pleased at David and Julie's decision to marry, wished it had not come quite so early.

David's first college choice was Yale, but he wasn't sure he could get in, and when Amherst offered him early acceptance, David applied in the fall of 1965.

"Leaving Exeter, David had no idea what he wanted to major in or where he wanted to end up, just like the rest of us," remembers a school friend. As it turned out, the future was not to be very different from the past.

Plain David

The first weeks at Amherst were difficult. A classmate remembers how he would introduce himself as "David," leaving off the last name. Unsure of what kind of college career he wanted, David knew only that he wanted it on his own and not as Ike's grandson.

However, that fall another famous name came into David's life. One day a member of a local Republican club got the bright idea to call David and see if he might want to go out with Julie Nixon, then a freshman at nearby Smith college.

David was game and gave the younger Nixon daughter a call and before long they were dating regularly.

As Julie Nixon's husband and an active campaigner for the Nixon-Agnew ticket, David might be expected to defend U.S. Vietnam policy in the classroom, but he shies away from committing himself on such subjects.

Liberal classmates may assume he stands with the Nixon Administration right down the line, but a fellow student in American Government 21, a course in Constitutional Law, says David merely "enjoys discussion and debate for themselves. When he speaks he never tells anyone whether he really believes what he is saying or whether he just enjoys arguing. You can't really tell where he stands."

This may be partly because David feels everything he says is misunderstood by the more radical of his classmates.

Seldom on campus

It is not surprising that David is seen little on the Amherst campus these days. "He comes to class, his singing group's rehearsals, and sometimes shows up at the snack bar," says one acquaintance, "but the school doesn't see him much."

David understandably prefers the quiet home life with Julie in nearby Northampton, where the Eisenhowers live in a $95-a-month suite in a hulking old apartment house near the Smith campus. Their second-hand gray Plymouth Valiant is parked in a side alley. General Eisenhower had been furious to learn that David and Julie were hitchhiking the seven miles between Smith and Amherst, so Mamie sold them the car on credit.

The apartment below David and Julie is manned around the clock by Secret Service men, and a closed-circuit TV keeps an eye on anyone entering or leaving the Eisenhowers' home. Julie is followed everywhere by the agents, but when David goes to class or to a tri-weekly rehearsal of his singing group, the Zymbyes, he is alone.

According to their friends, David is more self-confident now that he's married, and he and Julie live a happy private life, sometimes entertaining people for dinner or taking in a movie, and frequently visiting Washington on the weekends, when David bowls or watches the football games with the President.

Still, the public world will not leave Julie and David alone. During last October's Moratorium, when they took off for the White House, the young couple were sent a telegram by the Smith-Amherst Moratorium Committee, regretting their absence: "Rational discussion, not trouble expected," it read. "Ask you reconsider your decision to stay away."

David copes with a Navajo Indian belt given him when he and Julie dedicated a Fairchild plant in Shiprock, N. Mex., last fall. An attractive couple and a political dream marriage, the young Eisenhowers are always in demand.

Angry reply

David was sufficiently irked to reply in the college newspaper that "had a threat existed we would have felt an obligation to remain" and object "to the hypocrisy in attempting to cast us as opposing free and open exchange."

Ever sensitive to criticism, David has admitted that he is not in the "majority" at his school. This still bothers him, torn as he is between a wish to be left completely alone and an attraction to politics that keeps him in the limelight.

Now, in his senior year and likely to be drafted (David's lottery number is 30), he has expressed an interest in law school. David may follow his grandfather's advice and attend Naval Officer's Candidate School—a three-year commitment. A friend says David has already taken and passed his Naval OCS physical.

When he hands in his senior thesis on the politics of the 1968 campaign, David will face uncertainty once more, not knowing exactly what he wants or will be able to do. In this respect, Dwight David Eisenhower II will be squarely among the majority of normal, average American youths.

All Army recruits get these earplugs, but GI's say they hurt and wearing them is not enforced. Meanwhile the Army continues to pay pensions for loss of hearing.

GI Deafness

Earmuffs could protect hearing and save the Army money

The U.S. Army has no standard policy of protecting a soldier's hearing.

One result is that more than half the 500,000 GI's who undergo combat training each year, suffer enough hearing loss so that they could be barred from combat.

A study by two physicians from the Army's Walter Reed Hospital reveals that 52.7 percent of the troops permanently assigned at Fort Jackson, S.C., suffered hearing losses sufficient to remove them from the very jobs they had trained for. An additional 23.5 percent of the men also suffered impaired hearing but in lesser degree.

The major cause of hearing loss in troops is the noise made by tanks, helicopters, jets, and artillery against which soldiers are not adequately protected.

Modern Medicine, a journal widely circulated to physicians, declares, "At the Army's tank-training school at Fort Knox, Ky., partial deafness is said to be matter-of-factly accepted." And Dr. Thomas Nilges, director of the Walter Reed Audiology and Speech Center, says, "I estimate the chances that a soldier will need a hearing aid after 20 years are ten times greater than for a civilian."

The Veterans Administration reports that it currently pays approximately 60,000 veterans about $3.3 million per month in pensions for hearing impairments.

The Army issues earplugs to all recruits, but their wearing is not actively enforced. Besides, the plugs are not individually fitted by trained technicians or doctors. Many of the troops complain that the earplugs hurt them, especially when worn within sound range of firing cannon. Many soldiers substitute cigarette filters for GI earplugs. But the filters offer scant protection.

According to experts, the best protection is afforded by the large earmuffs used by ground and maintenance crews at commerical airports. This type of ear protection is issued to soldiers at Fort Knox, home of the armored divisions, after the men have suffered a hearing loss, but not before.

A matter of cost

Earmuffs cost $6 a pair, and according to one Fort Knox spokesman, "They just cost too damn much to be handed out to every GI. We loan them to the men when they go through our 20 mm. firing range, because the noise is something fierce, but after that, we take the earmuffs back. Unless of course, the poor fella is already hard of hearing. We don't want him to get worse."

Thus far, 1761 veterans of the war in Vietnam are receiving $81,450 per month for damage done to their hearing while in the service. It would have been far more sensible for our Army, richest in the world, to have equipped each of these men with a pair of $6 earmuffs.

LLOYD SHEARER

Experts say that the large earmuffs worn by ground crews at commercial airports are the best protection against noise.

My Favorite Jokes

by Jack Cassidy

EDITOR'S NOTE: Recently, Jack Cassidy played his first Broadway comedy, The Mundy Scheme, after a long career as a top star in musicals. He's as well known away from the New York stage, thanks to dozens of television appearances as a guest on the major talk shows as well as in such series as Bewitched, I Spy, That Girl, as well as his own series for CBS-TV, He and She.

Cassidy has appeared in such Broadway musicals as Maggie Flynn, in which he co-starred with his wife Shirley Jones last season; She Loves Me, for which he won the Tony Award; Superman, and Fade Out—Fade In with Carol Burnett. He has recorded the cast albums for his musical productions and with Shirley Jones has made albums of Marriage Type Love, Speaking of Love and Love from Hollywood.

The Cassidy's make their home in Beverly Hills, Calif., with their three sons, Shaun, 10; Patrick, 7, and Ryan, 3. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

"I can't leave the theater," the actor shouted. "I'm married to it!"
"Then," his wife asked, "why don't you sue it for non-support?"

A parking place is the spot that always disappears when you make a U-turn.

I hung the picture—because I couldn't locate the artist.

"You've been acquitted on the charge of bigamy," the judge said. "You can go home now."
"But, your Honor, sir, which home?"

Wife: "I dreamed you bought me a fur coat."
Husband: "Well, go back to sleep and wear it in good health."

A husband returned home one night in a rather inebriated state and handed his wife his pay envelope. She opened it, looked inside and shouted, "This is only half your salary. Where's the rest of it?" "I bought something for the house," he replied. "Oh, how nice," smiled the wife, "what was it you bought?" "A round of drinks," he replied.

Two elderly, well-fixed gentlemen were sitting at their club bar puffing on cigars. Finally one of the men remarked, "Do you think Rex Harrison is his real name?" The other gentleman, mulling over the question, puffed on his cigar a few times and matter-of-factly replied, "Do I think whose real name is Rex Harrison?"

An airplane is the only place where you can't walk out on a dull movie.

A funny thing happened at this drive-in theater—a fellow drove in alone.

The noisy diner was banging on the table with his cutlery. "The service here is lousy," he bellowed. "Look at my glass, it's empty. What've I got to do to get some water?"
The quiet waiter leaned over and whispered, "Why don't you set fire to yourself?"

Judge: "Patrick Donovan, you've been brought here for drinkin'."
Patrick: "Well, your honor, what are we waitin' fer, let's get started."

"My brother ran a hundred yards in six seconds."
"But that's impossible. . . . the world's record is more than nine seconds."
"My brother knows a short cut."

The Dream Cake

New miracle recipe for a higher, moister mix cake.

We came up with this great new recipe for a better cake. Just add Dream Whip,® two extra eggs, and only one cup of water to your favorite cake mix (see recipe below), and you'll get a cake that's actually bigger!

But that's not all. You'll also get a moister cake, with extra moistness you can taste. And a lighter cake, too, with a firm, even, non-crumbly texture. Extra eggs alone can't give you this kind of cake, you need Dream Whip for that extra moistness, height, and texture.

You can bake a Dream Cake in any sort of shape you can think of: cupcakes (they're moister, higher and you get more of them), sheet cakes (real picnic-size!), layer cakes, Bundt cakes... you can even make a skillet cake!

And you can top all these cakes with your favorite frosting, glaze, fruit, syrup, or with confectioners' sugar. You can even make an ice cream roll!

A Dream Cake tastes great, any way you serve it. In fact, the Dream Cake recipe makes your mix cake so much better, you'll be glad it's so much bigger!

Dream up a Dream Cake.

The Dream Cake

1 package (2-layer size) yellow, white, or devil's food cake mix
1 envelope Dream Whip Topping Mix*
4 eggs
1 cup cold tap water
*Do not whip: use right from envelope.

Combine all ingredients in large bowl of electric mixer. Blend until moistened. Beat at medium speed for 4 minutes. Pour into greased and floured 10" tube pan, and bake at 350° for 45 to 50 minutes. Cool tube cake for 15 minutes in the pan (other cakes for 10 minutes). Then remove from pan and finish cooling on cake rack. Frost, glaze, sprinkle with confectioners' sugar, or top with fruit, syrup or ice cream. A Dream Cake tastes great any way you serve it!

A Dream Cake can be baked in other size pans, as well:
in three 8-inch layer pans, bake for 35 minutes;
in two 9-inch layer pans, bake for 30 minutes;
in one 13 x 9-inch pan, bake for 40 to 45 minutes;
in cupcake pans, bake for about 20 minutes.

For altitudes above 3,500 feet, Prepare Dream Cake as directed, adding 2 tablespoons flour, using a total of 1 cup plus 3 tablespoons water, and baking at 375° for about 5 minutes less or until cake tests done.

Here's one way to top off a Dream Cake. Now you dream one up!

SCHOOL BUS TV Teachers in Cayuga County, N.Y., are using television to start kids learning on the way to school.

Since many students spend an hour on the school bus each day, coming and going, Dr. Ernest J. Rookey, director of the Finger Lakes Region Educational Development Center, decided to equip the bus with an Ampex videotape recorder and TV set and transmit educational programs.

"The idea," Dr. Rookey says, "is to take some educational and constructive advantage of travel time."

In addition to showing lessons en route to school, the bus TV system is used in connection with field trips. Returning from visits to science museums, students review via bus TV what they've just seen, thereby reinforcing the learning process.

ADVICE One of Germany's leading heart specialists, Dr. Berthold Kern, claims that obesity, a high cholesterol blood count, and excessive cigarette smoking are not important causes of heart disease.

"The most important causes," Dr. Kern declares, "are excessive agitation and aggravation, and too little rest."

Dr. Kern made his announcement at a conference in Baden-Baden of the International Society for Combating Heart Disease.

He said that in his opinion the $40 billion expended over the past 40 years on research into the causes of heart disease had produced no really proven and practical results. The so-called "coronary theory," which holds that heart attacks are caused by vessel constriction or arteriosclerosis, does not seem particularly valid to him. He maintains that the failure of the heart muscle is what brings on heart disease, noting that almost every heart attack has its roots in the muscle of the left side of the heart. He believes that almost every case could be delayed or corrected by correct treatment.

His beliefs are open to controversy, of course. But according to another notable physician, Dr. Ronald Gibson, chairman of the British Medical Association Council, the best treatment for people subjected to over-stress and overstrain or chronic aggravation is a couple of days in bed.

"Just drop out of things," Dr. Gibson advises. "Pop into bed for a few days and stay there. Relax, read, listen to the radio. It's a safety valve and a good one. Everyone should be able to tell his boss, 'I'm going to bed for a couple of days.'"

MADNESS The Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, of which Gunnar Myrdal is chairman, has released a report on the arms race. Herewith a few of its more startling and depressing revelations:

Every 15 years the military budget for the world doubles.

In 1968 the world spent $159.3 billion for military purposes. Single largest spender was the U.S. with $79.3 billion. The Soviet Union spent $39.8 billion (most Soviet figures are notoriously unreliable).

Together the U.S. and the Soviet Union now spend more than 70 percent of the world total on armaments, armies, etc.

Between 1918 and 1938 the military spent 3.5 percent of the world's resources. Military spending has now increased more than 100 percent to between 7 and 8 percent of the world's resources.

The cost of military research is far greater than the cost of civilian research. The Stockholm Institute claims that in the U.S., for each $100 spent by the military, $62.20 goes for research and development. For each $100 spent for manufacturing, only $7.50 is allocated to research and development.

Unless the Soviet Union and the U.S. reach some sort of arms limitation, Myrdal explains, "the rise in world military spending in the next 20 years will probably be as fast as in the last 20."

SCANDAL IN SPAIN Spanish priests are selling art treasures from their own provincial churches to antique dealers in Madrid, who in turn are re-selling them to wealthy American buyers or local merchants.

The scandalous practice has become so prevalent of late that the Spanish government has called upon the bishops to stop it, and the bishops have called upon the Vatican for additional help.

Spain's Director of Fine Arts, Perez Embid, describes the clandestine sale of church art as "a scandalous contradiction of the spirit and doctrine of the church." He says he has seen chalices, altar pieces, and holy paintings decorating Madrid nightclubs.

The so-called Thieves Market in Madrid, a Sunday shoppers' paradise for American tourists, is overflowing with pulpits, stained-glass windows, wooden statues, and other church artifacts dating back to the 12th century.

While church art is legally considered church property, the government regards it as part of the nation's cultural treasure and claims that, under a decree issued last February, all such art sales must first have the approval of the Directorate of Fine Arts.

Spanish priests will not discuss the matter except to point out that each diocese usually sets up its own local art commission whose members then decide what to sell to whom for how much, and what to keep.

Candied Pound Cake

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Having friends in for coffee and cake can be one of the nicest ways to entertain. Prepare something to make them feel even more welcome. This recipe for Candied Pound Cake will do just fine—it's studded with flecks of ruby-red cranberries, diced, candied fruits and orange peel. A delicious treat!

Cranberry Fruit Loaf

- ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon ground mace
- 1 package (1 lb. 1 oz.) pound cake mix
- 1 cup fresh cranberries, coarsely chopped
- ½ cup mixed, diced, candied fruits
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel

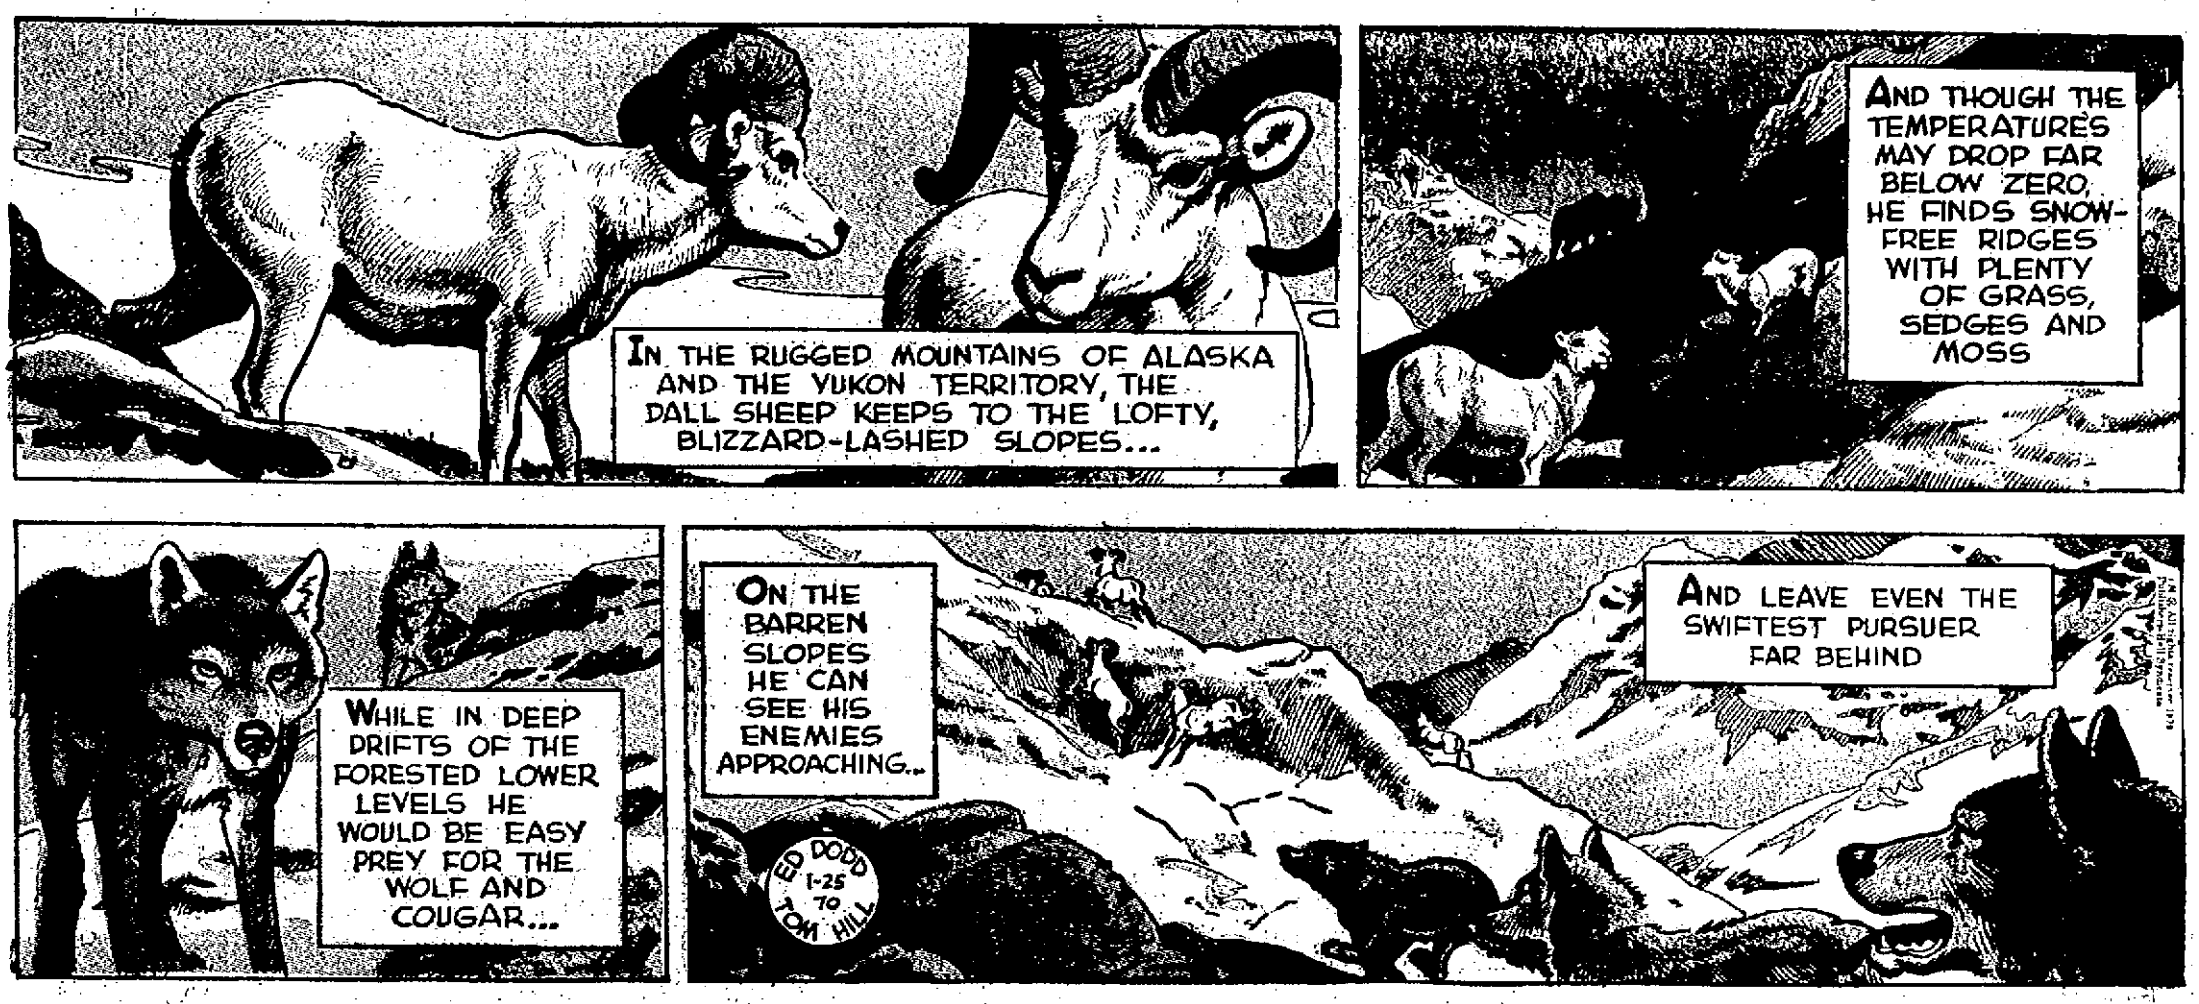

Add spices to pound cake mix then proceed according to package directions. Fold in cranberries and candied fruits and orange peel. Pour mixture into greased and floured 8-inch tube pan. Bake at 325° for 1½ hours or until cake springs back when lightly touched. Let stand for 10 minutes; turn out on rack to cool before slicing.

PARADE OF PROGRESS

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

DUAL-ACTION SCREWDRIVER: You can start and snug up any cross-slotted screw with this handy 6"-long tool (above). One end serves for regular screws, the other end for Phillips head. Just position a screw against blades of the tool with sleeve forward, pull back sleeve, and screw is gripped for starting. With clip and protective end cap for carrying in a pocket. $2.50 ppd. Carousel Products, Dept. PP, 74-76 Bridgeman St., Buffalo, N.Y. 14207.

SUN AND HEAT: This new tabletop sun/heat lamp (above) has pushbutton controls for sun and heat, or heat alone. The lightweight, compact unit has an adjustable stand that folds neatly into a carrying handle. A wide-angle reflector assures even coverage. With goggles, instructions: $37.95. Model with automatic timer: $47.95. Norelco, Dept. PP, 100 E. 42 St., New York, N.Y.

TEACHER TOYS: Your preschoolers can learn how to button, lace, etc. with new toy animal and record kits. Each of 6 kits has an animal concentrating on a task—a squirrel who wants to skate but needs skate belts buckled; a puppy with unbuttoned jacket; a rabbit in need of bootlacing; a kangaroo with zippered pouch; a pony with snap-fastened vest; a mouse who must handle locks, latches. Accompanying records guide children in tasks. $3 ea. ppd. Little Learners, Dept. PP, 112 W. Kinzie, Chicago 60610.

BOOKWORM: You can use this expandable bookend (above) for from one book to two dozen. The coil-spring construction provides automatic tension to hold books—and records and tapes—firmly and to allow easy removal. Red, white or gray: $5.95. Deluxe model in teak and stainless: $9.95. Fair & Fancy, Dept. PP, Box 122, Little Falls, N.J.

PRE-GROUTED TILING: Easy way to put up ceramic wall tile is with factory-grouted panels. Each panel consists of nine 4¼" x 4¼" tiles—and because the grout is flexible, you can bend panel at tile joints for application to corners, curved surfaces. Tiles can be cut to fit with standard ceramic tile cutting tools. Many colors, patterns. Carton of 9 panels to cover 10 sq. ft. of wall area: $24.95. Details: Amsterdam Corp., Dept. PP, 41 E. 42 St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

TRASH MASHER: You can compact a whole week's worth of household trash into one small bag with this electric appliance (above) said to be the first major new one since the clothes dryer. Eliminating daily trips to the garbage can, it handles food wastes, bottles, aerosol cans, almost all household items. For details: Whirlpool Corporation, Dept. PP, Benton Harbor, Mich. 49022.

THINK ABOUT DEATH and START TO LIVE!

It is human nature to put off thoughts of death as long as we can.

This is especially true when our years are young, our health is good, and we're having a wonderful time.

But even in this life, the true values and real joys of living come into clear focus only when we face up to the facts of death and ask ourselves: "What does it mean?"

Once we do this, the terrifying specter of death becomes less fearsome. We see it as a teacher, cautioning us to shape our lives in a manner pleasing to God. We see it not as a Grim Reaper, robbing us of our worldly pleasures, but as the golden gateway to God's greatest of all gifts—eternal life.

There are some people, of course, who believe that after this life there is no more. The pure and the sinful, they contend, all meet the same gloomy end of eternal nothingness; there is no judgment, no punishment, no reward. But if our reason did not tell us this is wrong, we have the clearer assurance of God Himself that man shall live on earth, shall eventually meet death, that he shall be judged and, upon that judgment, shall live eternally either in joy—or misery.

This has been the teaching of the age-old Catholic Church since the time of the Apostles. It is a doctrine that compels a Catholic to think of his life in terms of his death. It sounds like a gloomy doctrine to those who dislike to face up to the facts of death and the certainty of divine judgment, but Catholics are inspired rather than depressed by it.

However gloomy the prospect of death may be, Catholics are constantly reminded by the Church of the importance of facing up to it instead of trying to ignore it. In the month of November each year, the thoughts of the faithful are especially directed to the special considerations of that occasion when every human being must take off on that final "flight" to God's vast unknown.

If you would like to know how to think about death, what happens after death, how to think about Heaven, how the Church helps its people at death, what's the right attitude toward death as Catholics see it, write today for our free pamphlet. It will be mailed promptly, and nobody will call on you. Ask for Pamphlet No. PR-53.

No Room at the Top, So Tokyo Goes Underground

by Jane Morse

TOKYO.

If a friend here in the Japanese capital says, "Let's go underground for dinner," don't get the idea that he's kidding about a subversive meal. He just wants to take you down where the action is—beneath the streets of the world's largest city. For Tokyo, where earthquake danger limits the height of buildings, has spread out so far and seen its land prices skyrocket so high that it has nowhere to go but down. So far they've scooped out space for 15 major shopping centers and 43 "streets" and that's just for starters. The friend who suggested dinner might have taken you to Maxim's, an elegant copy of the Paris original, in the third basement of the Sony Building.

Clean filtered air is one of the rewards down under; upstairs Tokyo has the smog of all smogs. Also, you escape the ever-present threat of traffic accidents on the city's bustling streets and usually, you're conveniently right next to or even in a subway station. The Kyobashi station, for example, in downtown Tokyo, has a hotel with fake windows, a bar, restaurant and barbershop.

All sorts of surprises abound in the underground world. At the enormous Shinjuku subway station you drive down a corkscrew turnpike fitted with leaping

Subterranean hotel is feature of a downtown station. The rooms don't have much of a view, but amenities for travelers include a bar, a restaurant and room service.

Ah so, this is Maxim's? Copy of French restaurant is located far below the street. Also underground are a "Fisherman's Wharf" for seafood, and several coffee bars.

Below-surface life is bustling in Tokyo, with shops and services of all kinds available and the subway nearby. Underground building boom is spreading through city.

water fountains, arrive at a scarce item in Tokyo—a parking lot—and find a few steps away a shopping setup that rivals Macy's in New York.

In the second basement of the Toshiba Building is a "Fisherman's Wharf" crowded with some two dozen pleasant little seafood places. A tunnel that connects the Hibiya and Sanshin Buildings goes high tone with a number of art galleries but remains practical by offering both medical and dental clinics. In between are dark little atmospheric coffee bars where you can sort out your moods.

Probably the most versatile of the underground wonders and certainly the most complicated to build, is the Yaesu Subcenter at the heart of the city where four subway lines link up. Its shopping promenade is the size of three football fields, accommodates 350 stores and there's a long waiting list of merchants who want to get in. In Yaesu you can eat in a different place every day for three months. You can draw money out of a bank and lose it at a stockbroker's office. There are tailors, watch repairmen, furriers, florists and book stores. You can meditate in the Plaza of Water while contemplating eight tanks of rare fish or you can make a nuisance of yourself and get arrested by a cop from the Yaesu subterranean police station.

Under all the commercial activity is a parking lot for 520 cars. And under that is a NASA-type control center. There in the "brains" of the place are TV monitors watching the devices that watch the air—its temperature, moisture and purity. There's no alarm for earthquakes—Tokyo's old nemesis—but the experts feel that the underground would have less problems than the surface in case of tremors. Yaesu also has emergency generators for power and a chemical system for fighting fire.

Constructing the underground when there are existing buildings above can be quite tricky—and expensive. At times the Yaesu crews were permitted to work only three hours a day because much of their activities interfered with the running of the subway. Then there was the problem of encountering unidentified water and gas pipes. Many of the municipal blueprints of the pipe systems were destroyed during World War II bombing raids over Tokyo. Hence, whenever the strange pipes turned up during excavation, work often had to cease while they were traced, identified and dealt with by detour or replacement.

A piece of the action

In addition, there was trouble up topside. A good many neighborhood shopkeepers took to picketing the project, crying "Underground is for moles." They reasoned they'd lose much of their business to the new low level competition. The Yaesu people countered by offering them a piece of the action, a chance to buy stock in the project. There were lots of takers and this had the effect of quieting the complainers.

The Yaesu builders would like to go deeper but after $31 million they ran out of money. They've been on the job for nearly six years and there's still a way to go to the completion target date of December, 1971. Meanwhile, down below business is looking up.

PIN-WORMS
1 OUT OF 3 DOES

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms...ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then — Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Now...Plastic Cream Revolutionizes Denture Wearing

For the first time, science now offers a unique plastic cream that holds false teeth—both "uppers" and "lowers"—as they've never been held before: It forms an elastic membrane that actually holds dentures to mouth and gum surfaces!

It's FIXODENT—a revolutionary discovery for daily home use. So different it's protected by U.S. Patent #3,003,988.

FIXODENT not only holds dentures firmer, but it holds them more comfortably, too. It's so elastic you may bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally. You may even eat and enjoy apples, steak, and corn-on-the-cob again.

The special pencil-point dispenser lets you put FIXODENT exactly where it's needed. Resists oozing over and gagging.

Just one application may last round-the-clock. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get easy-to-use FIXODENT Denture Adhesive Cream at all drug counters.

Get 4 double volumes, each with a Perry Mason and a Lam-Cool mystery (which Erle Stanley Gardner writes as A. A. Fair).

1. The Case of the Careless Cupid by Gardner. A well-to-do widow is doomed to the gas chamber . . . unless Perry nails the killer who put arsenic in her husband's last meal. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

2. Traps Need Fresh Bait by A. A. Fair. Donald Lam investigates a want ad for an accident witness. But the ad really wants a patsy—for a murder. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

3. The Case of the Queenly Contestant by Gardner. An aging beauty queen involves Perry in a $2,000,000 estate, blackmail and a locked-room murder. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

4. Widows Wear Weeds by A. A. Fair. The police say Lam put that knife in Calvert's back. They've got witnesses to prove it. (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

5. The Case of the Beautiful Beggar by Gardner. Who murdered Daphne? Perry Mason can't figure it out. Then Daphne seems to make a drastic recovery! (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

6. Up For Grabs by A. A. Fair. Nurse Doon is terrified. She knows the patient who "left" the hospital was dead! (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

7. The Case of the Worried Waitress by Gardner. Perry's pretty client is charged with murderous assault. The only one who can save her is blind! (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

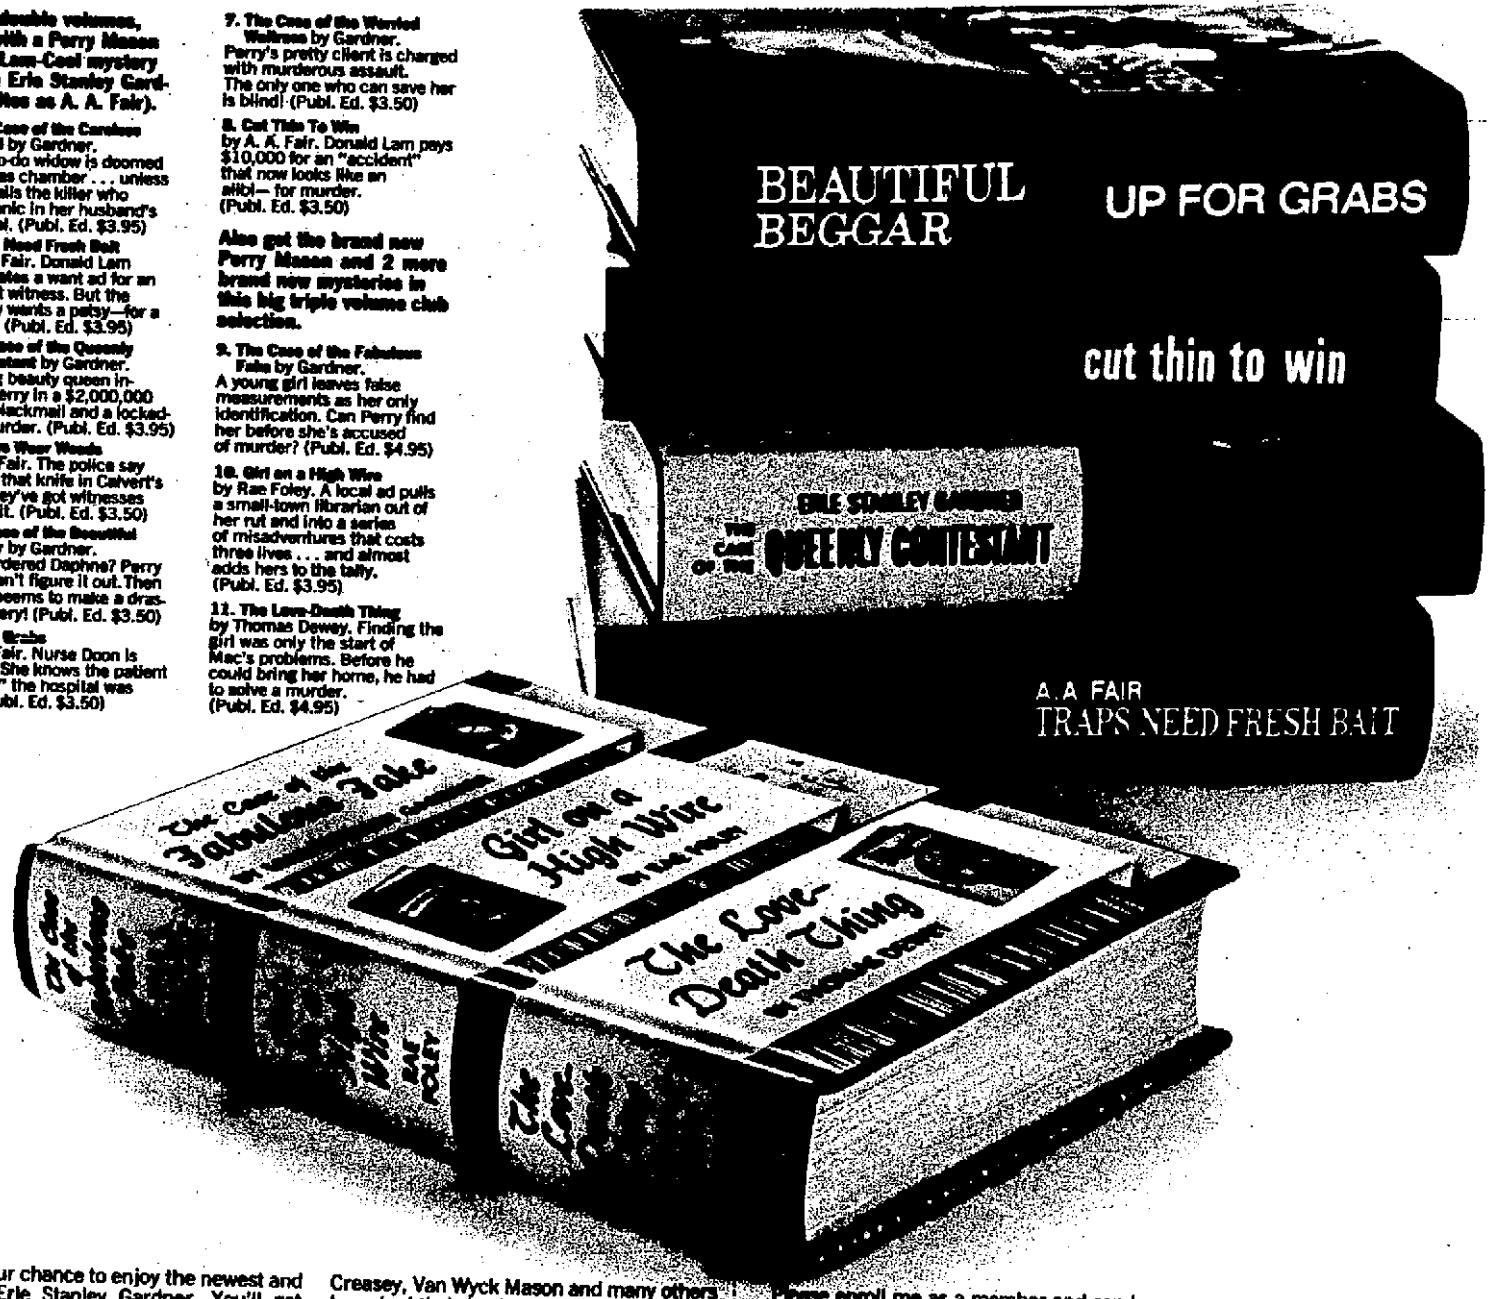

8. Cut Thin To Win by A. A. Fair. Donald Lam pays $10,000 for an "accident" that now looks like an alibi— for murder. (Publ. Ed. $3.50)

Also get the brand new Perry Mason and 2 more brand new mysteries in this big triple volume club selection.

9. The Case of the Fabulous Fake by Gardner. A young girl leaves false measurements as her only identification. Can Perry find her before she's accused of murder? (Publ. Ed. $4.95)

10. Girl on a High Wire by Rae Foley. A local ad pulls a small-town librarian out of her rut and into a series of misadventures that costs three lives . . . and almost adds hers to the tally. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

11. The Love-Death Thing by Thomas Dewey. Finding the girl was only the start of Mac's problems. Before he could bring her home, he had to solve a murder. (Publ. Ed. $4.95)

Here's your chance to enjoy the newest and best by Erle Stanley Gardner. You'll get Perry Mason's very latest case together with four more Perry Masons and four Donald Lam-Bertha Cool mysteries (by Gardner writing as A. A. Fair). And we'll add brand new spellbinders by Rae Foley and Thomas Dewey for good measure!

That's 11 full-length mysteries, bound into 5 convenient hard-bound volumes. In the publishers' original editions, these 11 mysteries cost $43.20. But as a new member, they're yours for $1 to introduce you to the advantages of membership in the Detective Book Club.

Out of the 300 or more new detective books that come out every year, the Club selects the very cream of the crop. Outstanding authors like Erle Stanley Gardner, Agatha Christie, Mignon G. Eberhart, John Creasey, Van Wyck Mason and many others have had their books selected by the Club. Many are members themselves.

Club selections are all newly published books. As a member, you can get three of them each month complete in one handsomely-bound triple volume (a $12.40 to $13.85 value in publishers' editions) for only $3.39, plus a few cents for mailing charges.

You don't have to take a volume each month. You receive a free copy of the Club's Preview which describes all coming selections and you may reject any volume before or after receiving it. You pay no money in advance, no membership fee. You may cancel membership at any time.

Send no money now. To get eleven top mysteries for the special new-member price of only $1, simply mail the coupon.

Please enroll me as a member and send me the four hard-bound volumes of Gardner/Fair thrillers, PLUS the 3-in-1 Club selection containing the latest Perry Mason and 2 other great mysteries. I enclose no money. Within a week after receiving my books, I will either return them and owe nothing or keep all five volumes, containing eleven first-rate mystery stories, for the new-member price of only $1.00 (plus a few cents mailing charges).

As a member, I am to receive advance descriptions of all future selections, but am not obligated to buy any. For each future triple volume I decide to keep, I will send you only $3.39 (plus a few cents mailing charges). I may reject any volume before or after I receive it and I may cancel my membership at any time. (Books shipped in U.S.A. only.)

Also get the brand new Perry Mason and 2 more brand new mysteries in this big triple volume club selection.

9. The Case of the Fabulous Fake by Gardner. A young girl leaves false measurements as her only identification. Can Perry find her before she's accused of murder? (Publ. Ed. $4.95)

10. Girl on a High Wire by Rae Foley. A local ad pulls a small-town librarian out of her rut and into a series of misadventures that costs three lives . . . and almost adds hers to the tally. (Publ. Ed. $3.95)

11. The Love-Death Thing by Thomas Dewey. Finding the girl was only the start of Mac's problems. Before he could bring her home, he had to solve a murder. (Publ. Ed. $4.95)

Here's your chance to enjoy the newest and best by Erle Stanley Gardner. You'll get Perry Mason's very latest case together with four more Perry Masons and four Donald Lam-Bertha Cool mysteries (by Gardner writing as A. A. Fair). And we'll add brand new spellbinders by Rae Foley and Thomas Dewey for good measure!

That's 11 full-length mysteries, bound into 5 convenient hard-bound volumes. In the publishers' original editions, these 11 mysteries cost $43.20. But as a new member, they're yours for $1 to introduce you to the advantages of membership in the Detective Book Club.

Out of the 300 or more new detective books that come out every year, the Club selects the very cream of the crop. Outstanding authors like Erle Stanley Gardner, Agatha Christie, Mignon G. Eberhart, John Creasey, Van Wyck Mason and many others have had their books selected by the Club. Many are members themselves.

Club selections are all newly published books. As a member, you can get three of them each month complete in one handsomely-bound triple volume (a $12.40 to $13.85 value in publishers' editions) for only $3.39, plus a few cents for mailing charges.

You don't have to take a volume each month. You receive a free copy of the Club's Preview which describes all coming selections and you may reject any volume before or after receiving it. You pay no money in advance, no membership fee. You may cancel membership at any time.

Send no money now. To get eleven top mysteries for the special new-member price of only $1, simply mail the coupon.

Please enroll me as a member and send me the four hard-bound volumes of Gardner/Fair thrillers, PLUS the 3-in-1 Club selection containing the latest Perry Mason and 2 other great mysteries. I enclose no money. Within a week after receiving my books, I will either return them and owe nothing or keep all five volumes, containing eleven first-rate mystery stories, for the new-member price of only $1.00 (plus a few cents mailing charges).

As a member, I am to receive advance descriptions of all future selections, but am not obligated to buy any. For each future triple volume I decide to keep, I will send you only $3.39 (plus a few cents mailing charges). I may reject any volume before or after I receive it and I may cancel my membership at any time. (Books shipped in U.S.A. only.)

IN THE NEAR FUTURE

AN EXPERT PREDICTS.....

ALL CARS WILL COME EQUIPPED WITH SO MANY NEW SAFETY FEATURES.....

THAT FATALITIES COULD BE REDUCED BY 50 PER CENT!

WHY NOT 100 PER CENT?

SO IT'S SOMETHING! UP UNTIL A FEW YEARS AGO THERE WERE NO SAFETY DEVICES AT ALL!

IT'S BEEN MURDER!

RIGHT! BUT I STILL THINK THEY'RE APPROACHING 100 PER CENT SAFETY FROM THE WRONG ANGLE....

WHAT WOULD YOU SUGGEST, PETER?

THEY'RE OVERLOOKING THE MOST DANGEROUS THING IN A CAR.....

THE NUT BEHIND THE WHEEL!

I LOVE SNOW.

I HATE IT.

I WISH IT WOULD SNOW.

I DON'T.

I AM GOING TO USE THE POWER OF WISHFUL THINKING.

I WISH IT WOULD SNOW, I WISH IT WOULD SNOW, I WISH IT WOULD SNOW

MAKE IT SNOW, SNOW, SNOW, SNOW, MAKE IT SNOW, SNOW, SNOW...

LET IT SNOW, SNOW, SNOW, SNOW, SNOW, SNOW

I'M ON THE RIGHT TRACK... MAKE IT SNOW, MAKE IT SNOW, SNOW, SNOW, SNOW, SNOW

OH! REALLY, EB! YOU'VE GOT A MEMORY LIKE A SIEVE!

FRESH BREAD

I DELIBERATELY MADE A SPECIAL POINT OF REMINDING YOU TO GET SOME TOMATOES, YET THAT'S THE ONE THING YOU FORGOT TO BUY!

I DIDN'T FORGET THEM!

WELL, THEY'RE NOT HERE!

THEN I MUST HAVE LEFT THEM ON THE COUNTER AT THE STORE. I'LL GO GET THEM

DON'T BOTHER NOW... I'LL JUST HAVE TO OPEN A CAN...

IT'S NO TROUBLE... I'VE GOT TO GO BACK ANYWAY

I FORGOT THE CAR!

AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

IN THE DIMLY LIT CABIN OF GENJI AIRLINES' TOKYO FLIGHT, THE PASSENGERS ARE UNAWARE THAT A HIJACKER HAS ASSUMED COMMAND.

CAPTAIN NOMURA HAS ORDERED THE COCKPIT DOOR UNLOCKED.

CAPTAIN, WE ARE DISHONORED! TO SURRENDER OUR AIRCRAFT TO SOME FANATIC IS DISGRACE!

HE THREATENS TO KILL THE STEWARDESSES AT ONCE—AND HE HAS A GRENADE.

FIFTY ODD PEOPLE ABOARD—ALL, MY RESPONSIBILITY. IF THE PLANE WERE TO SURVIVE THE EXPLOSION, THERE WOULD BE INSTANT DEPRESSURIZATION. AT THIRTY THOUSAND FEET, HOW MANY WOULD LIVE?

GENTLY, CASUALLY, BIRD! THESE ESTABLISHMENT SPECIMENS WILL BE WIDE AWAKE SOON ENOUGH, I ASSURE YOU.

SO SORRY, PLEASE.

WHU...? WAS I DREAMING OR DID THAT YOUNG MAN HAVE A GUN AT THE STEWARDESS'S BACK? SHE WAS TRYING TO TELL ME—A HIJACKER!

NOBODY ABOUT TO TRY ANYTHING RASH? GOOD! CAPTAIN, SWITCH ON THE CABIN SPEAKERS. I HAVE AN ANNOUNCEMENT TO MAKE.

LISTEN TO ME OUT THERE, YOU MIDDLE-CLASS SWINE. THIS PLANE IS GOING TO MAKE A STOP AT CANTON, PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA!

YOU'LL BE SAFE ENOUGH, SO LONG AS YOU BEHAVE—WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE WAR CRIMINAL ABOARD!

BIG MAN

I JUST CAN'T WAIT T' SEE TINY TOM AND TALK ABOUT THE MOB SCENE AT HIS POP'S DINER LAST NIGHT! I GUESS NOW THAT FOLKS'VE LEARNED ABOUT HOW GREAT THE MIDASBURGER'S TASTE, THEY'LL GO RIGHT ON BUYIN' 'EM BY THE SACKFUL!!

"HATH NOT THE POTTER POWER OVER THE CLAY, OF THE SAME LUMP TO MAKE ONE VESSEL UNTO HONOR, AND ANOTHER UNTO DISHONOR?"

THE NEW TESTAMENT

TINY TOM DIDN'T SHOW THIS MORNING! YOU GUESS HE'S SICK OR SOMETHIN'?

IT'S THE FIRST TIME'S HE'S BEEN ABSENT THIS YEAR, ANNIE!

HE PROB'BLY STAYED HOME T' HELP HIS POP PREPARE FOR THE RUSH O' CUSTOMERS! LOOKS LIKE MR. MIDAS'LL HAVE T' HIRE MORE HELP T' HANDLE THE CROWDS!

TINY TOM!! WHAT'S EATIN' YOU? HOW COME YOU'RE NOT HAPPY LIKE THE SON O' A SUCCESSFUL RESTAURANT MAN'S S'POSED T' BE??

SOMETHING HAPPENED AFTER YOU LEFT, ANNIE!

I FIGGERED YOU AN' YOUR POP'D HEAD RIGHT FOR BED, SEEIN' YOU WAS BOTH BUSHED FROM ALL THE BUSINESS YOU DID!

SIMON SLUMLARD... HE OWNS THE BUILDING WE'RE IN... DROPPED IN AND TOLD MY POP THAT INSTEAD OF INCREASING THE RENT... HE'S WILLING TO SHARE IN THE PROFITS!

THAT COULD BE A GOOD DEAL...

IT COULD BE, BUT IT ISN'T! HE WANTS 50-50 OF THE FIRST HUNDRED, AND THEN ...80-20 OF THE REST... WITH HIM GETTING THE 80%!

HE'S NOTHIN' BUT A CROOK!! HE CAN'T GET AWAY WITH A DIRTY DEAL LIKE THAT...

YES, HE CAN, LITTLE BIGMOUTH! AND I'LL MAKE BOOK ON IT!

WHO'RE YOU... AND WHAT GIVES YOU THE RIGHT T' BUTT IN?

I'M TRIGGER TREAT AN' IN THIS PAD I'M KNOWN AS "THE ENFORCER!" NOW IF YA WANT T' STAY HEALTHY, YOU BUTT OUT AN' GO HOME!

MAKE ME, YOU CHEAP LI'L HOOD...

ANNIE, PLEASE! DON'T MAKE ANY MORE TROUBLE FOR ME THAN I'VE GOT NOW!! EXCUSE HER, TRIGGER TREAT ...SHE'S ONLY AN IMPETUOUS CHILD!

I'M A PRETTY IMPETUOUS KID MYSELF, MIDAS! ONLY WHEN I "IMPET"... IT'S WITH THE BUSINESS END O' A SHIV!! MY BOSS, SIMON SLUMLARD, IS KINDA IMPATIENT WAITIN' FOR YOUR ANSWER T' HIS GENEROUS OFFER! WHAT'S IT GONNA BE... SUCKER!!?
